Calcutta, March 9, 1908

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs., on Thursday, the 12th March 1908, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

The chief feature in the meteorological conditions of the past week was an abnormal pressure distribution favouring cool dry winds over the greater part of northern India. The humidity registered was exceedingly low; Simla and Karachi recorded only 5 per cent. of saturation and Rajkot 4 per cent. and several other stations less than 10 per cent. on different days during the week. A local disturbance gave light precipitation in Kashmir on the 6th and 7th and a hailstorm at Peshawar on the 6th. From the 7th until the 11th weather was dry over the whole Indian region and then unsettled conditions entered from the west and gave light rain in Baluchistan on the 11th and light snowfall in Kashmir on the 12th. On the 12th an area of low pressure consequent on these unsettled conditions was shown over the United Provinces, and this by causing southerly winds at the head of the Bay produced a large increase of humidity and the appearance of cloud over the greater part of north-east India.

Burma.—Skies were clear or only lightly clouded and temperature was approximately normal.

North-east India including Orissa.—Skies were almost clear for the greater part of the week, but on the 12th cloud appeared throughout the province of Bengal. Up to the 9th temperature was normal or in excess, the excess being shown chiefly in the day time; a fall took place on the 10th, and on the 11th mean temperature was in general defect but it rose again on the next day.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Only a few stations reported cloud. Weather was warmer than usual on the 6th, but a cold wave advancing eastward caused a gradual fall of temperature and its effects were shown up to the 12th, when temperature rose generally and became nearly normal.

North-west India.—Skies were clear in the plains except for the temporary appearance of cloud in parts of the division but were cloudy throughout the week in Kashmir and on the 10th and 11th in Baluchistan. A cold wave brought unusually low temperatures on the 6th to the extreme west across the division, then advancing eastward caused temperature to be below normal throughout north-west India on the remaining days of the week.

The Peninsula.—Skies were clear or lightly clouded and temperature was approximately normal.

No precipitation of any importance was received during the past week. For the whole period from the 29th November to the 12th March rainfall is 20 per cent. or more in defect in Assam, the Punjab, Kashmir, Baluchistan, Rajputana, Central India, Berar, the Central Provinces (west), the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad (south) and Madras (south-east), and either practically normal or in excess elsewhere.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 7th March 1908.

Burma.—Nearly half an inch of rain fell in Mergui and a small amount in Tavoy. There was no rain elsewhere. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice are approaching completion in three districts. Transplanting of spring rice has been completed in parts of Upper Burma and miscellaneous spring crops are being gathered in places. The standing crops in the Upper Provinces remain generally fair. The price of unhusked rice has risen in one; and has fallen in three districts.

Eastern Bengal and Assam.—Rainfall nil except in Dinajpur and Lakhimpur. Prospects of standing crops are generally fair. Preparation of land for early rice and jute and pruning, hoeing and manuring of tea are in progress. Pressing of sugarcane and gathering of mustard are finished in places. Sowing of potato is going on in the Khasi and Jaintia hills. Prices of common rice have risen in seven districts; and have fallen in one only. No scarcity is apprehended at present.

Bengal.—There was a slight fall of rain in parts of Bihar. Such spring crops as could be sown are doing well except in the Presidency Division. The prospects of the mango crop are good. The dalua rice in Balasore is suffering for want of rain. There is still some sugarcane-pressing going on and the planting of the new crop is in full swing. The spring harvest is in progress. Stocks are reported insufficient in Nadia, Murshidabad, Balasore and Palamau. Scarcity is apprehended in Nadia, Hazaribagh and later on in Jessore. Prices throughout the Province tend to fall. Fodder and water are reported to be insufficient in parts of Burdwan, Murshidabad and Balasore. The numbers on test-works and in receipt of gratuitous relief have declined. The test-works in Bankura, Ranchi and Orissa were attended by 3,668 persons and gratuitous relief was given to 15,646 persons in Orissa and 75 in Shahabad.

United Provinces.—Rain fell in 24 districts exceeding $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in Sitapur, Gonda, Basti and Gorakhpur. More rain is needed in most districts for later sown crops. Prices have risen in three; and have fallen in twenty districts; the fall being most marked in the south-eastern districts. Markets are well supplied. Importation though still extensive is slackening. Prospects of spring crops are generally good. Westerly winds have done some damage and crops have suffered from hail in parts of two districts. Peas, sarson and in places barley and arhar are being harvested. Opium is being extracted in the eastern districts. The condition of agricultural stock is fair but cattle are suffering in places from hard work. Fodder is dear but pasturage has improved.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows:—Harvesting of early spring crops has not yet affected numbers on relief which continue to rise. The condition of the people on relief is fair. Emaciation has been more frequently noticed but is not common. Slight immigration from Native States into Agra and Banda is reported and continued colonial emigration from Basti. There is no general wandering and poor houses show few inmates. Offences against property have increased. Relief works are in progress in eighteen and test works in ten districts. Aided works have been started in twenty-five districts and show a considerable expansion. In the Balrampur estates 21,850 are on works; and 4,079 on gratuitous relief. The numbers on Government relief are:—workers on public works 639,260; aided works 63,828; test works 5,564; dependants on works 269,021; on gratuitous relief 340,774; in poor houses 4,000; total 1,323,147. The seven largest total figures are:—Bahraich 204,307; Gonda (excluding Balrampur estates) 155,086; Mirzapur (with Family Domains) 146,532; Banda 110,466; Kheri 82,722; Jalaun 81,546; Allahabad 80,529; Sitapur 64,708; and Jaunpur 53,461. Prices:—Almora and Dehra Dun $8\frac{1}{4}$; Mirzapur $7\frac{1}{4}$ to 8; and elsewhere 9 to 11 seers per rupee.

Punjab.—Slight rain has fallen in Rawalpindi and parts of Mianwali. Prices of food grains are rising in 6; and falling in 5 districts but are still generally at or about scarcity rates except in Multan. Sowings of extra spring crops and ploughings for the next autumn crops are in progress. Sugarcane is being sown in Ambala, Ludhiana and parts of Rohtak, Ferozepore and Sialkot. The condition of irrigated crops is good to average and of unirrigated average to poor. The opium crop is average in Lahore and Amritsar. Rain is badly wanted. Crops are withering for want of rain and heavy winds in Gurgaon, Lahore, Sialkot and Mianwali. Rats are damaging crops in parts of Lahore. Fodder is scarce in Delhi, Sialkot, Gujranwala, Mianwali, Lyallpur, Jhang, Multan and in parts of Gurgaon, Ambala, Lahore, Shahpur and Rawalpindi; it is also getting scarce in Rohtak. Sugarcane is being used as fodder in parts of Sialkot and leaves of trees in parts of Gurgaon and Lahore. The condition of cattle is generally good to fair. Cattle are weak from overwork in Jullundur and for want of fodder in Sialkot. The water supply canal was closed during the week in Delhi and is running by rotational closures in Lyallpur. The canal water supply is badly wanted in many districts. 1,219 persons attended the famine test works in the Gurgaon tehsil against 1,321 last week.

North-West Frontier Province.—Showers fell all over the Province except in Dera Ismail Khan. More rain is required for unirrigated crops. The condition of standing crops is generally good. Oilseed and gram crops in Dera Ismail Khan have been damaged by cold winds. Pressing of sugarcane still continues. Extra spring sowings are in progress. The water supply in canals is ample. Fodder is sufficient. Cattle are generally in good condition except in some villages in the Dera tehsil. The health of the people is good. Prices are falling. Wheat is selling from 10½ to 13½; gram 11½ to 14; maize 14½ to 19½; and bajra 14 to 15 seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Rain nil. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat is selling from 7½ to 14; and maize from 9 to 21 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is fair in irrigated but poor in other parts. Fodder is insufficient in Jasmirgarh, Udhampur, Raubir-singhpura, Bhimber, Samba, Ramban, Kathua, Kotli, Mirpur and Jammu tehsil. Rain is badly wanted for standing crops.

Kashmir.—The weather is bright. Prices are stationary.

Rajputana.—No rain fell during the week. Harvesting of spring crops has commenced in Jhalawar. Standing crops continue in good condition and prospects of the spring crops are generally favourable. The condition of cattle is good except in isolated parts. The fodder supply is said to be somewhat deficient in Tonk; but elsewhere there are no apprehensions on this score at present. Food stocks are being imported where necessary. Prices have risen by 1 seer in Tonk and Bharatpur; and by lesser amounts in five other States; and have fallen in four and in the Hill Tracts of Mewar. There is no distress at present.

Central India.—Rain nil. Harvesting of spring crops has commenced in most Agencies. Prospects are fair to good, but slight damage by frost is reported in several parts. Agricultural stock is fair to good except in parts of Gwalior and Bhopawar. Fodder and water are becoming scarce in a few parganas of Gwalior, insufficient in parts of Indore; indifferent in Bhopal; and sufficient elsewhere. Prices of food grains continue high. Extraction of opium has commenced.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows:—Considerable distress prevails throughout Baghelkhand and in that portion of the Bundelkhand Agency lying north of the Jhansi Sutna road; and also in the Jhabua State and the Manpur Pergana in the Bhopawar Agency. Gratuitous relief has commenced in Indore but figures have not yet been furnished. Very little wandering or emaciation is seen or reported. The general health and condition of the people are satisfactory. Prices are high. Prospects of the mowha and mango crops are good and this may reduce the numbers on relief. The numbers on relief are:—Rewa—on works 95,500; on gratuitous relief 14,500. In the rest of the Baghelkhand Agency—on works 15,000; on gratuitous relief 1,000; total for the Agency 126,000. In the Bundelkhand Agency—on works 8,000; on gratuitous relief 5,000; total 13,000. In the Bhopawar Agency—Manpur 1,000; Jhabua 15,000; total 16,000; grand total 155,000. The numbers have decreased in Datia and Ajaigarh. Prices:—Bhopawar 8 to 14; Datia 10½; Sarila 8½; Samthar 10; and Ajaigarh 8½ seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—No rain fell during the week. Harvesting of spring crops is in full swing throughout the Provinces. The condition of standing crops is fair in Saugor, Seoni, Betul and Akola; and generally good elsewhere. Preparation of land for autumn sowings and construction of field embankments are in progress. Sugarcane pressing and sowing are almost completed in Betul; and are in progress in Bhandara. Water is sufficient everywhere except in some parts of Hoshangabad. Fodder is getting scarce in Damoh and parts of Betul and is dear or insufficient in Narsinghpur, Hoshangabad and the Pusad taluk of the Yeotmal district. Some deterioration in the condition of cattle is reported from Betul. There is a marked downward movement in the prices of all grains in Saugor, Damoh and Betul. Wheat fell by ½ seer in Saugor, by 1½ seers in Damoh and by ¾ seer in Betul; while it became dearer in Narsinghpur by ½ seer. In the Chhattisgarh district the price of rice fell by ½ to 1 seer per rupee; juar rose by ½ seer in Chhindwara. The price of gram became cheaper in seven districts and the fall ranges from ½ seer to 2 seers. In the remaining districts prices remained stationary or fluctuated slightly exhibiting a tendency to fall.

Feudatory States.—Harvesting of spring crops continues. Prospects are unfavourable in Jashpur; elsewhere they are generally good. Wheat is in excellent condition in Chhuikhadan. Fodder and water are adequate but fodder is scarce in the open tract of the Kawardha State where the rice crop has failed. Prices remained stationary except in Raj-Nandgaon where wheat, rice and kodon fell by $\frac{1}{4}$ to 2 seers per rupee.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows:—Distress is decreasing slightly in Damoh and Jubbulpore owing to the commencement of harvest operations which have caused a fall in the number on works in Damoh. Elsewhere the situation remains unchanged. Relief measures are generally adequate and employment on ordinary and takavi works is sufficient. Prospects of standing crops are good. The condition of the people is fair. The public health is good. Fodder is generally sufficient but scarce and dear in Damoh. The water supply is sufficient. A general fall of prices has taken place in the Jubbulpore division. Wheat fell $1\frac{1}{4}$ seers and gram 2 seers in Damoh. Wandering is insignificant. A kitchen has been started in the Jubbulpore district for the relief of dependants of Central India immigrants. The numbers on relief are:—on village works 3,172; weavers on relief 2,185; on gratuitous relief 10,581, total 15,938.

Bombay.—Standing spring crops are withering for want of moisture in parts of Thar and Parkar, Ahmedabad, the Panch Mahals, and East Khandesh; elsewhere they are in good condition, except for slight damage by winds in parts of Sukkur and the Upper Sind Frontier. Harvesting of spring crops continues in parts of Sind, Gujarat, Colaba, Kanara, the Deccan, the Karnatak, Kathiawar, Baroda, Palanpur, and Cutch. Threshing is in progress in parts of Surat, Thana, Khandesh, Nasik, Baroda and Mahi Kantha. Cotton picking continues in parts of Gujarat, West Khandesh, the Karnatak, Baroda, Kathiawar and Cutch. Lands are being prepared for next season in parts of Karachi, Hyderabad, Kaira, the Konkan, the Deccan, the Karnatak and Cutch. The supply of fodder is adequate except in parts of Hyderabad, Ahmedabad, Kaira, East Khandesh and Baroda. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition and sufficient except in parts of Ahmednagar, Poona, Sholapur and Cutch. The supply of drinking water is sufficient except in parts of Ahmednagar and Sholapur. Water for irrigation is insufficient in parts of Surat, the Deccan, and Kathiawar. The quantity of foodgrains purchasable per rupee is in Sind 37 to 47 per cent.; in Gujarat 20 to 68 per cent.; in the Konkan 18 to 33 per cent.; in the Deccan 23 to 51 per cent.; and in the Karnatak 35 to 57 per cent less than the normal. Stocks of grain are generally adequate. The demand for labour is generally sufficient and wages are normal. Emigration from Ahmednagar and Bijapur continues. The cultivating and labouring classes are in fair condition. Eight test works are in progress in the Panch Mahals with 1,812 persons on relief on the last day of the week ending the 29th February. 90 were relieved on forest works in West Khandesh during the week ending 3rd March.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. The spring harvest continues in parts. Late rice weedings continue in certain tracts. Lands are being prepared for monsoon sowings. Water scarcity is reported in 17 taluks and fodder scarcity in 19. Prices:—wheat $5\frac{1}{4}$; coarse rice $6\frac{1}{4}$; and juar 12 seers per rupee. Yellow juar is selling in Hyderabad City at $12\frac{1}{2}$ seers per rupee, the highest price in districts being 9 seers in two taluks.

Mysore.—Prices of food grains are slightly fluctuating. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects of the season are generally good. Cattle are healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Threshing of rice continues. Prices of food grains are normal. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Harvest prospects are good.

Madras.—No rain fell during the week. Irrigation supplies are insufficient in parts of all districts, except Godavari, Guntur, Cuddapah, Chingleput, Tinnevely, Malabar, South Canara and the Nilgiris. Ploughing, sowing, weeding and transplanting are in progress in parts. Standing crops are generally fair but some in parts of Bellary, Chingleput, North Arcot, Tanjore and Madura have withered or are withering. Harvests continue with out-turn poor to normal. Pasture is sufficient except in parts of the Circars, the Deccan, North Arcot, Salem, Tanjore, Madura and South Canara. Fodder is scanty in parts of the Circars, Nellore and Tanjore. The condition of cattle is generally good. The price of rice is stationary in thirteen districts; has fallen in five; and has risen in five. The prices of millets have fluctuated as follows:—Ragi is stationary in ten districts; has fallen in six; and has risen in five. Cholam is stationary in five districts; has fallen in four; and has risen in five. Cumbu is stationary in six districts; has fallen in three; and has risen in four. The public health is generally good. Prospects are fair generally. The condition of the labouring classes is good and employment is procurable, except in parts of Ganjam. Prices are high but there is no present apprehension of distress anywhere, except in parts of the Berhampore taluk and the Ganjam division of the Ganjam district where arrangements have been made to start test works and poor houses. Grain stocks are generally sufficient.

(ii) Major Lamb's Summary of the conclusions of the Plague Commission.

(iii) The Journal of Hygiene, Volume 7, No. 6, December, 1907.

"No final report of the Plague Research Commission has yet been received, and its labours are not yet concluded. The above-mentioned papers are laid on the table."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS asked :—

"Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Resolutions of the successive provincial Conferences of the Central Provinces, giving expression to the dissatisfaction of the people of those provinces at the present system of annual assessment of the income tax ? In view of the general desire of the local public, will the Government be pleased to replace the existing system of assessment by the system of triennial assessments which prevailed in those provinces before ?"

The Hon'ble MR. BAKER replied :—

"The Government of India have noticed the Resolutions passed by the 1st and 3rd Provincial Conferences of the Central Provinces. A system of triennial assessments was formerly in force in the Central Provinces owing to the existence of the pandhri-tax, which was levied on petty traders and manufacturers whose incomes amounted to Rs. 250 a year or more. The large number of assesseees made it impracticable for the district staff to cope with the work which would have been entailed by annual assessments. On the abolition of that tax in 1902 it was decided, after a full experience of the operation of triennial assessments, to adopt the system of annual assessments contemplated by section 15 of the Income tax Act of 1886 and prevailing in other areas where that Act is in force. The former practice had the necessary consequence that assessments, owing to the fluctuating nature of many of the incomes assessed, fell unequally on the persons taxed, and the Government of India see no reason to revert to it."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS asked:—

"Is it true that an amendment of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act is contemplated by Government? If so, will Government be pleased, in consultation with the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, to remove the just grievances of the malguzars by amending the provisions relating to khudkast lands on the lines suggested in their memorials to the Local Government, as also section 61 of the Act which operates with unusual rigour on tenants in their relations with sub-tenants, as pointed out in the presidential speech delivered at the Jubbulpur Conference, held on 14th April, 1906?"

The Hon'ble MR. MILLER replied:—

"No proposals for the amendment of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act have been received by the Government of India, and it is understood that the Local Administration consider the amendment of the Land-revenue Act a matter of greater urgency. The Government of India have no doubt that when these Acts are amended all suggestions for their improvement will receive the most careful consideration from the Local Administration."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS asked:—

"In view of the pronounced desire of the people for a ~~provisional embargo~~ upon exports of food-grains from the country as a remedial measure in times of distress, will Government be pleased to consider if it would be desirable to temper, if only provisionally, its policy in these days of abnormal prices?"

The Hon'ble MR. MILLER replied:—

"The question raised by the Hon'ble Member is one which has been considered by the Government of India on every occasion on which this country has been threatened with serious famine, with all the care which its importance demands, and with full regard to the fact that interference with trade on such occasions would be in accordance with views which are widely and earnestly held by influential classes of the people. Not only has the policy to be followed been carefully considered at the beginning of periods of distress, when popular opinion, and not infrequently official opinion, was in favour of some measure of interference, but it has been impartially examined in the light of facts and of the experience gained during successive famines by the officers or Commissions appointed to report on the lessons to be learned; and there has been no difference of opinion as to what those lessons teach. The conclusion was arrived at in 1873 that 'nothing could justify recourse' to such a measure as the Hon'ble Member suggests 'unless it were a certainty or a reasonable probability that exports of food will so exhaust the resources of India as to render them incapable of affording the supplies which may be required for affected districts,' and all subsequent investigation has confirmed this view."

"During the thirty years which have passed since that time there has been a remarkable development of communications and of trade, and the experience of each successive famine has shown how greatly relief measures have been assisted and suffering has been mitigated by the freedom from restraint which has encouraged private enterprise to take advantage of the facilities offered to it. Interference would involve disorganisation of trade and discouragement of the agriculturist at the very time when it is essential to the welfare of the country that the producing and the distributing agencies alike should have every stimulus given to their activity. To mention only one result, a policy of placing an embargo on the export of food-grains would encourage that tendency to substitute non-food crops for food crops of which frequent complaint has been made in the vernacular Press, as a contributory cause of the present high prices. Interference with exports might produce at the beginning of a famine an artificial cheapness, but it is by no means certain that even this result would be attained to any material extent, and it is certain that the cheapness would not be permanent. The exports from India amount to but a small proportion of its production, and experience gives no warrant whatever for the supposition that the trade is unable to regulate them to the best advantage of the country. For example, the exports of wheat, which in a good year may be as much as fifteen or twenty million hundred weight, shrank in 1896-97 and 1897-98 to about two millions, while in 1900-01 the export trade practically ceased to exist, only 50,000 hundred weight leaving the country. In the case of rice the fluctuations are not so extraordinary, but they are very great; in a good year exports from the whole of India have been as high as forty-nine million hundred weight, in bad seasons they have fallen to less than thirty millions. The export trade encourages production and creates a reserve which can be drawn upon in time of scarcity—a reserve which, but for that encouragement, would not exist. The failure of the monsoon in India creates a demand for Burma rice at prices with which foreign countries cannot compete. In 1903-04 and 1904-05, when crops were generally good, Burma exported to foreign countries 33 and 38 million hundred weight of rice respectively, while India took only four and six millions. In 1906-07, when there was a demand from India, the exports to foreign countries fell below thirty millions, and the exports from Burma to India rose to sixteen millions; in the present year, judging from ten months' statistics, this feature of the trade will probably be still more marked. The course of the wheat trade in the present year may be referred to as a further illustration. During the early part of the year the trade was brisk, and continued to be so up to October, by which time it was evident that there would be severe scarcity in India. In November the exports were less than half of the average for that month in the three preceding years. In December the proportion was much lower, while in January only sixty thousand hundred weight were exported compared with a three years' average for that month of close on a million and a half.

"The policy which the Hon'ble Member apparently supports does not, it is understood, stop short at interference with exports from India. It extends to placing restrictions on exports from one State or Province or even from one district to another, and recommendations to that effect have been made not only by the public but by officers of Government impressed by the seriousness of the outlook, as for example in 1873, when the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal suggested the prohibition of the export of rice from that province. In a year like the present, when the deficiency of food supplies in the United Provinces is being met by imports from the surplus stock of Burma on the one side and the Punjab on the other,—the two provinces which contribute by far the largest share to the foreign export trade in rice and wheat respectively—it seems scarcely conceivable that there should be any advocates of a policy that would obstruct the trade to which these beneficial results are due. But experience shows that the demand for the regulation of exports does in fact extend to a demand for the enforcement of local restrictions, and to transferring from the trade to some official agency the responsibility of determining whether the circumstances of the country require the transport of grain from one local area to another. This is a responsibility which no Government would except in the last resort undertake.

"The Hon'ble Member correctly refers to prices as being now abnormally high. Prices are excessively high, and the Government of India are fully conscious of the distress caused by dearness of food and sympathise with the sufferers. But they have no doubt that the effect of interference with trade would only be to aggravate difficulties that must be faced and they adhere now to the policy which they have consistently adopted in the past in the presence of more serious calamities and at a time when they could not expect from the operations of trade the same measure of assistance in coping with scarcity that they now obtain."

The Hon'ble MR CHITNAVIS asked:—

"In view of the abnormal and general rise in prices during the past few years, will the Government be pleased to appoint a joint committee of officials and non-officials to inquire into the causes to which such rise is due with a view to the removal of such of them as may be capable of administrative treatment?"

The Hon'ble MR MILLER replied —

"The Government of India are well aware of the importance of the subject and have already had under their consideration the question of making enquiry into the causes of the present high range of prices, but have not yet come to any final decision in the matter. Should they decide that enquiry is advisable, they will gladly consider the Hon'ble Member's suggestions as to the appointment of a committee."

The Hon'ble MR CHITNAVIS asked —

"In order to relieve the distress of the middle classes, more or less encumbered with a large number of dependants, due to increased cost of living will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of further raising the assessable minimum under the Indian Income-tax Act to Rs 2,000 a year?"

The Hon'ble MR. BAKER replied —

"The Government of India are not prepared to entertain the suggestion embodied in the Hon'ble Member's question."

WHIPPING (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Hon'ble SIR HARVEY ADAMSON moved for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Whipping Act, 1864, and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. He said —

"In the progress of public opinion the infliction of whipping as a judicial punishment comes to be regarded with ever increasing disfavour. The object of this Bill is to mitigate the severity of the Whipping Act and to bring it into line with public opinion of the present day. In India the time has not arrived when whipping as a judicial punishment can be altogether dispensed with. Indeed, that stage has not yet been reached in Western countries. In England whipping is still retained as a punishment in the case of adults for certain forms of robbery with violence such as garrotting and in the case of juveniles for all indictable offences other than homicide. I am far from suggesting that what is suitable for England must necessarily be suitable for India. There could be no greater mistake than to adopt such a principle indiscriminately as a basis for legislation. But human nature is pretty much the same throughout the world, and the efficacy of whipping as a punishment is essentially a question of human nature. What has been done in England may therefore in this case be a useful guide as to what ought to be done in India. In England a hundred years ago, whipping was inflicted for many offences. Its use has gradually dwindled down to the proportions which I have stated, without in any way prejudicing the safety of the community. Experience has shown that for most offences which were formerly punished with whipping a less revolting penalty is more efficacious. The history of Indian jails tends to the same conclusion. I can well remember that when I first arrived in India thirty years ago, whipping of a very severe nature was freely resorted to in jails as a punishment for very trivial offences. It is now inflicted as a jail punishment on rare occasions and only for serious offences. Yet the discipline of Indian jails is much better now than it was thirty years ago. I must not be misunderstood as implying that, as regards the frequency and barbarity of corporal punishment, there is any similitude between India of the present day and England of a hundred years ago. On the contrary, the Whipping Act of 1864, as it now stands, is on the whole a very humane Act. But as years advance public opinion advances, and humane on the whole though the Act may be, we think that the time has now arrived when it should be laid on the legislative anvil with a view to being moulded into what, in the light of Eastern and Western experience, is a closer conformity to the trend of public opinion and the requirements of the present day.

"There is one point, however, in respect of which there is a complete difference between England and India. I refer to the system of imprisonment in jails. In England all short-term sentences are of the nature of solitary confinement. The prisoner is isolated and has no opportunity of associating with his fellow-prisoners. In India, on the contrary, the system is one of association. The prisoner works in a gang and associates day and night with other prisoners. The prisoner in India is thus liable to evil contamination from which in England he is free. That this is a defect in the Indian system of prison administration is generally admitted. But it is a defect that cannot be immediately cured. Much has been done in recent years to provide cellular accommodation in jails, so as to save prisoners from the deteriorating influence of their more hardened fellow-convicts. But this is a work which requires a long time to complete, and the expenditure of an immense amount of money, and the position at present is that in Indian jails the complete segregation of prisoners is impossible. This condition renders it undesirable to proceed to the abolition of whipping as a judicial punishment to the same extent as has been done in England. It is better to whip a casual thief than to submit him to prison associations from which he will probably emerge as a hardened thief.

"It would of course be possible to carry this line of argument too far. It might be contended that for similar reasons it is better to whip all unhardened offenders than to imprison them. Such a course is clearly inadmissible. It would shock the public conscience and for obvious reasons is undesirable. We are convinced that whipping should be restricted to offences of a degrading nature, and that it never should be administered where it is likely to outrage self-respect. We also think that it is an unsuitable punishment for any offence that is not of an active and daring character. For instance, we regard whipping as an appropriate punishment for casual and ordinary theft, but as an inappropriate punishment for receiving stolen property or for the special class of theft which is defined in the Penal Code as theft by a clerk or servant. For these reasons the Bill amends section 2 of the Whipping Act by excluding from whipping the offences of theft by a clerk or servant, extortion by threat, extortion by putting a person in fear of accusation, dishonestly receiving stolen property and dishonestly receiving property acquired in the commission of dacoity.

"We propose to repeal section 3 of the Act which permits whipping as an additional punishment in the case of second convictions of offences which are punishable under section 2 with whipping as a sole alternative penalty. We think that when in cases of this kind the Magistrate has come to the conclusion that the offence calls for a punishment of imprisonment nothing is gained by adding whipping to the sentence. I may observe that the repeal of this section will not prohibit the Magistrate from awarding whipping in lieu of imprisonment on second convictions of offences specified in section 2 as amended. I must admit that the proposed repeal of this section has not been cordially accepted by some Local Governments. It is urged that its repeal will weaken to an undesirable extent the hands of the authorities in the suppression of crimes against property. But it appears to us that this argument could be used against any mitigation of the Whipping Act, and that the history of whipping as a punishment and its influence on crime does not support the contention.

"The next point that I am to mention is one in respect of which I do not anticipate that there will be much difference of opinion. Whipping is a punishment that is peculiarly suited to brutal, cruel and sordid offences involving personal violence. The circumstances of each country must of course determine what crimes of this nature are of such prevalence as to call for this form of punishment. Naturally they will vary in different countries. In England, as I have stated, robbery with violence is the type of crime against which the public require a special protection, and the punishment awardable for crimes of this nature is whipping combined with imprisonment for either first or subsequent offences. In India the most prevalent crimes of a brutal, cruel and sordid nature, against which special protection appears to be desirable, are rape, robbery with hurt, and dacoity. These and these alone we have included in this category. The Bill follows the analogy of English law and permits a combination of whipping with imprisonment whether on first or on subsequent conviction. The provision will be found in clause 3 of the Bill. The substitution of this clause for section 4 of the Act, while giving to society the protection of an enhanced penalty in the case of those brutal and daring crimes, abolishes whipping on second conviction for a large number of offences, of which the chief are false evidence, false charges of offences, assault with intent to outrage modesty, unnatural offences, habitual dealing in stolen property, and forgery.

"In respect of juvenile offenders the Bill alters the present law by mitigating the severity of whipping. It limits the punishment to fifteen stripes instead of thirty, and it enables the Governor General in Council to exclude juveniles from whipping by notification for such offences falling under the Indian Penal Code as he may think fit.

"Finally the Bill restricts the power of whipping to first class Magistrates instead of as at present to first class Magistrates and specially empowered second class Magistrates.

"I need scarcely say that in no case under the Bill is whipping a compulsory punishment. Wherever it may be inflicted, it is optional, at the discretion of the Magistrate.

"I think that public opinion in India regards whipping as a necessary and proper punishment for certain classes of offences, but as an unsuitable punishment for members of the respectable and educated classes. I am not disposed to quarrel with this view. It is but an expression of what I have already said, that whipping should never be inflicted where it is likely to outrage self-respect. But it is impossible to define by law the classes of people who may be whipped. This must be left to the good sense of the Magistracy, supplemented it may be by such general instructions as High Courts may deem fit to issue.

"The net result of the amendments contained in the Bill is that the power of whipping is confined to first class Magistrates and that in respect of adults whipping is retained as a sole punishment for ordinary thefts and kindred offences of an active and daring character, and as a sole or combined punishment for a very limited number of offences of violence of a brutal and sordid nature, while in respect of juveniles it is retained in a less severe form. I trust that the Bill will be found to conform with public opinion in India, and that its lenity will not render the law less capable of suppressing crime."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR HARVEY ADAMSON introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble SIR HARVEY ADAMSON moved that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit.

The motion was put and agreed to.

CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bala Richards: "My Lord, on the occasion six months ago, when I had the honour of introducing this Bill in Council, I explained at some length the general scheme of arrangement and the nature of the most important of the changes which it seeks to effect in the existing law. I do not propose to repeat those observations today, they will be found reported in the chronicles of this Council, and it is the less necessary to recall them because the Bill has been generally accepted by the public and the legal profession and is not opposed in this Council. It will be recollected that this Bill departs from the arrangement of former Codes in that it makes a division between clauses and rules, the former consisting of the general principles of procedure and of those provisions which must necessarily be uniform throughout India, the latter containing provisions of minor importance which may properly be varied to suit local conditions, and that as a corollary to that division, there is a power given to High Courts, subject to the advice of Rule Committees, to alter the rules and to make new rules to cure defects or to meet cases which are now unprovided for. This proposal has met with the almost unanimous approval of Local Governments and of High Courts and there appears to be a general consensus of opinion that it is a change of procedure which is likely to have beneficial results. The amendments on other points have also been commonly accepted. It is impossible that in regard to the details of procedure there should be complete agreement, but the great majority of our critics are in favour of the main changes that are proposed."

"Since the Bill was introduced in this Council it has been subjected to a careful re-examination and many minor amendments have been introduced. To the more important of these attention is called in the Report of the Select Committee, and I do not think that I can with advantage refer to them further on the present occasion. The forms in the Schedule were not in a complete state when the Bill was first before Council, but they have since been amended and brought up to date and they are now a valuable addition to the Bill. The Government are much indebted to our Hon'ble Colleague Mr. Ismay for the trouble he has taken over this matter, and they desire also to express their thanks to Mr. Bakewell of Madras who has been good enough to allow them to make use of some of the forms in his book on Mortgages."

"If the motion which I shall presently make is carried, I desire to move the amendments which stand in my name on the notice-paper, they are more or less of a formal character and do not affect the substance of the Bill."

"A good many of our critics have drawn attention to the question of the service of process—a question to which I referred in introducing this Bill. Beyond doubt the abuses which are inherent in our present system demand prompt remedy, but reform in this matter can hardly be effected by legislation, it is for Local Governments rather than the Legislature to effect an improvement. The Bill gives power to authorise service by the post, and that is an experiment which may be thought worth trial in selected areas. The whole subject is obviously one of difficulty, but I cannot think that improvement is impossible."

"Another matter to which attention was called by the Report of the Simla Committee, but which finds no place in the Bill, is the amendment in regard to charities proposed in that Committee by our Hon'ble Colleague Dr. Rashbehary Ghose. He desired to add to clause 92 a proviso empowering persons interested in any charity to apply summarily for an account of the receipts and expenditure of the funds of the charity. Under the clause as it stands, as under the existing law, any interested person, with the sanction of the Advocate General, can institute a suit against the trustees of a charity and in that suit can obtain an order for accounts, but our Hon'ble Colleague points out that there are difficulties in the way of instituting suits and that it is not easy to know whether there has been such a breach of trust as will found a suit, unless some accounts are available for inquiry. He argues that trustees under the present law are bound to keep and to render accounts, and that his amendment merely provides a means of obtaining expeditiously that which the law already gives by the cumbrous process of a suit. The Simla Committee expressed some sympathy with the general object of this proposal, but they pointed out that the matter was one for the communities interested and that until it had been fully discussed by the leaders of those communities and until their views were before this Council, it was not advisable to legislate. Since that time Dr. Rashbehary Ghose's amendment has been circulated as part of the Report and it cannot be denied that it has elicited a considerable amount of support; on the other hand, it equally cannot be denied that the amendment would introduce a considerable change in the law of trusts and in the practice at present prevailing in regard to those trusts; and that it has not yet received adequate publicity. The Government of India have carefully considered the proposal and they agree with the Simla Committee that it is one of which the communities interested must have the fullest opportunity for discussion and on which their views must be obtained before it is sanctioned: they agree therefore with the Committee in thinking that the amendment should not find a place in the Bill. But in view of the public interest which has been taken in the matter they suggest that the amendment should be introduced as a separate Bill. If that meets with the views of our Hon'ble Colleague, Dr. Rashbehary Ghose, and he will introduce the Bill, the Government are willing to accept a motion for leave to introduce it and to have it published and circulated for opinions. It must of course be understood that the Government give this assent, as lawyers say, 'without prejudice,' in other words, that they do not commit themselves to approval or disapproval of the proposal; they reserve their opinion until they have before them the views of the communities concerned.

" My Lord, I move that the Report be taken into consideration."

● The Hon'ble MR. ISMAY said:—" My Lord, the Bill now before the Council has met with a favourable reception both from lawyers and from the general public. There are no doubt a few matters involving questions of principle in regard to which there must necessarily be a difference of opinion, but I think I am correct in saying that even in regard to such matters the balance of popular opinion is in favour of the action which has been decided on. Under these circumstances I only desire to say a word or two regarding the scheme of arrangement. It has been said that the scheme involves an unnecessary innovation and that there has never been any material difficulty in applying the provisions of the present Code to the diversified areas over which the Code is in operation. And a fear has been expressed that the drawback of having increasingly divergent procedures in the areas subject to the jurisdiction of different High Courts will outweigh all the advantages which are claimed for the new arrangement. My Lord, I am perfectly willing to concede that there is very little either in the present Code or in the Bill which is now before this Council which has been or which will be found unsuitable even in the backward provinces. It may no doubt be necessary to exclude a few tracts of country from the operation of certain rules of pleading with which the people are as yet unfamiliar, but broadly speaking I anticipate that every suit will be tried on the same lines irrespective of locality. I do not however in any way share the apprehension that the new arrangement will make for diversity of procedure; on the contrary, the main reason why I have always warmly advocated the division into Code and rules is that such an arrangement should, and I hope will, tend to promote uniformity. At present there is scarcely a section of the Code which has not at some time or other been the subject of conflicting rulings for the reconciling of which no remedy, short of a legislative enactment, is available. One has only to open the pages of any annotated edition of the Code in order to realize the extent of confusion which has been developed by case law during the last quarter of a century, and it is unreasonable to expect the Legislature to intervene whenever the interpretation of any particular phrase gives rise to a conflict of opinion. I have every confidence that under the new Code such a state of confusion will no longer be possible. It is only reasonable to suppose that it will be the primary duty of every Secretary of a Rule Committee to bring to notice all cases in which opinions may differ regarding the scope or meaning of a rule and that the various High Courts in concert one with another will take such action in the way of supplying omissions or remedying defects as may be necessary.

"It has been alleged that under this Bill the Code of Civil Procedure passes out of the category of enactments which will be considered by lawyers to be worthy of a scholarly commentary. If by this it is intended that it will be no longer possible to string together a number of conflicting decisions under each and every rule, then, my Lord, this fact alone will go far to demonstrate the success of the experiment which is now being made."

The Hon'ble DR. RASHBEHARY GHOSE said :—"My Lord, the leading provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure Bill and the changes introduced by it have been very fully explained in Council by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the measure, and I do not think that I can usefully add anything on the present occasion. I would, however, call attention to two recommendations made by the Simla Committee. The first recommendation to which reference has already been made by the Hon'ble Law Member relates to the gradual introduction of the service of processes by post. The Simla Committee has observed and, if I may say so without impropriety, has rightly observed that in this reform may be found a solution of one of the principal defects—I might call it the principal defect—in the administration of our legal system. The second recommendation made by the Simla Committee, to which I would also invite your attention, is the publication annually by the Government in every province of some manual corresponding to the English Annual Practice, containing the Act and the rules of procedure made under it or under other Acts in the province and short notes of all important decisions under the Act and rules.

"I would only add that I gladly accept the suggestion made to me by the Hon'ble Law Member, and propose at the next meeting of the Council to move for leave to introduce a Bill to carry out the object which I have in view."

The Hon'ble TIKKA SAHIB RIPUDAMAN SINGH OF NABHA said :—"My Lord, I fully agree with what the Hon'ble Mr. Richards said when introducing the Indian Limitation Bill in this Council in January last, that our Statute-book has become full of amending Acts. Out of 350 Acts there are about 120 which have been passed merely to amend the existing Acts.

"The Hon'ble Member truly remarked that the result is that our collection of Statutes has become confused and complicated, and it is becoming increasingly difficult for those who have to refer to it to find the law with accuracy. Therefore I welcome the Civil Procedure Bill which, when passed, will simplify the law to a great extent and do away with some fourteen amending Acts, which now complicate the law. Our laws should always be simple, clear and easily understood.

"The peculiar feature of the present Bill is its new form, which is for the first time introduced in India, by which the principles of the law of procedure only are codified and all details are relegated to schedules which can from time to time be added to, corrected or amended in different parts of India by Rule Committees working under the supervision of the different High Courts. The proposal seems to possess some advantages :—

- (1) that it is more elastic and rules can be amended by Rule Committees as occasion arises without causing any trouble to the highly complicated legislative machinery. But it seems open to question why we should not have the whole law-making machinery recast in such a way that there be no difficulty in quickly and easily passing through it desirable laws, rules and regulations ;
- (2) that suitable rules can be framed to suit different local conditions. It is perhaps the only advantage that can be urged in the present case. But when different parts of India had very slow and bad means of communication with each other they got on well enough with uniform laws throughout all its parts, and now that means of communication have so far improved that its most distant parts can so easily and quickly communicate with each other, as was hardly the case in early sixties of the last century, can this reason be said to have gained so great a weight as to be considered of sufficient importance now for making the change?

"Against the above two advantages may be urged the undue hardship which is bound to be caused to the general public by this new feature in the Civil Procedure which is now sought to be introduced in India, for the following reasons:—

(1) the greater incomprehensibility of the law that would ensue. It is a very good rule of law to assume every one to be acquainted with the laws of the country and its ignorance to be recognised as no excuse whilst as a matter of fact the best legal talent of the country spend their lives in disputing over its details. The rules will soon be so amended by different Rule Committees in different parts under different High Courts that it may soon become next to impossible for even an educated person to be able to know what the rules in different parts of India were;

(2) the greater diversity in the rules of procedure that will follow. At present when there is one law in one form in civil matters for all people, in all parts of British India, the different High Courts have so construed some of its provisions as to give it authoritatively different meanings. But when the law really becomes to a great extent different in different parts, there is no limit to what extent the learned gentlemen might carry its meanings.

"Diversity of rules will become the source of real hardship when one individual living in one province is sued in another. It would certainly be hard on the parties, but it would provide an ample harvest for the pleaders. This perhaps explains why the measure, important as it is, has excited very little comment. Who would do this? The vakils, perhaps. But why should they, when it is for their advantage to have diversity and incomprehensibility in laws to ensure business? The Press perhaps. But they cannot spare time or attention because these are fully taken up by topics of a more exciting nature.

"As to the portion of the procedure which has been retained in the Code, there are a few provisions which call for remark.

(1) Amongst the definitions given in section 2, clause (13), that of 'moveable property' can hardly be called as such. The phrase has nowhere been defined in the Code, and it is doubtful which definition is sought here to be added to by saying that it shall include 'growing crops.'

"(2) Section 25, clause (2), enacts a very curious provision under which in certain cases Courts will have to enforce laws not prevailing within their own jurisdiction, but in force in other parts of the country. In theory it is simple enough and perfectly the correct thing to do, but in practice a most difficult thing, for the presiding Judges in such case would have no experience and practical knowledge of such laws as they would be called upon to administer.

"(3) Section 34, clause (1), gives unlimited power of passing decrees bearing interest. Considering the poverty of India and the agricultural classes being in the hands of moneylenders who charge large rates of interest, there should be some limit beyond which interest should not be awarded. The proposed law gives too wide a discretion to Courts and the Courts as usual are sure to exercise it freely. The moneylending classes actually oppress the cultivating classes, as they generally have the sympathy of the presiding officers of Civil Courts, as these officers mostly belong to the moneylending class.

"(4) Section 55 gives too much power to the officers authorised to make arrests in the way of entries in private houses. The section lays down no safeguard against abuse of such power. The process-servers of Civil Courts to whom such duties will of necessity have to be entrusted are worse paid than the lowest grades of the police against whom we hear so much all over India. Perhaps the best thing would be to authorise the Courts to impose heavy fines in every case in which abuse of such powers is proved on the officers in question and the parties in whose interest such abuse takes place.

"(5) Section 60, clause (1), exempts from attachment such personal ornaments of women as in accordance with religious usage cannot be parted with. Amongst some classes the religion says nothing, but usage, customary rather than religious, requires that certain articles must not be parted with by women. Amongst Hindus it might be religious usage not to part with their nose rings in some provinces, their bangles in others, their ear rings in some districts, but amongst some classes, though religion says nothing, yet custom is as rigid as in the case of Hindus. As the section now stands, all women except Hindus would be liable to suffer injustice, and there is no reason why they all should not receive equal protection.

"Besides, women require further protection of their personal property against attachment in execution of decrees against their husbands or other male relatives. A married woman can hold her separate property. Even amongst Hindus she can have her 'stridhan.' Is it right to disregard all such claims and draw no distinction between a woman's separate and personal property and that of her husband or common family property? Therefore it is necessary that no property held by any female member of the family separately from the husband as her exclusive property shall be liable to attachment in execution of decrees against the latter.

"(6) Section 61 provides partial exemption of agricultural produce from attachment. The duty of fixing the amount of the share of such produce is left in the hands of the Local Governments. It would have been better to fix a minimum, because the principal details should be settled by the Supreme Legislature rather than be left to the local authorities.

"(7) Section 94, clause (a), gives extraordinary power to Civil Courts to interfere with the freedom of defendants, and it is feared such powers would be used sometimes without proper discretion. It would not be safe to give these powers indiscriminately to all Courts. If such powers are thought necessary, they should only be vested in the hands of superior Courts, to be carefully exercised in special cases only.

As to the provisions laid down in the schedule, it is hardly worth while to consider them in detail or to offer criticism on them, for they will soon be taken up and altered by different Rule Committees to conform to their own views, and any criticism now would simply be wasted labour.

"Before concluding I must confess my great disappointment at the Hon'ble Dr. Ghose's suggestion relating to charitable trusts not being accepted. I was under the impression that the Select Committee would accept and recommend the clause suggested to the Council, but their Report is quite silent on this point, which is still more surprising and shows that they have not even touched the subject. The Hon'ble Mr. Ananda Charlu introduced a Bill in this Council in March, 1897, to remedy this evil, but after four years it was eventually withdrawn in 1901, because the Government opposed it and wished that it should not be proceeded with any further. My Lord, I made a few remarks on this subject in my budget speech last year, and I need not repeat the same on the present occasion, although I feel bound to say that Government ought to move, and move before long in this direction, because it is under a moral obligation to see to the proper administration of vast trust funds, which ought to be devoted to such religious and charitable purposes for which they were endowed. The present suggestion of Dr. Ghose was a very modest attempt in this direction, and I wish that Government could have seen its way to accepting it."

The Hon'ble MUNSHI MADHO LAL said:—"My Lord, although my Hon'ble Colleagues who have preceded me have said all that could have been said on the motion before the Council, with Your Excellency's permission, I should like to make a few remarks.

"The principal feature of this Bill, as the Council is aware, is the re-arrangement of the clauses and the relegation of minor provisions to schedules which can be amended or added to by High Courts subject to the advice of Rule Committees. It has been represented that the novelty will cause much inconvenience in practice. It is said that the same subject is ~~put over~~ in the body of the Code and the schedules that great difficulty will be felt by the Bench and the Bar alike in referring to the old sections, that the delegation of the legislative authority to the High Courts in the matter of broader details hitherto dealt with by the Legislature is undesirable, that High Court Judges have little time to spare from their judicial work, that the rules of the Court of the various provinces are far from perfect that the subordinate judiciary do not view with favour what has been called by a correspondent the proposed amputation of the Code, that the Code has hitherto done well, and all that was required was to revise it in the light of case law. My honoured and learned colleague the Law Member, anticipated all these objections at a very early stage and tried to meet them fully and efficiently in his speech with which he introduced the Bill at Simla in September last. He has shown conclusively the necessity of the above-mentioned changes and the plan adopted after full and careful consideration will it is hoped prove simple safe and sound. Similar objections were taken by a section of the Press too. But a perusal of the opinions received by the Legislative Department makes it clear that the objections form a microscopic minority, that there is a consensus of opinion in favour of the new arrangement. Personally I consider that with the safeguards provided by the law the Rule Committees and the High Courts will be quite capable of amending or altering the rules contained in the schedules. I admit that the High Court Judges have not much time to spare from their judicial duties but I do not think that they will be required to devote much of their time to their rule-making duties as the rules contained in the schedules have been made with great care and consideration, and I do not think that their alteration will be required often. Moreover the responsibility that will rest with Rule Committees and the High Courts will make them more vigilant and keen in discharging their duty in this respect and they will be in a better position to interpret the rules. In this way there will be an elasticity in the rules of procedure which it is hoped will be beneficial to the public and the legal practitioners. The main principles of the law have been embodied in the Code which the Legislature alone have the power to change. I should have been glad were it possible to have all the rules made ~~by different High Courts~~ submitted to the Government of India in the Legislative Department which could serve as a central revising authority. I think the Bill now before the Council has many advantages over the old Code. The provision that every suit shall be instituted by presentation of a plaint or in such other manner as may be prescribed by the rules the provision for effecting execution by precepts the partial exemption of agricultural produce the important additions to the existing law relating to the public charities as embodied in clause 92, the provision for execution of decrees by appointment of receivers are some of the improvements which will I am sure, be appreciated by experience. I wish greater facilities had been given to the public for a more prompt easy and effective control of all public religious and charitable trusts on the lines suggested by my learned friend the Honble Dr Rashbehary Ghose. I have little doubt that Hindus and Muhammadans would welcome any measure that would confer on the public more power to control and protect all public charitable and religious endowments. In the mass of opinions on the Bill received in the Legislative Department there is an overwhelming majority in favour of adopting the Honble Doctor's suggestions. If I am rightly informed, the Sri Bharat Dharm Mahamandal and the Zamindars' Association of Muzaffarnagar have addressed the Government of India asking for more facilities to be given by the law for control and protection of public charities and endowments. Other public bodies have also supported this view. The Provincial Social Conference that met at Lucknow the other day adopted a resolution approving of Dr Ghose's draft (clause 93A). I, for one, cannot see what possible objection there can be to fulfil the desire of the public thus expressed. I suppose they do not ask anything more than the Government seems prepared to give they only want that instead of instituting a suit, power should be given to the public under the same conditions and restrictions as embodied in the present Bill to move the Court by an application. If necessary, some more safeguards may be provided so that persons in charge of charitable and religious endowments may not be harassed. However I will not enlarge on this subject as I still entertain hopes that something will be done by the Government and the Hon'ble Council in this respect, the more so, after the announcement that has just been made by the Hon'ble the Law Member regarding the introduction of a separate Bill on the subject by the Hon'ble Dr. Ghose. I trust that the Courts will in future take full advantage of the power given to them of appointing receivers in execution proceedings. This power has till now been very sparingly used, with the result that judgment-debtors and decree-holders and immoveable property itself have not unoften been ruined. If a return were called for showing the time taken in executing decrees and realising the decretal amounts by decree-holders, and the costs of the execution proceedings, it would, I fear, unfold a sickening tale of small landed properties sold out and large zamindaris ruined. It is, I take it, the object of the Government to help, as far as possible, the landed proprietors, in preserving their holdings and maintaining, in their integrity, large zamindari estates. This object, I am confident, can be achieved by the Civil Courts if they exercise the powers now vested in them for appointment of receivers, whenever immoveable property of any value forms the subject-matter of the litigation, at the earliest possible stage of the legal proceedings, or certainly on the passing of the decree in the suit. There is no dearth now in the Mufassal of properly qualified legal practitioners to be appointed receivers. The Courts may also within certain limitations and with the consent of the Collectors appoint them receivers, in the same way as they are appointed managers of Courts of Wards. The power now conferred on the Civil Courts, if properly exercised, will, in my humble opinion, be a real boon to decree-holders and judgment-debtors alike, and save many a landed proprietor from ruin. That between the passing of a decree and its final execution a long time passes, to the great detriment of the landed property under litigation and the certain loss of the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, is a fact which I need hardly enlarge upon. I shall content myself with one illustration which is typical of its class. A mortgage-decree was obtained in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Patna in 1900, and the decretal amount has not yet been realised, although ~~the property is said to yield an income of a lakh and a half of rupees per annum.~~ Execution proceedings are still pending; and the estate has just been taken over by the Court of Wards.

"My Lord, I can not conclude without discharging the pleasant duty of expressing the feeling of gratitude and thankfulness, on behalf of the public, to your Excellency's Government for the manner in which it has managed this most important, useful and complicated piece of legislation. It brought together the best men of intellect and legal acumen, available in the whole of India, to form the Special Committee which sat at Simla and to which our hearty thanks are due, which did real and substantial work, in making the frame-work of the Bill now before the Council, as on its basis the Select Committee did their duty and found their work made comparatively easy. I quite agree with the remark of our learned Law Member to the effect 'I do not know that there are four other lawyers in India who could command more completely the confidence of the public in a matter such as this, and the fact that they have approved of this Bill and approved of it unanimously, is, I venture to think, an argument of an almost conclusive character in its favour.' I may be allowed to add that it would have been hard to find a better law maker than our Law Member, the Hon'ble Mr. Erle Richards, who controlled and directed the Special Committee and presided over the Select Committee with such ability and tact, brought to bear on all matters an intrinsic merit of high order, whose patience and sympathy cannot be too much admired. He heard and considered with attention and courtesy all the suggestions that were made, whether by the officials or by the public, and those that were put forward by the members of the Select Committee. Our most hearty thanks are due to him. I am almost confident that the present Bill, if passed, will prove most useful to the public, the judiciary and the legal profession, and that the difficulty, if any, in working the Code will very soon be a thing of the past."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS moved that in clause 2 (18) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the definition of "rules" the following be substituted, namely :—

" ' rules ' means rules and forms contained in the First Schedule or made under section 122 or section 125."

He said :—" My Lord, it is of great importance that the rule-making power under this Bill should be absolutely clear, and the object of this amendment is to remove a doubt which arises in regard to the definition of rules. It might be argued that rules as at present defined included rules made under clauses 129 and 130, that is, rules not relating to procedure. I suggest for the consideration of Council that this definition should be made clear by the addition of the words proposed."

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS said :—" I am much obliged to my Hon'ble Colleague for calling attention to this point, which is a small one but not an unimportant one, and I think that the form he suggests is an improvement on that contained in the Bill. I beg to recommend to the Council that it be accepted."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS said :—" I desire to move an amendment in clause 123, sub-clause (2) (d), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, that for the words 'a Subordinate Judge' the words 'a Judge of a Civil Court Subordinate to the High Court' be substituted. Clause 123 deals with the constitution of the Rule Committee, and the particular sub-clause to which I refer was inserted by the Select Committee in order to provide for the presence on the Rule Committee of a Subordinate Judge. It was not, however, present to the minds of the Select Committee that in Burma, at least, there are no Judges who can properly be called Subordinate Judges. It is possible that the term might be construed sufficiently widely for the purposes of Burma, but it seems better to have the point clear on the face of the Bill and to use some expression which will be beyond doubt applicable to every province. The words proposed will allow of the presence of a District Judge or of a Subordinate Judge on the Rule Committees and will, I think, cover the requirements of every Province."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS moved that in clause 125, proviso, of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "under the provisions of this Part" be omitted. He said :—" This amendment, my Lord, is connected with the amendment which I have already moved in this Council. It is intended to clear up all possible doubt as to the meaning of rules in clause 125."

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS said :—" I have considered this matter and I think that the words to which my Hon'ble Colleague takes exception are unnecessary and might conceivably lead to some doubt as to the meaning of the proviso. I therefore ask the Council to accept the amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS moved that in the First Schedule of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, Order III, "Recognised Agents and Pleders", rule 4, sub-rule (3), after the figures "1861" the words "or of any Chief Court" be inserted. He said :—" Sub-rule (3) deals with the class of pleaders who are entitled to act without presenting a document authorising them to do so, and as settled by the Select Committee it applies only to Advocates of the High Courts under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, and to Advocates who are Barristers. It has been brought to our notice, however, that there are some gentlemen—I think four in all—who have the right to act in this way at present as Advocates in the Chief Court of the Punjab, but who are not Barristers; and although this is a provision which can be altered by the Rule Committee, still it would be hard on these gentlemen that their vested rights should be taken away by an alteration of the form of the clause. I therefore propose to the Council that the clause should be restored to the form in which section 39 of the present Code of Civil Procedure Bill stands, and that after the figure '1861' in sub-rule (3) the words 'or of any Chief Court' should be added. That will cover the case of these gentlemen."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS moved that in the First Schedule of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, Order XXXIV, "Suits relating to Mortgages of Immoveable Property", after rule 13 the following rule be inserted, namely :—

" 14. Where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage, he shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in Order II, rule 2 ;"

and that the present rule 14 be re-numbered as 15.

" My Lord, the amendment I now move has relation to section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, which it is proposed to repeal by this Bill. The effect of repealing this section would be to allow a mortgagee who has obtained a decree for money against a mortgagor to sell the mortgaged property in proceedings in execution of that decree. But there is one case in which this would work hardship, and that is if the mortgagee were to effect such sale in execution of a decree for money due under the mortgage. In that case he would be getting a right of sale against the mortgagor free from the protection which the law gives a mortgagor in suits for sale. I suggest to the Council that this should not be so and that an amendment should be inserted such as that I now move in order to protect the mortgagor in proceedings by way of execution of a decree for property due under the mortgagee."

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS said :—" My Lord, I have had the advantage of discussing this point with some of my Hon'ble Colleagues on the Select Committee, and we are agreed that the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Member is desirable subject to one condition, and that is, that some words be inserted to prevent its applying to territories to which the Transfer of Property Act does not at present apply. The amendment of my Hon'ble Colleague is taken from section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, and if his amendment were carried in its present form, it would apply to territories to which that Act does not at present apply. I understand that the Hon'ble Member is willing to accept this addition to his amendment. The addition would be to number the new clause he proposes clause 14, sub-rule (1), and then to add at the end the following new sub-rule :—

" (2) Nothing in sub-rule (1) shall apply to any territories to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has not been extended."

" I understand that my Hon'ble Colleague will accept this addition to his amendment and I recommend the Council to accept his amendment as altered in this way."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS :—" I beg to accept the amendment of the Hon'ble Law Member."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS moved that in the First Schedule of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, Appendix A, " (4) Written Statements," the Form No. 8, entitled "Defence in Suits for infringement of a Patent", be omitted, and that the subsequent Forms, Nos. 9 to 17, be re-numbered as Nos. 8 to 16, respectively. He said:—That form is not technically accurate as the law stands at present. It has been drawn in anticipation of the law as proposed to be amended and it is in advance of the law as it at present stands."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ERLE RICHARDS moved that the Bill, as now amended, be passed. He said:—"My Lord, I suspect that the Members of this Council must be experiencing no little sense of relief in hearing that this measure has now reached its final stage. For the past seven years it has stood on the List of Business of this Council, it has been considered by four Committees, it has been published and circulated three times, it has been the subject of copious criticism by the public and by the profession. But in defence of this I would point out that the Legislature has not been often troubled with a general amendment of Civil Procedure. The first Code was passed in 1859; it was amended and re-enacted in 1877; and though it came again before the Legislature five years later, the Act of 1882 was in substance no more than the Act of 1877. It is therefore more than thirty years since the last Code was discussed in this Council, and much has happened in those years to warrant a fresh enactment. A mass of decisions has grown up round the present Code which should be removed, and many points of conflict have arisen between the various High Courts which should be set at rest. Moreover, the English practice on which the Act of 1877 was based has itself been remodelled since that year as the result of experience and we should take advantage of that experience. It is full time therefore that a new Act should be passed, and if excuse were wanted for the deliberation with which we have proceeded in enacting it, I would remind the Council that these two Codes of Procedure of ours, the Civil and the Criminal, are big things. They stand alone in the records of comparative legislation both in regard to the extent of the population which they affect and to the number of Courts to which they apply. They govern the litigation of the people of British India, some 300 millions in all, and they regulate the procedure of over 2,000 Courts. It is wise therefore to proceed cautiously in effecting a change in them.

"If this motion be carried, my Lord, we shall no longer have a law of procedure which in every detail must be the same for all India. The enactment of one uniform Code applicable to all the territories within the jurisdiction of the Legislature which enacts it is a tempting ideal, and we shall abandon it with some regret; but it is an ideal which must yield to practical considerations. It is expedient that there should be uniformity in main principles, but in the less important matters of procedure there should be some elasticity in order to enable the Code to meet the varying wants of different localities and different communities. The Bill gives effect to this view, and if the rule-making power given by it be used with moderation, it will, as I venture to hope, be a means of effecting a considerable improvement in the machinery of our procedure. The power is given to the High Courts and I have every confidence that they will use it to the best advantage. It is in that belief that I commend this motion to the Council.

"I cannot, my Lord, conclude these observations without once more expressing the thanks of the Government of India, and I think I may fairly add of the public of India, to those who have assisted me in this complicated matter. I have been at best but the coxswain of the boat; it has been rowed into harbour by others. The burden has fallen mainly on those gentlemen who were associated with me in the Committee which sat at Simla, but we owe our thanks also to the Judges and lawyers of India who have generously placed their experience and their learning at our disposal and to the Select Committee of this Council. Nor can we forget our obligations to my predecessor, Sir Thomas Raleigh, and the Committees who worked with him. They cleared the course for us and made our progress possible.

" My Lord, I move that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 20th March, 1908.

Financial Summary.

ACCOUNTS, 1906-1907.

Accounts of 1906-1907 closed with a surplus of £1,589,300, being £263,200 more than the Revised Estimates.

REVISED ESTIMATES, 1907-1908.

2. The following changes in the system of accounts have been introduced, namely, (1) exclusion of local figures, (2) grouping of Military heads, and (3) re-distribution of interest charge between ordinary and productive debt. The Budget figures of 1907-1908 have also been re-arranged on the same basis so as to compare like with like. The comparison made below is with Budget as thus recast. Revised Estimates of 1907-1908 show total revenue at £70,989,200, against £72,500,000 taken in Budget; Expenditure £70,753,800, against £71,725,400; surplus £235,400, against £774,600.

3. Imperial revenue less by £1,270,300; Expenditure less by £731,100; Provincial revenue less by £240,500; Expenditure more by £268,600.

Important variations are—

Increases of Revenue—

Stamps	67,700
Customs	368,500
Mint	192,700

Decreases of Revenue—

Land Revenue	1,701,100
Forest	148,100
Exchange	73,300
Railways—net receipts	725,400

Increases of Expenditure—

Interest	734,900
Miscellaneous	158,400
Famine Relief	455,900
Other Public Works	116,400

Reduction or Avoidance of Debt	220,700
Railways : Interest and Miscellaneous charges	512,100
Irrigation	187,300

4. Failure of the monsoon during the autumn of 1907 has caused widespread distress over greater part of the United Provinces, eastern districts of the Punjab, northern half of the Central Provinces and some parts of Bengal and Bombay and many of the Native States in Central India. The effect of this is visible on Land Revenue, Railway returns and in famine relief expenditure. Customs revenue gained by an unprecedented activity in imports. Sale price of Bengal Opium averaged Rs 1,350 per chest, against the estimate of Rs 1,250. Consumption of Salt increased following a reduction of duty. Rise in Mint receipts due to profits on large outturn of nickel and bronze coin. Under Railways gross earnings were better, notwithstanding the effects of scarcity, but heavy renewal charges depressed the net receipts. Increase under Interest on ordinary debt is mainly due to the readjustments effected, causing a reduction under interest on Railway and Irrigation.

BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1908-1909.

5. The Budget Estimate of total revenue is £73,438,900; total expenditure £72,867,400; surplus £571,500.

On the assumption that seasons will be normal, an improvement over the figures of the Revised Estimate for 1907-1908 is anticipated under nearly all heads of revenue except Opium, the net increase being £2,449,700. Under Opium the reduction in the number of chests to be sold and exported from Bombay accounts for a decrease of £380,000. Price of Bengal opium is taken at Rs 1,300 per chest. After allowing for remissions and suspensions in affected provinces Land Revenue is expected to be better by £1,435,200. The other improvements are—

Salt	65,300
Stamps	126,400
Excise	194,600
Forest	103,700
Railway net Earnings	800,100
Irrigation	192,300

6. The only important decreases are Mint £165,900 as coinage is expected to be less active, and £60,000 under Exchange.

7. Provision has been made for grants of £80,000 for Police reform and of £200,000 for Sanitation.

8. The estimate of gross expenditure is £73,392,500, but of this amount £525,100 will be met from Provincial balances. The principal variations are—

Decreases—

Civil works	224,700
Opium	175,600

Increases—

Salaries and Expenses, Civil Departments	995,200

Of which chief items are—

Education	183,200
Medical	280,000
Political	70,700
Scientific and Minor Departments	64,600
Famine Relief Expenditure	364,500
State Railways—Interest and Miscellaneous charges	321,700
Military Services	233,900

9. Under Police Local Governments are making progress in giving effect to reforms advised by Police Commission. Provision is made for Famine Relief expenditure as relief operations must continue till rains set in. Reduction under Civil Works is due to reduction of Provincial balances in some provinces. Under Military Services grant for special expenditure is restricted to £1,666,700, and no regrant of lapses has been made. The charges are swollen by an increase of £130,000 in cost of food supplies due to scarcity.

10. Estimates of Capital requirements are—

Capital Expenditure not charged to Revenue—		£
Irrigation Works		1,000,000
State Railways		8,555,100
Outlay of Railway Companies		1,444,900

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1908-1909.

PART I.

Introductory.

I beg to present the Financial Statement for 1908-1909, together with the usual accounts and appendices.

2. The dominating feature of the present budget is the famine which unhappily is widespread over a large part of Northern India, and some other tracts elsewhere. The course of the monsoon during the autumn of 1907 bore some resemblance to those of 1896 and 1899, but on the whole the failure of the rains was less extensive, and the resultant distress is both more restricted in area and with some local exceptions less severe in intensity than on those occasions. Nevertheless the calamity which has befallen the country is of no small magnitude. It extends, roughly speaking, to the greater part of the United Provinces, to the eastern districts of the Punjab, the northern half of the Central Provinces, some parts of Bengal and Bombay, and many of the Native States in Central India, besides isolated tracts in other Provinces. The area in which famine has been declared to exist is approximately 118,000 square miles in British India and about 15,000 square miles in the States of Central India and has a population of about 49 millions. In these tracts the outturn of the kharif crops over the whole of the United Provinces and the greater part of the distressed areas in other provinces is a good deal less than half of an average crop, and in the worst tracts very much less. The distress would have been much more severe but for the fall of useful rain in September and October in Bombay, and but for the winter rains which, though late, were of enormous benefit in Northern India. Even as it is, the export of wheat has been almost wholly stopped in consequence of the prevalent high prices in India, and a great part of the Burma rice crop which was fortunately abundant has been diverted to India to take the place of that which had been lost.

3. The general situation is thus less serious than in 1897-1898 or 1900-1901, and the financial position is also stronger than in those years. In the former year Sir J. Westland was forced to budget for a deficit of £1,643,000, of which a great part, though doubtless not the whole, was due to famine. In the latter, Mr. Clinton Dawkins, with the aid of improved exchange, was able to secure practical equilibrium with a small surplus of £160,300. On the present occasion, although the surplus of £774,600 for which we had budgeted last March is likely to be reduced to £235,400, we nevertheless hope, if the ensuing monsoon is normal, to secure much more favourable results in 1908-1909, and I am able to estimate for a surplus of £571,500 at the close of the ensuing year, notwithstanding the very liberal provision for suspension and remission of revenue which is referred to below. In part these results are due to the smaller extent and severity of the present famine. That, however, is not the only reason. The lessons of the two famines of the past decade have not been lost on us. In the first place our machinery for combating distress has been brought by the teaching of experience to a higher pitch of efficiency than before. Secondly, it is now a primary canon with us to issue takavi advances on the most liberal scale and by the promptest possible methods the moment that the situation has clearly declared itself. Thus in the present year over 2 crores of rupees have already been distributed or sanctioned for distribution in this way, and 2 crores are being provided for issue next year, making upwards of 4 crores in all, as compared with 23 crores in 1896-1898, and 29 crores in 1899-1901. Moreover, in every province, the arrangements for the suspension of revenue at the first sign of distress are far more highly developed than before. In the current year, nearly 222 lakhs of revenue have already been suspended, and about 135 lakhs more will, it is estimated, be suspended in 1908-1909, making 357 lakhs in the two years. Of this sum, a large proportion will necessarily be remitted, but it is too soon to frame any definite estimate of the amount. Not only have the suspensions of revenue been on a very liberal scale; but, what is at least equally important, they were made with great promptitude when it was certain that the crops must fail.

4. Partly owing to these measures and partly, we may reasonably conclude, owing to the greater resisting powers of the people the numbers of those to whom it has been necessary to give direct relief have been much less than in previous famines. In the Province most severely affected—the United Provinces—the numbers at first rose very slowly; the liberal grants of takavi encouraged cultivation and the construction of wells, and maintained the demand for agricultural labour. In January the demand slackened and there was a rapid increase in the number of applicants for relief, but even at the end of February the total number in receipt of relief from the State in British districts, which in the two previous famines at that date exceeded or approached three millions, amounted to less than a million and a quarter. Some further increase in numbers may no doubt be expected after the rabi is harvested, but according to the best forecasts which the local authorities can now supply the total direct expenditure on famine relief in the two years will not be greatly in excess of 2 crores of rupees, as compared with 930 lakhs in 1899–1901 and 740 lakhs in 1896–1898.

5. The distress caused by high prices has undoubtedly affected all classes, and has pressed with great severity on the urban populations and on all who are dependent on small fixed incomes. But the more painful conditions which we associate with widespread famine in India—the emaciation, the aimless wandering, the disruption of social ties, and the increase of crime—are as yet so rare and exceptional as to be scarcely noticeable. The energy and determination with which the people have themselves faced the calamity have been observed on all hands, and we may reasonably hope that if the coming season is favourable the progress of the country will resume its normal course, without any such check as a famine on a similar scale would have caused in bygone times.

6. The total loss of revenue and increase of expenditure attributable to the famine in the two years has been estimated at about 461 lakhs and 524 lakhs, respectively. Some of the items comprised in these totals however are conjectural, and while they may be taken for what they are worth, I would not be understood to imply that but for the famine our surplus would have been larger by these sums, or even by the Imperial portion of them, which amounts to 302½ and 323½ lakhs, respectively.

7. In view of the foregoing facts, it will be manifest that we are in no position to undertake any measures for the remission of taxation, or to embark on any schemes of administrative improvement involving considerable expenditure. On the contrary the occasion is one for rigid economy and retrenchment wherever it can be effected. The only measures with which we have felt justified in proceeding are set forth in a later part of the present Statement.

Changes in the form of Accounts.

8. The form in which our accounts are presented has been improved since last year in three respects.

9. The most important of these changes is the exclusion from our estimates and accounts of the transactions of District Boards and of certain other local funds which used to appear in the Imperial Budget. In the Budget discussion of March 1906 the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale raised this question, and it was again adverted to a year ago. I then explained that the matter had already engaged the attention of Government, but that the examination of the detailed accounts of the numerous funds which the proposal involved was a matter of time. I am now glad to announce that the Secretary of State has sanctioned our recommendation to remove all transactions of a purely local character from our estimates and accounts; and the following is a brief description of the method by which we propose to give effect to the scheme.

10. The financial transactions of the Government of India have hitherto been recorded under three distinct divisions—Imperial, Provincial, and Local. The two former comprise transactions which may be said to pertain to the general functions of Government, inasmuch as they concern either the general administration or the large commercial or quasi-commercial departments—Post Office, Telegraph, or Railways—which are under governmental control. The revenues in these cases, so far as they accrue from taxes, are derived from a system of taxation which, broadly speaking, is common to all India; while the expenditure which is met therefrom is incurred in the interest of the country as a whole. The third section of the accounts, on the other hand, related to a group of funds, known as “incorporated” funds, which are raised locally

(to a large extent in the shape of rates on land), devoted mainly to local purposes, and are, in the most important cases at least, managed by local bodies.

11. The system of embodying the revenue and expenditure of certain local funds in the general accounts and estimates of the Empire dates from a period before local authorities possessed the financial and administrative powers with which they are now invested. It was then natural and fitting, for the accounts of these funds represented transactions which were under the direct control and responsibility of Government. With the spread of financial decentralization, however, the position has altered; and it is inexpedient to encumber the public accounts with entries of revenue which the Government no longer enjoys, and of expenditure which it does not incur. The practical inconvenience of the old arrangements led, many years ago, to the exclusion of municipal and port funds, which were at one time incorporated. The continued incorporation of the funds of District and Local Boards and District Councils has been found to be attended by similar inconvenience, though in a less marked degree. It compels those bodies, for example, to frame their budget at a much earlier date than would otherwise be necessary. It deprives them of the freedom of re-appropriation which Municipal authorities enjoy. It forces them to adopt the Imperial system of classification, which is not well adapted to their circumstances. And it tends to subordinate their requirements to those of Provincial finance, and even occasionally to those of other local bodies. These difficulties were felt also in the case of the other and less prominent local funds which have hitherto been incorporated in the public accounts.

12. The decision now arrived at will effect the complete exclusion of the accounts and estimates of District and Local Boards from the Imperial Budget and the statements appended thereto, thus following the practice in the United Kingdom, where the income and expenditure of County Councils are kept entirely separate from the public accounts. The minor incorporated local funds have been either absorbed or excluded, the decision generally depending upon the agency by which they are controlled. If the revenues are not specially assigned to local management, and the expenditure is under the orders of Government, the fund ceases to have a separate existence, and its accounts are absorbed in the Imperial or Provincial accounts, according to the facts of the case. If, on the other hand, the income and expenditure are clearly under the control of a local authority, the fund has been excluded, and treated for budget purposes exactly like municipal or cantonment funds. Certain exceptions have been admitted to this general principle in the case of funds which have been specially created for local purposes and are administered by Government officers in an ex-officio capacity, as, for instance, the funds relating to village police.

13. It is not intended that this change in the method of exhibiting the figures shall involve any alteration in the administrative arrangements of local funds. The exclusion of a fund from the general accounts will not imply the cessation of any control, statutory or otherwise, which Government may hitherto have exercised over its administration, nor any alteration in the status of its employes. The transactions of District and Local Boards will continue to be set forth in full in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, but they will there be shown in a special appendix as is already the case with the accounts of Municipalities and Port Trusts.

14. With the disappearance of the "local" column, the adjusting head used for contributions between Provincial and Local revenues has also been abolished; contributions made from Imperial or Provincial revenues to a local fund, or vice versa, are now charged as expenditure or shown as a receipt (as the case may be) under the head which is most appropriate to the nature of the charge. Thus, a grant to a District Board for educational expenditure now appears under the head 22.—Education; a grant for plague expenditure under the head 24.—Medical; a grant for construction of roads under 45.—Civil Works; and a grant for general purposes—such as a grant to make good a deficit—has been classified under the head 32.—Miscellaneous.

15. The effect of this change is to exclude a sum of approximately £2,433,000 of revenue and approximately £2,231,000 of expenditure from the aggregate figures. Thus in the accounts for 1906-1907, the figures for Imperial, Provincial, and Local according to the old system would have appeared as follows, vis. :—

Revenue	75,577,812
Expenditure (including that which is defrayed from Provincial and Local balances)	73,473,670

The figures will now appear as follows, for Imperial and Provincial only :—

Expenditure (including that which is defrayed from Provincial balances)	71,242,937

16. The second change in the form of the accounts has been effected in the method of exhibiting the military figures. Grouping together of Military figures. The military receipts and expenditure have not hitherto been grouped in a convenient way; and in particular considerable expenditure on the defence of India has been hidden away under the head "Marine" which appeared among a group of civil departments. We have now split up this head into two; the new head "Marine" will record the receipts and charges of what is known as the Royal Indian Marine, and takes its proper position among the military group of figures, the total of which shows at a glance the expenditure upon the defence of the country. Receipts and charges connected with the maintenance of river flotillas, pilot services, harbours and the lighting of the coasts will be shown under the new head "Ports and Pilotage" which has taken the place of the old head "Marine" in the Civil Department group of heads. This re-arrangement makes no change in the total figures on either side of the account.

17. The third of the changes which we have introduced relates to the distribution of our total debt, and more particularly of the interest payable upon it, between the two great divisions of Ordinary or non-productive debt, and Public Works or productive debt. The arrangement hitherto in force has been faulty inasmuch as it has operated to show too large a part of the aggregate interest charge as pertaining to the productive debt, and too small a part as pertaining to the ordinary debt. I proceed to explain how this result has ensued and how we propose to rectify it.

18. In a certain number of cases we have raised loans specifically for the purchase or construction of railways. A recent instance of this occurred in 1905-1906 when India stock to the amount of nearly 12½ millions sterling was issued for the purchase of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway. When a loan of this kind is raised, it is naturally shown as Railway or productive debt, and the interest actually payable on it is charged accordingly. In regard to this class of debt, which may be called specific Railway debt, there is nothing to object to, and I need not refer to it further.

19. The bulk of our debt however is not of this character. It has been raised sometimes on account of war, sometimes on account of famine, mostly on account of capital outlay on Railways and Irrigation works; but it has not been specifically earmarked for the one or the other. In order, therefore, to determine what portion of the whole is properly accountable as productive debt, the practice has been as follows. In the first instance, all loans are treated as ordinary or non-productive debt. Then, at the end of each year, the amount actually spent during the year for capital purposes on Railways and Canals is ascertained, and that amount is transferred to the productive debt class, the remainder only being treated as ordinary or non-productive.

20. Of recent years, the sums thus transferred from ordinary to productive debt have usually been considerably larger than the total of the loans actually raised during the year. The explanation of this is that the funds obtained by actual borrowing have been supplemented from other sources, such as revenue surpluses, Savings Bank deposits, net receipts under other non-revenue heads, the Secretary of State's cash balances, and the like. The result has been to effect a gradual reduction of the ordinary debt, while the productive debt has grown more rapidly than the aggregate of our total debt, productive and non-productive taken together.

21. In thus determining the amounts chargeable as productive and non-productive, respectively, there was nothing to object to. But when we came to allocate the interest charges on the two portions of the debt, as thus determined, the position was different. The total charge on account of interest on the whole debt (including discount on loans raised below par) was of course known; but this total charge was not divided proportionately between the two classes. Down to the 31st March 1900, the practice was to calculate interest on the productive portion, determined as explained in paragraph 19 above, at 4 per cent. The charge so calculated was debited to the productive class, and the remainder of the total interest charge was taken to represent the portion debt on account of the non-productive class. In 1901, it was decided with the approval of the Secretary of State to calculate interest on productive debt incurred from the year 1900-1901 onwards at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Now, taking rupee and sterling loans together, each of these rates, both 4 per cent and even $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, is considerably in excess of the rate which we have actually been paying on our real indebtedness. It is obvious therefore that the result has been to swell unduly the burden of interest nominally falling on the productive portion of the debt, and to diminish unduly the share falling on the ordinary or non-productive portion. The following figures, which summarize the account as it stood at the end of 1905-06, will show how wide the divergence had become :—

	Amount of debt.	Interest charges.	Rate per cent.
Ordinary debt	54,425,226	954,787	1'75
Railway debt	149,035,455	5,353,212	3'59
Irrigation debt	27,050,799	1,041,456	3'85
TOTAL DEBT	230,511,480	7,349,455	3'18

22. The existence of the specific debt, to which I have referred in paragraph 18, will always result in some difference between the two rates of interest: but it cannot properly amount to anything like so much as the figures in the last column of the foregoing statement would indicate.

23. The remedy we have decided to adopt is simple. The interest on the specific debt will continue to be calculated and charged as at present. But in respect of all non-specific debt, which is more than four-fifths of the whole, we shall cease to adopt any conventional rate for calculating interest on the productive portion: but instead, shall divide the aggregate interest charge between the productive and non-productive portions in proportion to their respective amounts. This will involve some increase of labour in making the calculations, but it will give correct results, which cannot be said of the former practice.

24. The opportunity has been taken to introduce certain other changes, all making for greater accuracy. It has hitherto been the practice to make the transfer of interest from the ordinary to the productive head wholly in the Indian section of the accounts: and this has resulted in a large minus entry in India under head 13—Interest on Ordinary Debt. We have accordingly arranged that the transfer in respect of so much of the non-specific debt as is recorded in the Secretary of State's books in England shall be shown in the Home section of the accounts. This adjustment does not get rid of the minus entry altogether, but reduces it to moderate dimensions.

25. Secondly it has been found that the rate of interest charged on the Railway Revenue account was unduly exaggerated by the fact that while the interest on money which has been advanced to Railway Companies for capital expenditure is debited to the Railway Revenue Account, the amount of such advances (which are made from borrowed funds) did not find a place in the Capital figures of Railway debt. It appeared in the category of Ordinary debt, the interest charge on which was consequently made to appear unduly low. This error has now been corrected, and a sum of over £13 millions has thus been transferred from the Ordinary to the Railway debt. A third minor correction affects the portion of the specific debt incurred in connection with purchase of Railways which is redeemed by the operation of sinking funds; the total debt is reduced by this amount, but the reduction has hitherto been wrongly made from the Ordinary and not from the Public Works portion of the debt.

26. The adjustments indicated above have been made in the Finance and Revenue Accounts for 1906-1907 and the Revised Estimates of 1907-1908 and Budget of 1908-1909.

27. After making these adjustments, I present the figures for the three years reduced to their simplest form, and excluding Capital, Debt and Remittance transactions. They are as follows:—

		1906-1907 (Accounts).
		£
Revenue		73,144,554
Expenditure (charged against Revenue)		71,555,179
Surplus		1,589,375
		1907-1908 (Revised Estimate)
		£
Revenue		70,989,200
Expenditure (charged against Revenue)		70,753,800
Surplus		235,400
		1908-1909 (Budget Estimate).
		£
Revenue		73,438,900
Expenditure (charged against Revenue)		72,867,400
Surplus		571,500

Accounts of 1906-1907.

The following remarks are based on the figures published in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, and include local transactions, as the detailed exclusion of these was not carried out in the Revised Estimate of the past year.

28. Last March we estimated that the year would close with a surplus of £1,326,100. The account as finally made up shows an actual surplus of £1,589,340, being an improvement of £263,240. This represents the result of the Imperial section of the accounts only. The net Provincial and Local surplus was less than had been estimated by £98,704, so that the net result of both sections was a betterment of £164,536.

29. The revenue brought to account was £49,088 less than the estimate. The receipts from Land Revenue, Excise, Forests and Postal Services were somewhat less than was expected; but the principal factor was a large reduction of £323,273 in net Railway earnings, mainly owing to freight on traffic carried at the end of the year not having been adjusted till April in consequence of the Easter holidays. Expenditure on renewals was also somewhat heavier than had been estimated on the Eastern Bengal State Railway and some other lines. On the other hand the receipts from Opium, Salt, Customs and Army were largely in excess of the estimate. In the case of Salt the increase amounted to £72,706. This was due to enormous clearances made in the last 12 days of the year, after the reduction of the duty on the 20th March 1907. Up to the end of February, issues of salt exceeded those of the corresponding period of 1905-1906 by only 5,14,000 maunds. During March, however, 59 lakhs of maunds were cleared, and the actual excess in the whole year amounted to no less than 23,57,000 maunds.

30. Under Military Services, the increase amounted to £122,153, the bulk of which occurred in England, and was due to refunds by the War Office of arrear charges on account of sea transport.

31. On the expenditure side of the account there was a large apparent increase of £573,858 under interest on Ordinary Debt, and decreases of £460,115 and £142,669 under Railways and Irrigation respectively. These variations however were almost wholly nominal, and due to the change of classification described in paragraphs 23 to 25 of the present statement, by which a larger part of the total interest charge will henceforward be debited, as it should be, against ordinary debt, and a smaller part against

Railways and Irrigation. The only other variation of importance was a reduction of £152,663 under Military Services. This was due to lapses in the provision for expenditure on stores in England, and to a lesser extent to short outlay in India, and to a refund by His Majesty's Government on account of bounties on re-engagement. These savings were partly counterbalanced by larger expenditure under Marine on account of vessels under construction.

32. Further details will be found in Part II of the present Financial Statement and in the Comptroller General's Appropriation Report which has recently been published.

Revised Estimate for 1907-1908.

33. In comparing the figures of the Revised Estimate for 1907-1908 with those of the Budget Estimate for the same year presented last March, it is necessary to make allowance for the exclusion of the figures of Local Funds, as explained in paragraphs 8 to 14 above. Where the figures now quoted differ from those presented a year ago, it should be understood that the difference is due to this cause.

34. After making these adjustments, it will be seen that a year ago we estimated that the revenue of the year would amount to £72,500,000, the expenditure charged against revenue to £71,725,400, and the surplus to £774,600.

35. The failure of the monsoon and the presence of famine will have prepared the Council for a less favourable result. We now anticipate a revenue of £70,989,200, being a falling-off of £1,510,800. The expenditure charged against revenue has also fallen off to the extent of £971,600, of which however only £462,500 represents real reductions, the remainder, £509,100, representing increase of expenditure defrayed from Provincial balances in the manner which I explained last year. The Imperial surplus is now expected to amount to only £235,400, or less than one-third of that for which we had originally budgeted.

36. The following are the principal heads of revenue and expenditure which differ from the original Budget Estimate by £50,000 or thereabouts:—

REVENUE.		£
Increase—
Opium		371,800
Salt		46,900
Stamps		67,700
Customs		368,500
Assessed Taxes		49,200
Mint		192,700
Decrease—
Land Revenue		1,701,100
Forests		148,100
Miscellaneous		59,700
Railways: net receipts		725,400
EXPENDITURE.		£
Increase—
Interest		734,900
Miscellaneous		158,400
Famine Relief		455,900
Other Public Works		116,400
Decrease—
Direct demands on the Revenue		211,300
Railways, Interest and Miscellaneous charges		512,100
Irrigation		187,300
Military Services		758,600

Full explanations will, as usual, be found in Part II of the statement. The only matters that need be mentioned here are the following.

37. Last March I explained the reasons why it was then necessary to make a cautious estimate of the prices likely to be obtained for Bengal opium during the year. The price assumed was Rs 1,250 per chest, but this has consistently been exceeded, and the average rate actually obtained has been Rs 1,350. This has increased our receipts by over 45 lakhs. At that time also the Malwa trade was depressed, and we estimated that only 13,292 chests would pass the scales for export during the year. Since then the trade has revived somewhat, and the number of chests on which duty will be paid is now likely to amount to 15,000. This will yield a further increase of 10½ lakhs under this head.

38. We now anticipate that the salt revenue of the year will amount to £3,336,900 as compared with the Budget Estimate of £3,290,000, being a small increase of £46,900. Our calculations were based on the assumption that the issues of salt would amount to 434 lakhs of maunds, which figure is now likely to be exceeded by the comparatively small amount of 9 lakhs of maunds. This would have been larger but for the fact, already referred to in paragraph 29 of the present statement, that in the latter part of 1906-1907, dealers held up their requisitions in anticipation of a reduction of the duty. When this was announced on the 20th March 1907, there was an immediate rush to replenish stocks, the issues during that month amounting to 59 lakhs of maunds as compared with 40 lakhs in March 1906. Had this large excess been more regularly distributed, the later year would have shown a much larger improvement.

39. The effect of the successive reductions in the duty has been very marked, as will readily be seen from the following statement :—

Year.	Issues of salt (in lakhs of maunds).	Increase + or decrease — as compared with the previous year.
1898-1899	355	+ 10	Duty at Rs-8 per maund.
1899-1900	352	— 3
1900-1901	362	+ 10
1901-1902	360	— 2
1902-1903	369	+ 9	Duty at Rs 2 per maund.
1903-1904	376	+ 7
1904-1905	394	+ 18	Duty at Rs-8 per maund.
1905-1906	407	+ 13
1906-1907	431	+ 24	Duty at Rs 1 per maund.
1907-1908 (Estimate)	443	+ 12

* The duty in Burma was levied at Rs 1 per maund throughout the whole period.

40. It is true that the effect of a reduction of the duty takes a certain time to filter down to the consumer: and the figures of individual years are liable to be affected by the fact that alterations in the duty do not exactly synchronize with the commencement of the official year. But after allowing for these disturbing factors, the contrast between the progress of consumption in the first five years of the series, during which the duty was Rs-8-0 per maund, and that of the second half, during which it has been gradually reduced to Rs 1 per maund, is sufficiently marked. Between 1897-1898 and 1902-1903, under the former system, the issues increased by 24 lakhs of maunds in all. Between 1903-1904 and 1907-1908, the corresponding increase has been 74 lakhs of maunds, or more than three times as much. The sacrifice of revenue has no doubt been very large. Our receipts now amount to only £3,336,900 as compared with £6,184,400 in 1902-1903: and we cannot hope, within any period worth considering, to make this good, even with the accelerated consumption which now prevails. But we entertain no doubt that it is money well lost, and that the sacrifice has been made in the true interests of the people of India.

41. Before leaving this subject, I should like to make a short digression. It is perhaps not generally known that the levy of a revenue from salt is by no means confined to India, but forms a feature of the fiscal system in not a few of the leading countries of Europe. I have not obtained particulars of all: but by the courtesy of the Consulates at Calcutta, to the gentlemen in charge of which our acknowledgments are due for the assistance they have rendered us, information has been collected in regard to France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy, and the Netherlands. The systems in force in these countries vary largely, and in some cases are of much complication. It would be inappropriate to encumber the present statement with the details, but broadly speaking it may be said that each of them includes either an import duty, an excise, or a State monopoly, and frequently a combination of these methods. The consumption of comestible salt, the net revenue derived from its taxation, after deducting

	Consumption of comestible salt in millions of lbs.	Revenue from taxation.	Average payment per head.
France	751·6	1,339,000	0 8
*Germany	931·3	2,468,000	0 11
Italy (excluding Sicily and Sardinia)	424·3	2,961,000	2 0
Austria-Hungary	896·5	2,766,000	1 2
Netherlands	114·4	138,000	0 6
India	3,571·7	3,090,000	0 2½

* The figures for Germany are of somewhat old date.

42. In the case of the European countries, the figures of consumption relate to edible salt only. In addition to this there is a large consumption in each of them for industrial and manufacturing purposes, and this salt is usually either exempt from taxation, or charged at reduced rates. Similar concessions are also allowed in India for salt used for certain manufacturing purposes, but India is not a great manufacturing country and the amount of salt so used is comparatively trifling.

It may be mentioned that the Commonwealth of Australia has recently imposed a duty of £1 per ton on salt imported from outside the Colony.

43. After being nearly stationary for three years, the Customs revenue has made a long stride forward, yielding 55½ lakhs in excess of the estimate, and nearly 92 lakhs in advance of that of the previous year. This result was obtained notwithstanding a reduction of 6 lakhs under sugar and 15 lakhs in the export duty on rice, the latter being due to the diversion of Burma rice to Indian ports in consequence of the scarcity in Northern India. The imports of cotton piece goods were unprecedentedly large, and yielded 15½ lakhs more than the estimate, while the excise duty on cotton goods manufactured in India was also the highest on record, yielding the substantial sum of 32½ lakhs. The other items which contributed chiefly to the increased receipts were manufactured articles 14 lakhs, silver 13½ lakhs, other metals 9½ lakhs, petroleum 8½ lakhs, and articles of food and drink, other than sugar, 4 lakhs.

44. The increase under Mint receipts was due mainly to the success of the nickel coinage, the profits on which amounted to 16 lakhs, whereas credit had been taken for only 2 lakhs in the Budget Estimate. The demand for bronze coins was also much greater than had been anticipated, and we realized a profit of 18 lakhs, or 10 lakhs more than the original estimate. As has been explained elsewhere in the present statement, the coinage of new rupees was comparatively restricted, but even so the receipts from seignorage exceeded the estimate by rather less than 3 lakhs of rupees.

45. The great falling-off of nearly 1½ millions sterling under Land Revenue is of course attributable to the famine, which has necessitated suspensions and remissions on a very large scale. The loss is greatest in the United Provinces where it is expected to amount to nearly 142 lakhs of rupees. Next comes Bombay with 46 lakhs; Burma with 30 lakhs, of which, however, a part is due to a change of classification; the Central Provinces with 13 lakhs, the Punjab with 17½ lakhs, and Madras with 6½ lakhs. The total sums sanctioned as suspensions and remissions reach the high figure of 284 lakhs.

46. Down to October inclusive our Railways did extremely well, and the net receipts were more than 94 lakhs in excess of the proportionate estimate of the year. From November however a deterioration set in mainly in consequence of the scarcity in Northern India and the stoppage of wheat exports. The gross earnings are still expected to be in excess of the Budget figure. But the working expenses and charges for renewals have increased in much greater proportion especially on the Great Indian Peninsula, the Oudh and Rohilkhand, the Bengal Nagpur and the Eastern Bengal State Railways. The net receipts of the year are now estimated at £12,929,400, which is less than the Budget Estimate by £725,400, and fall short of the receipts of 1906-1907 by £54,400.

47. On the expenditure side of the account, there is a large increase of £734,800 under Interest on ordinary debt, and a decrease of £585,700 under Interest on Railway and Irrigation debt. The bulk of this is due to the more correct classification of the productive and non-productive debt which was explained in an earlier part of the present statement. In so far as the increase was real and not merely apparent it was due to the fact that the sterling loans raised during the year aggregated 8½ millions as compared with the forecast of only 3½, while the rate of interest was 3½ per cent instead of 3 per cent.

48. The large decrease of £187,300 under Irrigation is mainly due to the transfer of £135,300 of interest charges to the non-productive head. The expenditure under Opium was less than estimated by £141,600, mainly in consequence of the poorness of the poppy crop. Expenditure on Forests fell by £85,300 following the reduced receipts under the same head.

49. The increase under the miscellaneous group of charges is chiefly due to an increase in the charges for stationery and printing: but also in part to the cost of the various special committees that have been at work during the year, including among others the Royal Commission on Decentralization, the Factory Committee, and the Committee on the Civil Procedure Code.

50. For direct expenditure on the relief of famine, we originally provided only a small sum of slightly over 9 lakhs, almost all for Bengal. We now anticipate that the charges on this account will amount to nearly 77½ lakhs, including 67½ lakhs in the United Provinces, and 6 lakhs in Bengal, besides smaller sums in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and Bombay. On the other hand, the provision of 33½ lakhs in the Imperial Budget for "Reduction and Avoidance of Debt," has necessarily disappeared. There is a provision of 37½ lakhs in the Provincial column of the same head, almost all of which would have been swallowed up also, but this now remains in virtue of the system introduced last year for the relief of Local Governments from a part of the burden of famine relief charges, as explained in paragraphs 48 to 57 of the last Financial Statement.

51. The large saving of £758,600 under the Army group is made up of reductions amounting to £575,600 under Army (effective), and £20,700 (non-effective), £124,900 under Military Works, £27,500 under Special Defences, and £9,900 under Marine.

As regards the first and largest of these items, a decrease of £256,000 occurred under ordinary Army charges, and was mainly due to smaller payments to the War Office in respect of British forces serving in India owing to the earlier settlement of advances made by the India Office, to temporary shortage in the strength of troops (British and Native), lower railway charges, smaller home expenditure on stores, smaller expenditure on the supply of malt liquor, and the suspension of the training of reservists. There was also a decrease of expenditure consequent on the re-organisation of the Supply and Transport Corps, and the reduction of the Army Bearer Corps. The net saving would have been larger but for an increase of £85,000 on food supplies, due to the prevailing high prices, and for the expenditure on the Bazar Valley Expedition which we now estimate at £50,000 falling within the year 1907-1908 besides arrear charges of £6,700 which will be brought to account in the following year. The remainder, £340,300 represents a lapse on the special grant for the improvement of the Army, and was due to the postponement of various measures for which provision had been made in the Budget, or to delay in carrying them out. These included the rearmament of Horse and Field Artillery, the conversion of two Bullock Draught Heavy Batteries into fully Horsed Batteries, the formation of two additional Native Mountain Batteries and of an additional Native Cavalry regiment, the re-organisation of Horse and Field Batteries and of ammunition columns, and the increase in the reserves of ammunition and of rifles. The expenditure on the construction of lines for Native troops and on the purchase of land for this purpose was also considerably less than had been anticipated. The funds available from these and other smaller savings were however utilised in part to accelerate the progress on other measures. The entire saving under Military Works also occurred in connection with the grant for "Special" expenditure, the greater part being due to the slow progress made in initiating or carrying out a variety of measures for the redistribution of the Army. Expenditure on Special Defences was similarly delayed by a reconsideration of certain questions of armament.

52. The large increase of 76·37 lakhs in the Provincial deficit is due partly to some of the Local Governments having spent more than their allotments, to the extent of 40·3 lakhs net, mainly on account of famine relief in the United Provinces, and larger outlay on Public Works in the Central Provinces, and Burma. An important contributing cause however was the contraction of Provincial Revenue due to the famine. The total loss of Land Revenue has been 255.16 lakhs, and of this the Provincial share was 60.66 lakhs. This would have been greater but for (1) the payment of 10.37 lakhs to Bombay and the Central Provinces under their minimum guarantees, and (2) the grant of 32.72 lakhs from Imperial Revenues to the United Provinces to enable the latter Government to close the year with a balance of 20 lakhs. There were improvements under some other heads, but the net reduction in the total Provincial Revenues under all heads as compared with the Budget was 36.07 lakhs, and this sum combined with the net increase of Provincial expenditure mentioned above, makes up the aggregate increase of 76.37 lakhs by which the Provincial balances have been depleted during the year.

Budget Estimate for 1908-1909.

53. For next year, we estimate the revenue at £73,438,900, the expenditure chargeable against revenue at £72,867,400, and the surplus at £571,500. The total actual expenditure is estimated at £73,392,500, but of this amount £525,100 will be met from Provincial balances. These estimates are based on the assumption that the monsoon of the coming year will be normal in character.

54. Under the important head of Land Revenue, we hope for an improvement of £1,435,200 over the figures of the Revised Estimate of the current year. If these expectations are realized, we shall receive slightly more than was collected in 1906-1907, but £265,900 less than we had originally estimated for 1907-1908. This result is of course due to the necessity for making liberal provision for suspensions and remissions in the United Provinces, and other areas in which famine is now prevalent. In these, and indeed almost everywhere, the prospects of the rabi crops are excellent, though the area sown is perhaps 25 per cent less than usual.

55. Under Opium, we estimate that our gross receipts will amount to 726.43 lakhs and our net revenue to 503.29 lakhs in 1908-1909, as compared with 783.43 and 534 lakhs respectively in the current year. The reduction in net revenue would have been greater but for the poor outturn of the crop now being gathered which will reduce the payments to be made to the cultivators. The number of chests of Bengal opium to be offered for sale has been reduced from 48,500 to 45,900, and the average price likely to be obtained has been estimated at R1,300 per chest as against R1,350, the average obtained during the current year. The trade in Malwa opium has slightly revived of late, and we have assumed that 15,100 chests will pay duty, that being the full amount permissible during the calendar year, as explained below.

56. In last year's Financial Statement, I referred to the fact that negotiations were in progress with the Government of China in regard to the restriction of the opium trade, but these had not at that time reached a stage at which any announcement was possible. Papers have recently been presented to Parliament explaining the nature of the settlement that has been arrived at. The gist of the latter in so far as it is material for the present purpose is to the following effect—vis., (1) that the Government of India have agreed to restrict the export of opium from this country to 61,900 chests during the calendar year 1908, and to effect further reductions of 5,100 chests in each of the two following years; (2) that the question of making still further reductions after the year 1910 will depend on whether China has, in the interval, effected a proportional reduction in its own production and consumption of opium; (3) that the question of increasing the Chinese import duty, which at present stands at 110 taels per picul, has been postponed for the present, as the objections entertained to that course are felt to require much fuller consideration; and (4) that China shall be permitted to post a Chinese official at Calcutta to watch the auctions and the packing, but with no power of interference.

In pursuance of this agreement we have reduced the area under poppy cultivation in the Bihar and Benares Agencies from 845,000 bighas to 800,000 bighas. The number of chests of Bengal opium to be offered for sale has been reduced to 3,900 per mensem till December next, and to 3,600 from January to March 1909; and the number of chests of Malwa opium which may be exported from Bombay has been limited to a maximum of 15,100 during the present calendar year. Further reductions will probably be effected in 1909 and 1910.

57. India is thus prepared to do its part in co-operating with China towards the eventual extinction of the opium habit among the Chinese. Whether further measures will hereafter be taken will depend on the degree of success which may be found to attend the efforts of the Chinese Government. That those efforts are sincere we entertain no doubt, and such evidence as we possess indicates, that the present movement is backed by a greater measure of official influence and public opinion than has been the case on former occasions. The difficulty of the task however is enormous, and it cannot be affirmed with confidence that a habit which has acquired a strong hold over many millions of people, and a trade which yields large profits not only to the Chinese Government but to great numbers of cultivators and middlemen, can be effectually stamped out in the brief space of ten years.

58. Under the remaining principal heads of revenue, such as Salt, Stamps, Excise, Customs, and Assessed Taxes, we have taken credit for a normal development of revenue. The Forest receipts in the current year have been disappointing especially in Burma and the Punjab, but it is an expanding head, and we hope that a considerable part of the set-back will be made up next year, though possibly not the whole. Departmental receipts also, from the Post Office, the Telegraphs and the Civil Departments generally, are not likely to be affected by any exceptional influences, and may be expected to exhibit their normal growth. Mint receipts however are expected to be less than in the current year by £165,900. This is due to there being no probability of any considerable coinage of rupees from purchased silver during the ensuing year. We have also taken a moderate estimate of the profits from bronze and nickel coinage. Under "Miscellaneous" there is a decrease of £129,700 which is due partly to there being no provision for payment of the Tibet indemnity, the last instalment of which was paid during the present year. In view also of the present state of exchange we have made no provision for gain on that account. In the present year we expect to realize 9 lakhs from that source. In Military receipts there is a drop of £129,900 which is mainly due to the discontinuance of the system of supplying malt liquor to the Army by State agency. There is a corresponding reduction on the expenditure side.

59. I have explained elsewhere that there has been a set back in net Railway earnings during the current year. We hope that the causes which have led to this will not continue, and that the progress of this important branch of our assets will resume its normal course. In this view we have estimated for an increase of £800,100 under this head as compared with the current year. The figure taken, viz, £1,372,500, is only slightly more than we originally estimated for 1907-1908. Under Irrigation also, we expect to receive a substantial increase of £192,300, the greater part of which comes from the Punjab.

60. On the expenditure side of the account the most important feature is an increase of £995,200 in the expenditure of the Civil Departments. The principal items which go to make up this considerable total are Police (£301,100), Medical (£280,000) and Education (£183,200), besides smaller sums under Political, Scientific and Minor Departments, and General Administration. All the Provincial Governments are making vigorous efforts to expend the allotments we have made during the last three years for the reform of their police establishments, and Bombay in particular hopes to make large progress during the ensuing year. As explained below we are making further grants aggregating 12 lakhs for this purpose on the present occasion. Under Medical the bulk of the increase is explained by the special grant of 30 lakhs referred to in paragraph 65. The increased provision for Education occurs partly in the two Bengals, but chiefly in the United Provinces, where extensive schemes of educational improvement are on foot. Part of the increase in the last-named province, however, is nominal, and is due to the transfer of the Zilla schools from local to Provincial management with effect from next year.

61. Under the head of Famine Relief, we have provided for an outlay of 132·07 lakhs, of which one crore is for the United Provinces, 10 lakhs each for Bengal and the Central Provinces, and smaller sums elsewhere. Of the total amount, 80·51 lakhs falls on Imperial revenues, and 51·56 on Provincial. Of this last amount, however, 50 lakhs belongs to the United Provinces, and as the balances of that Government have unfortunately been entirely depleted by reason of the famine, the bulk of this charge, as well as the greater part of that incurred in the same Province in the current year, will eventually fall on Imperial.

62. I explained last year the operation of the new arrangements for apportioning the cost of famine relief between the Imperial and Local Governments. It is a matter of much regret that the occasion for putting them in force should have come round so soon, but the relief actually afforded to provincial revenues has been substantial. Excluding the United Provinces, the circumstances of which are special, we find that in the five other provinces affected, vis., the Central Provinces, Bengal, Punjab, Madras and Bombay, charges aggregating 9.46 lakhs have been transferred to Imperial during the current year, and a further sum of 28.94 lakhs will be similarly transferred in 1908-1909. But for the introduction of the revised system, the whole of those charges would have devolved upon the revenues of the provinces concerned.

63. The reduction of £224,700 under Civil Public Works occurs chiefly in Bengal, Burma, and the Punjab, where the diminution of the provincial balances has necessitated some slackening of the rate of expenditure incurred of late years. The Military charges are dealt with more fully in another part of the present statement. Although they are estimated at £233,900 more than in the present year, they are less than those of 1906-1907 by £831,700, and are also less than the budget provision of 1907-1908 by £524,700. This result is partly due to the restriction of the grant for "special" expenditure on the improvement of the Army to 2½ crores, no regrant of lapses being made. The reduction would have been greater but for a large increase of £130,000 in the cost of food supplies as compared with the present year, due to the prevalence of high prices.

64. As already explained, the financial position does not permit of our undertaking any new measures involving large expenditure. We have however provided a sum of 12 lakhs per annum for the further prosecution of police reform in accordance with our established policy, and have distributed it as follows :—

Bombay	4,25,000
Bengal	4,00,000
Eastern Bengal and Assam	1,25,000
Central Provinces	1,50,000
Minor Provinces	1,00,000

Burma, Madras and the United Provinces do not share in the present allotment because those three provinces have already received their full grants in connection with the revision of their Provincial Settlements. In the case of the two last named, this is contingent on the approval of the Secretary of State. The Punjab also has practically received its full assignment.

65. We have also been able to make some provision for another object to which we attach great importance. I refer to the improvement of the public health. Hitherto comparatively little has been done in this direction, and it is sometimes made a reproach against us that no organized effort has been made to improve the sanitary conditions in which the people live. The continued prevalence of plague, and the special measures which have been concerted to combat it, have brought this question into exceptional prominence. In those measures there is reason to hope for the co-operation of the people in a degree which has not previously been attained; and notwithstanding the present pressing need for economy, we believe that it will be politic to give a tangible proof of our sympathy in the form of some special assistance from Imperial funds. Apart from expenditure of this nature, which will not, we trust, be of a permanent character, there is room for almost unlimited outlay of the most beneficial description in reforming the sanitary arrangements of the larger towns. The necessity for financial assistance to enable these to achieve a sanitary standard less primitive than at present prevails has been pressed upon us by more than one of the Local Governments. We have therefore decided to allot a sum of 30 lakhs per annum, among the different provinces, for expenditure on sanitary improvements with special reference to the prevention of plague. Each Local Government will be at liberty to expend the money at its discretion, and to attack the problem in whatever way it prefers. The sums assigned to each of the provinces are shown below: and it is a matter of regret to us that it has not been possible to make them larger :—

Madras	3,50,000
Bombay	4,50,000
Bengal	4,50,000
United Provinces	5,00,000
Punjab	4,00,000
Burma	3,00,000
Central Provinces	2,00,000
Eastern Bengal and Assam	3,00,000
North-West Frontier Province	50,000

66. The only other point to which I need allude is the framing of new Provincial Settlements with Madras and the United Provinces. These were worked out during the past year, and were designed to give to the Local Governments concerned the same share of the divided heads of Revenue, viz., Land Revenue, Stamps, Excise, Assessed Taxes and Forests, as is enjoyed by other provinces. In the case of the United Provinces, it was also desired to effect some improvement in the general financial position of the Local Government. The new arrangements have been incorporated in the budget for next year, but they are still under the consideration of the Secretary of State, and must be regarded as only provisional pending receipt of his orders. It is unfortunate that the occurrence of famine has seriously affected the finances of the United Provinces. Their balances have been not merely exhausted but overdrawn, and, in addition to the Imperial grant of 32.72 lakhs made in the current year, it has been necessary to make a further grant of 14.82 lakhs in the ensuing year in order to secure bare equilibrium. The consideration of the further measures that will be necessary to place the Provincial finances on a better footing must be deferred until after the character of the next monsoon shall have declared itself.

Military Expenditure.

67. I append the usual statement showing the total expenditure on the Army under the various heads during the past 5 years:—

	Army.	Marine.	Military Works.	Special Defences.	Total.
	£	£	£	£	£
1904-1905	20,175,694	620,789	981,599	128,295	21,906,377
1905-1906 ⁽¹⁾	19,267,130	551,070	1,094,905	146,306	21,059,411
1906-1907	19,657,845	662,368	1,127,515	138,358	21,586,086
1907-1908 (Revised)	18,754,600	513,500	1,134,200	118,200	20,520,500
1908-1909 (Budget)	18,972,500	473,300	1,199,200	109,400	20,754,400

68. I need not again describe our policy for the financing of special military expenditure, of which a full account was given in paragraphs 60—67 of the Financial Statement for 1907-1908. As I there explained, the annual grant provided to meet this expenditure was reduced in 1907-1908 by half a million, but a large additional sum was also granted on account of lapses which had occurred in the previous year. For 1908-1909 we have again taken the special grant at the reduced amount adopted for the current year, and it has also been decided, in view of the general financial situation, not to make any further addition on account of lapses, though these have again been large. The total provision made for special expenditure is therefore £1,666,700. Out of this amount, close on two-thirds of a million are required to meet recurring expenditure on measures already brought into effect, and the provision for new expenditure on measures for the improvement of the Army is therefore limited to one million. The bulk of this sum will be required for work already in progress, but it includes some provision for new measures.

69. We are beginning now to obtain the full advantage of various economies which have been effected in the last few years. Our demands for stores from England are also reduced, and a large item of expenditure (£153,700), together with corresponding receipts, now disappears from the accounts in consequence of the new arrangements for the supply of malt liquor to British troops. These causes would have enabled us to reduce our estimate for ordinary Military expenditure in 1908-1909 to £425,200 below the provision made in the current year, but for the rise in prices due to the prevailing scarcity which has made it necessary to provide £215,000 for additional expenditure on the feeding of the Army. The actual improvement as regards ordinary expenditure is thus reduced to £210,200. We have still to learn whether the deliberations of the Romer Committee will result in extra charges being thrown on Indian Revenues in respect of the British troops employed in this country.

70. I should also mention certain changes by which we hope to strengthen the control over military expenditure. When the Commands were abolished in June last, the financial responsibilities attached to the appointments of Lieutenant-General Commanding devolved upon the Divisional Generals, but the Budget grants which had been framed in the preceding March were of course on a Command basis. We have now decided that each General Commanding a Division or Independent Brigade shall have a separate Budget, and this arrangement will come into effect from the 1st of April. We have also re-organized the Military Accounts Department with the object of arranging that a single Accounts officer shall transact all the accounts work of a Division, including that which relates to Supply and Transport, and be in a position to advise the General Officer Commanding on financial points; and we propose to establish a special Controllership to deal for the whole of India with all technical supply work such as the accounts of Ordnance Factories and the auditing of railway charges. Simultaneously we have re-classified the military accounts with the object of grouping charges in such a way as to correspond more closely with the distribution of financial responsibility. We believe that these measures will tend to establish closer relations between the administrative and the financial authorities, and to remove from the Military Accounts system much of the obscurity which has hitherto been an obstacle to effective control.

Railway Construction and Earnings.

71. The following statement shows in the usual form the capital expenditure on railways during the past five years and the Budget Estimate for 1908-1909, whether incurred directly by the State or through the agency of Guaranteed or Assisted Companies :—

	1903-1904.	1904-1905.	1905-1906.	1906-1907.	1907-1908 (Revised).	1908-1909 (Budget).

72. On the 31st March 1907 the total length of open lines was 29,303·37 miles classified according to gauge as follows :—

5' 6" gauge	15,630·08
Metre "	12,330·40
Special gauges (2' 6" and 2')	1,342·89
TOTAL	29,303·37

73. During the current year we have added to these approximately the following mileage:—

5' 6" gauge	338.33
Metre „	453.85
Special gauges (2' 6" and 2')	192.98

During the ensuing year we hope to increase this length by 921.35 miles more.

74. The original estimates of the current year provided for 9 millions of capital expenditure. Later on however, on the advice of the Railway Finance Committee, it was decided to increase this by another million, the additional funds being provided from the profits on coinage. It is anticipated that the enhanced allotment of 10 millions will have been spent in full by the end of the year.

75. For 1908-1909, we have again been able to arrange for a grant of 10 millions, at which figure the programme has now stood for three years in succession. The important question of the most effective and economical method of providing the growing sums required for the development and maintenance of our Railway system was referred by the Secretary of State to a special Committee in London; the latter have been placed in possession of the views of the principal commercial bodies in this country, and have received a mass of other evidence; and it now remains to await the conclusion of their deliberations.

76. The distribution of the grant and the allotments for rolling stock among the various lines, so far as they are yet finally settled, will be found set forth in the annexed memorandum by the Railway Board.

77. The Revenue returns have been considerably less favourable than we had anticipated. Last March we estimated that the gross receipts of State Railways would amount to 40.12 lakhs, the working expenses to 19.75 lakhs, and the net earnings to 20.37 lakhs. The revised estimate is as follows:—

Gross receipts	41.14 lakhs.
Working expenses	21.54 „
Net earnings	19.60 „

This is 77 lakhs less than the estimate, though 21 lakhs in advance of the results of 1906-1907. The true result, however, is even less favourable; for the figures of the current year have been swollen by the inclusion of 18 lakhs of net receipts earned on the Madras Railway which became a State line from the 1st January last, and by the transfer of about 30 lakhs carried forward from the previous year on account of the Easter holidays of 1907. There was thus a real set-back of net earnings as compared with the previous year, notwithstanding the inclusion of the Madras Railway, and the addition of nearly 1,000 miles of new line. In part this is due to the famine in Northern India, which has destroyed or diverted the important wheat trade, though the gross receipts are still somewhat in excess of the estimate. The strike on the East Indian Railway last November is estimated to have reduced the earnings by about 15 lakhs. For the most part, however, the cause is to be found in the large increase in working expenses and renewals, which have exceeded the estimate by 179 lakhs of rupees and amount to 52.37 per cent of the takings, as compared with 40.87 per cent in 1906-1907, and 47.81 per cent in the previous year. The return on the capital at charge amounts to 5.17 per cent, as compared with 5.38 per cent in 1906-1907 and 5.56 per cent in 1905-1906. The steady growth of the relative burden of working expenses in the last few years is a somewhat disquieting feature. A time comes in the history of most railways when the receipts from new traffic hardly cover the cost of carrying it; and it is a matter of common remark that this stage has been reached in not a few railways in the United Kingdom. Hitherto, however, it has not been supposed that we were within measureable distance of it in India. Various reasons have been suggested to account for it, such as the increased cost of coal, and the higher salaries which are now generally commanded by Railway establishments. The matter deserves, and is receiving, the close attention of Government and the Railway Board.

79. On the 31st March 1907, 55,928 miles of main and branch canals and distributaries had been constructed commanding 50 million acres of culturable land, the area actually irrigated in 1906-1907 being 21,992,683 acres. The productive works during that year yielded a net return of 9·25 per cent on the capital outlay of 3,862 lakhs after paying all charges exclusive of interest. The net profit to the State was 227 lakhs.

80. The Revised Estimate for 1907-1908 shows a net profit of 194 lakhs on productive works, and a net return on capital outlay of 8·17 per cent. Good progress was made during the year with the works in hand, of which the principal are the Triple Canal Scheme of the Punjab and the Upper Swat River Canal in the North-West Frontier Province. On the 31st March 1908 we expect to have 56,882 miles of main and branch canals and distributaries constructed to command 50,195,000 acres of culturable land, and we shall have actually irrigated close on 22 million acres during the year.

81. Surveys of irrigation possibilities in the different provinces have been actively pushed on, and the programmes are approaching completion. In Sind the surveys include a barrage across the Indus at Sukkur to supply water for the Right and Left Bank Canals, and to improve the supply and extend the irrigation on the Eastern Nara affluent of the Indus. It is expected that the preparation of these projects will be completed during 1908-1909. The effect of them when completed will be to increase the area commanded by about 2½ million acres.

In the Deccan extensive surveys for protective works have been in hand to determine the possibilities of irrigation from all the great rivers fed from the Western Ghats. Estimates for two schemes have been sanctioned and the surveys for most of the others are well advanced. The aggregate area irrigable from these works is estimated at 1,886,000 acres and the probable cost at Rs 16,52,00,000.

82. In addition to the canals actually in operation, there are altogether 42 projects which are either under construction, or awaiting sanction, or being examined by the professional advisers of Government. Of these, 15 are productive, and 24 are of the protective class. They are designed to irrigate 3·16 million acres and 3·12 million acres respectively, at a total capital cost of 14½ crores and 27½ crores, respectively; and the former are estimated to yield a net return of 8½ per cent. on the outlay. As has been explained on former occasions, our chief difficulty lies in procuring a trained staff strong enough to cope with the work, as well as the great labour force required to execute it.

Ways and Means.

83. As stated in paragraph 53, our revenue account closes with a surplus of £571,500 which is carried forward to the second part of the statement dealing with Capital and Debt transactions, including Deposits, Remittances and Advances. Our total estimate of Capital Expenditure not chargeable to Revenue on Railways and Irrigation Major Works is £11,000,000, of which £1,000,000 is for Irrigation, £8,555,100 for State Railways, and £1,444,900 for expenditure by Railway Companies. In addition to the above, we have to find £950,400 for the discharge of permanent debt. We have also to make a net payment of £207,200 on account of loans to local bodies, advances to cultivators, etc. Our aggregate capital requirements thus amount to £12,157,600.

84. To meet this outlay we have (1) the revenue surplus of £571,500, (2) a portion, namely, £746,000 of the 3½ per cent. sterling loan of £5,000,000 raised in England in January 1908 which will be received in the ensuing year, (3) the net receipts of the Post Office and other Savings Banks which are estimated at £453,500, (4) a net receipt of £523,800 under Deposits and Remittances, (5) a sum of £666,700 to be taken from the profits on rupee coinage and (6) a sum of £4,900,000 to be raised by Railway Companies. These various resources amount to £7,861,500 leaving £4,296,100 still to be provided. In order to meet this, we propose to borrow 3 crores of rupees or £2,000,000 in India and to raise £500,000 by temporary India Bills in England, the remaining £1,796,100 being met by a reduction in the cash balances. Our cash balances are expected to stand on the 31st March 1909 at £12,200,000 in India, and at £3,759,000 in England.

The announcement regarding the amounts to be borrowed in England and India is made subject to the usual reservation, and the Government of India retain full discretion to vary the programme, as now declared, to any extent that may be considered desirable.

85. The present intention of the Secretary of State is to draw bills on India to the amount of £18,500,000 but this also is subject to a similar reservation. This estimate of Council drawings is for the amount necessary to provide for the Secretary of State's requirements: but additional bills will, as usual, be sold, if needed to meet the demands of trade.

Note Circulation.

86. I append the usual statements illustrating the note circulation and the Government balances with the Presidency Banks. The first of the two statements shows separately (1) the gross circulation, and (2) the circulation, excluding the notes held by the Reserve Treasuries, and by the Presidency Banks at their head offices.

Coinage and the Mints.

87. The gross outturn of rupees at the mints during each of the last five years has been as follows:—

	Lakhs.
1903-1904	16,17
1904-1905	10,88
1905-1906	19,60
1906-1907	25,37
1907-1908 (Estimate)	17,30

During the earlier months of the year the trade demand was active and the mints were kept busily employed in providing rupees to meet it. From September, however, it slackened off very rapidly and the requirements of the year as a whole have proved substantially below those of the two preceding twelve months.

88. In the last Financial Statement it was explained that the mechanical difficulties in turning out nickel coins with a scalloped edge had been overcome, and that the issue of the coin to the public would begin before long. This has been done. The first batch of the new coins was ready about the middle of July, and from the 1st August supplies were made available to the public at the larger treasuries.

These at once achieved a large measure of popularity. During August nearly 2½ millions of them were issued to the public, and for some time the demand was greater than the Mint could supply. This has since been provided for, and to the end of February, we had issued nearly 20 millions of pieces, to the face value of 12½ lakhs of rupees. It is estimated that our existing plant can turn out about 6 millions of pieces a month, and though it is too soon to form an opinion as to the eventual demand, we do not think it necessary at present to provide further machinery. The earlier issues were found to be somewhat brittle, but this difficulty has been overcome by the addition of a small quantity of manganese to the cupro-nickel alloy.

89. In Madras a rumour was at one time circulated that the coin had been a failure, and that it was to be withdrawn by Government. This however was promptly refuted by the Local Government, and since then we have heard of no further influences prejudicial to its popularity. On the contrary, the reports we have received indicate that its circulation is increasing in nearly every province, and there is a considerable prospect of its displacing the bronze currency in some measure, though the extent to which this is likely to happen cannot of course be predicted at present.

Exchange.

90. The average rate obtained for Council drafts during the first 11 months of the year was 1s. 4'03d. which may be compared with the rates prevailing during the past ten years, as shown below :—

	s.	d.
1897-1898	1	3'402
1898-1899	1	3'978
1899-1900	1	4'667
1900-1901	1	3'973
1901-1902	1	3'987
1902-1903	1	4'002
1903-1904	1	4'049
1904-1905	1	4'045
1905-1906	1	4'042
1906-1907	1	4'083

For some years past, there has been no occasion to say much in the Financial Statement regarding the course of exchange. During the current year, however, the steady level which had been maintained for a considerable period was temporarily affected, and though the depression was of moderate extent and brief duration, it attracted a good deal of public attention, while the action taken by Government in regard to it formed the subject of criticism in various quarters. It may be of interest therefore to note briefly what actually occurred, and to endeavour to trace its causes.

91. Up to August 1907, exchange followed what has for some years been its normal course, and was steady at a point or two over 1s. 4d., although the drawings of the Secretary of State had been exceptionally heavy during the first four months of the year. In August, however, the demand for money showed decided signs of slackening. The sales of Council bills in July had exceeded two crores of rupees, and in the ordinary course this would have been followed by a heavy run on our rupee reserves. No such run took place, and the issues from the currency reserve during August amounted to only 68½ lakhs, as compared with 2½ crores in August of 1906, and more than 1½ crores in that month in each of the two preceding years. The explanation lay in the prospects of the jute trade. The crop was expected to be a good one, but prices had fallen greatly, buyers were holding off, and there was no outflow of money into the jute districts as in the previous year. The uncertainty as to the future reacted on the Secretary of State's drawings and in the first week of the month he sold only 40 lakhs of bills; there were practically no telegraphic transfers sold during the month, and exchange fell to a steady 1s. 4d.

92. In September, a fresh and more serious cause for anxiety arose. It then became apparent that the autumn rains were in marked defect over a large part of India, and particularly in the wheat-growing provinces. Exchange weakened a point, and sales of Councils amounted to only 131 lakhs during the month, as compared with 340 and 397 lakhs in the corresponding month of the two previous years. In October there was a slight improvement in jute prospects, but exchange failed to rally, and by the end of the month it was clear that the export trade in wheat would be insignificant, and that business generally would suffer the usual consequences of a severe scarcity in Northern India.

93. Before the beginning of November therefore the conditions for a weak and stagnant exchange were fully established. The jute trade was inactive: the wheat trade was doomed; cotton was somewhat uncertain; and much of the Burma rice might have to be diverted to India instead of going abroad. To these conditions there was suddenly superadded an external complication as serious as it was unforeseen. On the 20th of October the Mercantile National Bank of the United States of America was announced to be in difficulties; several big Trust companies fell in its wake; and by the beginning of November a great financial crisis had developed in the United States. The origin and course of that crisis are not material to the present purpose. The point which concerns us is that America fell upon the world's store of gold with all the insistence of panic. Credit was temporarily paralyzed, and the gold currency rose for a time to a premium of 4 per cent. Before the panic abated, over 23 millions sterling in gold had been poured into the country; and the result was to denude the available gold reserves of Europe in the most serious manner. The drain was most directly felt in London, and the Bank of England in self-defence raised its rate on the 4th November to 6 per cent, which was again raised to 7 per cent three days later. The gravity of the crisis is shown by the fact that London had not experienced a 7 per cent bank rate since 1873.

94. The effect on India was instantaneous, for the tightness of money combined with the slackening of our export trade destroyed for the time the market for the Secretary of State's bills. On the 6th November tenders dropped to $1-3\frac{2}{3}$ and he was able to sell only 30 lakhs. Thereafter for five weeks he practically withdrew from the market altogether; but the scarcity of gold and the absence of exports continued, and exchange ceased to be stagnant and moved steadily downwards. On the 13th November it fell to $1-3\frac{1}{4}$, on the 18th to $1-3\frac{3}{4}$, and on the 25th to $1-3\frac{1}{8}$. This was the lowest point reached during the crisis.

95. The significance of these quotations lies of course in the fact that they are below the point—in present conditions $1-3\frac{3}{4}$ for Telegraphic transfers—at which it becomes profitable to export sovereigns from India, provided always that the latter can be obtained at par. This fact, coupled with the continued demand for gold for America, directed attention to India as a possible source of supply, and in the first half of November Government was approached from more than one quarter, to ascertain whether we should be willing to issue gold freely, i.e., without limit of amount, in exchange for rupees at Rs 15 to the £. It was of course understood that the sovereigns were wanted for export.

96. The matter was carefully considered. The theoretical arguments in favour of a liberal issue of gold as an antidote to a fall in exchange were freely admitted. But it was felt very strongly that the depression was not due exclusively to the contraction of exports. The demand for gold was made in part in the interest of our own trade; but it was also due in great measure to the American crisis and the latter factor was clearly one that had to be seriously reckoned with. Our own interests could most effectively be protected by the stoppage of Council drawings, and this course the Secretary of State had already adopted. Moreover, our whole supply of gold was only about $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions, of which only some 2 millions was at Bombay and Calcutta, and this was already being drawn off at the rate of about £400,000 a month for internal consumption. Had we complied with the demand for issues without limit, the whole available supply might have been drawn off in a few weeks, and we should then have been forced to discontinue them, with the possible result of precipitating a panic.

• For these reasons, we decided to stand by our legal rights. We are not bound to give sovereigns in exchange for rupees, except at our own convenience, and we do so primarily only to foster the internal use of gold. The Currency Offices were accordingly instructed not to issue gold in larger quantities than £10,000 to any individual on any one day.

97. Meanwhile, as stated above, the Secretary of State had virtually stopped the sale of Bills. To enable him to persevere in this course until favourable tenders should be received, he on the 25th November released one million sterling of the gold in the currency chest in London (which represents exports ready made), and further sums of one million and half a million were released on the 6th and 18th December, respectively. Lastly, a few days later, it was arranged with the approval of the Secretary of State that, if exchange (which in the meantime had recovered) should again fall below gold export point, Telegraphic Transfers on London should be offered for sale in India at a fixed rate. No public announcement to that effect was thought necessary, but the decision was communicated to the Banks at the Presidency towns. To avoid any possible misapprehension it should be clearly explained that this contingent offer was not unlimited. On the contrary, the amount of transfers was to be limited to a defined though reasonably substantial figure, and Government reserved to itself the fullest discretion to withdraw the offer at any moment without notice. The arrangement remained in force till the last days of February, but no occasion arose for putting it into operation. At the end of that month it was modified by the Secretary of State in communication with the Exchange Banks at home, to the extent that bills on London would be offered for sale, instead of transfers, the rate being suitably modified. This arrangement still holds good, but here also no occasion has arisen for putting it into force.

98. The effect of these measures was immediate. On the 25th November when exchange was at $1-3\frac{1}{16}$ —the lowest point reached—the Secretary of State set free £1,000,000 of his currency gold. On the 27th, exchange rose to $1-3\frac{3}{16}$, on the 29th to $1-3\frac{1}{8}$, and on the 30th to $1-3\frac{3}{8}$. Gold export point was passed, and during December the rate remained fairly steady at an average of $1-3\frac{3}{8}$. About the middle of the month the Secretary of State began to sell Bills again, and sales gradually advanced to a weekly allotment of 80 lakhs. During February the amounts again fell off, but the rate obtained never fell below $1-3\frac{3}{8}$.

99. Government has been criticized for its refusal to promise to issue gold for export without limit, and it has been alleged that such an undertaking would at once have restored public confidence, while in all probability only a small quantity of gold would actually have been taken. I cannot admit that this criticism is well founded. It has been shown above how very small the available stock of gold in India was. Had we given the promise required, and had it been put to the proof, it could not possibly have been fulfilled. That fact alone is a conclusive reason for not giving it. We could, no doubt, have undertaken to issue up to a certain limited amount. That, however, was not what was demanded of us; no assurance was forthcoming; and probably none was possible, that the actual withdrawals would in fact be limited; and it is essential to remember that the gold was wanted not merely to redress a temporary defect in the balance of Indian trade, but also directly or indirectly to supply the demand from America, which had already absorbed 23 millions sterling, and was only restrained from further inroads on the London market by reason of an abnormally high bank rate.

100. One further comment has been made to which I may very briefly allude. It has been suggested that the incidents of November last have cast doubts on the sufficiency of the Gold Standard Reserve, and on the action of Government in authorizing the employment of a portion of the future profits on coinage for capital expenditure on Railways. I do not propose to discuss this policy, the views of Government in regard to which were made public last August. What I desire to point out is that the course of events last winter is not really relevant to the adequacy or otherwise of the Gold Standard Reserve. Between us and the Gold Standard Reserve there stands the gold in the Currency reserve, and this constitutes our first line of defence. The utilization of that gold in India and England simultaneously, and in a moderate degree, proved sufficient to arrest the fall in exchange, and it never became necessary to bring the Gold Standard Reserve into play at all. We are of course aware that some sections of the commercial public unfortunately hold views differing from our own as to the adequacy of the Gold Standard Reserve; but whether we are in the right or they, I do not think that any inference of value can be drawn on the question from the course of exchange last November. If hereafter at any time circumstances should arise which make the employment of the Gold Standard Reserve justifiable and expedient the public may rest assured that there will be no hesitation about using it. But the time and the method of doing so must be determined at the discretion of the Secretary of State, by whom the Reserve is controlled.

PART II

BEING A MEMORANDUM BY THE FINANCIAL SECRETARY EXAMINING THE DETAILS OF THE ACCOUNTS AND ESTIMATES.

101. Introductory.—The decision to exclude Local transactions from the general accounts and estimates has involved, not only the disappearance of the Local column of account, but also the absorption into the general revenues and expenditure of certain funds which were not truly of a local character. These changes will not in reality take effect until the 1st April, 1908: the funds to be absorbed will retain their separate existence until that date, when their balances will pass into the general balances; and the funds to be excluded will form part of the general accounts until the end of the current year. But, for purposes of the detailed explanations of the Financial Statement, it is necessary to compare like with like. With certain exceptions therefore which will be mentioned immediately, all figures of general revenue and expenditure which are entered in the Financial Statement and its appendices have been revised so as to eliminate the variations due to the exclusion of Local figures from next year. The effect is that, from 1904-1905 onwards, the figures now presented are prepared as if the excluded funds had been excluded, and the absorbed funds had been absorbed, from the 1st April 1904 instead of from the 1st April 1908. The true figures which have already been brought to account or have still to be brought to final account for the years 1904—1908 are not affected: their re-arrangement in the Financial Statement is purely statistical and for purposes of comparison; and this should be borne in mind in collating, for example, the 1905-1906 figures in Section IV of this Part with those given in the corresponding paragraphs last year. In two places, vis., in Section I (which covers the same ground as paragraphs 28—32 of Part I) and in columns 1 to 5 of the table at page 63, it has not been practicable to readjust the figures; and in statement D of Appendix 1, the balances of absorbed funds have not been passed into the Provincial balances until the beginning of 1908-1909. Everywhere else, the re-arrangement described above has been carried out.

Section I.—The Accounts of 1906-1907.

102. The Accounts of the year show a surplus of £1,589,340, which is better by £263,240 than the surplus of £1,326,100 anticipated in the Revised Estimates framed in March last. 1906-1907.
General Result
of Accounts.

The variations between the figures finally entering into the Accounts and those taken in the Budget and Revised Estimates of the year are fully explained in the Appropriation Report published in the Gazette of India of the 14th instant.

103. The following is a general comparison of the Revised Estimates with the Accounts of the year:— 1906-1907.

104. Both the total revenue and the total expenditure were less than the estimate, the net improvement being £164,536. In the Imperial Section of the accounts, the improvement was £263,240, but the Provincial and Local Section showed a deterioration of £98,704.

105. A prominent feature in the improvement in the Imperial Section was an increase (£102,269) of Army receipts coupled with a reduction (£174,255) of Army expenditure. The former was largely due to receipts from the Imperial Government, mainly on account of the extra cost of sea transport occasioned by the despatch of short service men to India during the years 1903-04 to 1906-07, but also on account of the payments due in respect of Indian regiments lent for service in the Colonies, and the value of articles in possession of regiments transferred from the Indian to the Home establishment. The decrease of Army expenditure was chiefly in the Home payments for Ordnance stores; the expenditure in India, however, was also over-estimated to the extent of £62,995.

106. Imperial and Provincial taken together, the actual receipts turned out better than the latest estimate under Salt (£72,706), Miscellaneous (£55,205), Opium (£52,828), Customs (£44,592) and Interest (£31,050). These improvements, however, were more than counterbalanced by a decrease of £303,563 in the net receipts from State Railways, chiefly from the Eastern Bengal, East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways. The estimate of the East Indian Railway had anticipated an improvement in coal traffic which was not realised. Working expenses in general towards the close of the year, and expenditure on renewals in particular, exceeded expectation, while sufficient allowance had apparently not been made for the effect of the Easter holidays at the end of March in postponing the adjustment of traffic receipts. As already explained in paragraph 29, the increase of Salt revenue was due to exceptionally heavy clearances following the reduction of the rate of duty with effect from the 20th March 1907; this was most marked in Northern India. The exports of Malwa opium in the last month of the year were also exceptionally high. The improvement under Customs (£44,592) was chiefly in the export duty on rice; the receipts on account of the excise duty on cotton manufactures and the imports of manufactured articles and petroleum were also better than was anticipated in March last. Under Miscellaneous, the enhancement was caused by a credit on account of the sale-proceeds of land made over to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the Bombay Port Trust in March 1907. The unexpected realisation in that month of arrears of interest on the Kidderpore Dock and Port Trust loans mainly accounts for the increase (£31,050) over the Revised Estimate of Interest receipts. Land Revenue as a whole fell considerably short of the Revised Estimate, chiefly in Burma and Bombay; but a large sum had to be transferred from the Provincial to the Imperial share as adjustments necessitated by the change in the method of calculating the interest on the irrigation portion of the public debt, as explained in paragraphs 17 to 23.

107. Apart from the decrease of Army expenditure referred to in paragraph 105, the only large differences in expenditure occur in the charges for interest on the ordinary and the railway and irrigation debt. These are the result of the change, to which reference has already been made, in the system of distributing the total charge for interest on the public debt of the country. The increase over the Revised Estimate under the head 13.—Interest amounted to £573,858. On the other hand, there were decreases of £460,115 and £142,669 in the charges for "interest on debt" under the heads 38.—State Railways and 42.—Major Irrigation Works. The estimate of Interest charges had thus as a whole been slightly excessive. There was also a small over-estimate of Forest expenditure: in Burma, the provision for the purchase of elephants was not fully utilised and difficulty was experienced in obtaining labour; while in Bombay, a contractor failed to supply timber and the provision for payments of royalty on the sale-proceeds of teak on private lands was not fully worked up to. Political expenditure on the contrary exceeded the estimate by £46,834, the drawings of His Majesty the Amir against the balance of his subsidy having been larger in March than was anticipated.

108. The reduction of £98,704 in the Provincial and Local surplus is the result of decreases of £143,089 and £44,385 in revenue and expenditure, respectively. The circumstances mentioned in paragraph 106, in connection with Land Revenue, contributed largely towards the difference of £143,089 on the Revenue side, while the altered method of calculating interest resulted in a decrease of £74,827, in the charge for "interest on debt" under the head 42.—Major Irrigation Works. This and other smaller decreases of expenditure, combined with an excess of £29,505 over the estimate for Stationery and Printing, made up the net decrease of £44,385 on the expenditure side.

Section II.—The Revised Estimate of 1907-1908.

109. As indicated in paragraphs 14 and 101, the absorption in the general revenues of certain minor funds which have hitherto been shown as Incorporated Local Funds in the estimates and accounts, and the exclusion from the Government accounts of all other local funds, have necessitated a certain rearrangement of the Budget Estimate of 1907-1908; there is consequently a slight alteration (£100) in the surplus of £774,700 announced in March last. The Revised Estimate of 1907-1908 has been prepared on the same basis. A general comparison of the two estimates is made in the following table:—

1907-1908.

110. It is now anticipated that the total revenue will be less than the total expenditure by £791,600, but as the excess of expenditure over revenue in the Provincial section alone is £1,027,000, there is an Imperial surplus of £235,400. The falling-off of £539,200 as compared with the surplus of the Budget is the net result of decreases of £1,270,300 and £731,100 in Imperial revenue and expenditure, respectively. Under Provincial, there is a decrease of £240,500 in revenue and an increase of £268,600 in expenditure. The Local Governments will thus draw from their Provincial balances £509,100 more than was anticipated in the Budget. As a whole, therefore, the Revised Estimate shows a deterioration of £1,048,300.

and Revenue.

112. The main feature of the Revised Estimate is the very great decrease of Land Revenue, which reflects the unsatisfactory character of the autumn monsoon of 1907. In the United Provinces alone, the collections of Land Revenue are less than the Budget by 141'14 lakhs; and in Bombay and the Punjab there are decreases of 49'13 and 20'96 lakhs, respectively, although in the former province there were unexpectedly large collections of outstandings in the first half of the year. The decline in the Central Provinces and Bengal is less (12'87 and 4'83 lakhs, respectively), but in Burma it is 30'08 lakhs; the bulk of this is due to the failure of the crops in several of the Upper Burma districts, but 8'8 lakhs represent a transfer to Irrigation revenue of the irrigation share of the consolidated land revenue rate in Upper Burma which has hitherto been credited to Land Revenue and taken as an indirect receipt in the administrative accounts of irrigation works. Only in Eastern Bengal and Assam and the North-West Frontier Province do the estimates show small improvements (3'65 and 2'32 lakhs); these, however, are partly counterbalanced by a falling-off of 2'11 lakhs in Madras and the minor Provinces. It will be understood that these figures include the share of land revenue due to irrigation.

Of the total decrease of Land Revenue, 215'46 lakhs are in the Imperial share, and 39'69 lakhs in the share accruing to Provincial. Both these figures include certain special assignments to Local Governments which are adjusted by deduction from the Imperial and addition to the Provincial shares. The more important of these are assignments of 32'72 lakhs to the United Provinces to raise the closing Provincial balance in the Revised Estimate to the prescribed minimum, and 9'25 lakhs to Bombay to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlement. There are also assignments of 5'75 lakhs to the Punjab and 1'12 lakhs to the Central Provinces, in respect of similar guarantees for Irrigation and Land Revenue, respectively; 5 lakhs for tank restoration works in Madras; and 10 lakhs to Burma, on account of the first instalment of the Imperial contribution towards the cost of the Rangoon river training scheme. On the other hand, there are new recurring assignments from Provincial to Imperial aggregating 12'09 lakhs in connection with the new system of calculating interest on the Irrigation debt (vide paragraphs 17 to 23).

Customs, Opium
and Mint receipts.

113. The variations in the receipts from Railways, Customs, Opium and Mint affect only the Imperial surplus. Railways will be dealt with in the next paragraph. Of the increase in Opium receipts, 45'3 lakhs are in the sales of Bengal opium, an average price of Rs. 1,350 per chest having been realised as against Rs. 1,250 per chest taken in the Budget. The exports of Malwa opium are also expected to result in an increase (10.25 lakhs) over the Budget Estimate of pass-fees. The improvement under Customs is remarkable, the increase over the receipts of 1906-1907 being no less than 91.85 lakhs, of which only 36.58 lakhs were anticipated in the Budget. The betterness of 55.27 lakhs is distributed over most of the tariff heads, chiefly cotton manufactures (15.5 lakhs), manufactured articles (14 lakhs), silver (13.5 lakhs), metals other than silver (9.5 lakhs), petroleum (8.5 lakhs), articles of food and drink (4.1 lakhs), and excise duty on cotton goods (3.5 lakhs). Only under export duty and sugar, and to a small extent under spirits, were the receipts over-estimated. In the first case, the decrease of 15 lakhs is one of the consequences of famine, as large quantities of rice which ordinarily would have been consigned abroad have been diverted to Indian ports, where no duty is paid. The comparatively high Mint receipts are due to the unexpectedly heavy demand for bronze coin and for the new nickel one-anna coin. The profit on the mintage of these is now estimated at 34 lakhs as against 10 lakhs budgeted for. The renewal of dollar coinage and the heavy output of rupees in the earlier part of the year have also contributed towards the large improvement.

114. Next to Land Revenue, the net receipts from Railways show the largest decline (1,08.81 lakhs). This is due not to an over-estimate of the gross receipts, but to a growth of working expenses which has largely exceeded the corresponding growth of earnings. Under State Railways, the latter amounts to 1,01.7 lakhs, of which 35.9 lakhs represent the receipts of the Madras Railway since its purchase from the Company on the 1st January 1908. The gross increase of working expenses is, however, 1.79 lakhs, of which 18 lakhs is due to the acquisition of the Madras Railway. The decrease in the net traffic receipts of other State Railways is therefore 95.2 lakhs, and this is largely due to heavy expenditure on renewals and repairs, chiefly on the East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula, Rajputana-Malwa, Oudh and Rohilkhand and Eastern Bengal Railways.

The purchase of the Madras Railway with effect from the 1st January 1908 causes a decrease of 27.71 lakhs in the net traffic receipts of Guaranteed Companies. The corresponding increase under State Railways is 17.9 lakhs. The difference of 9.81 lakhs is due to the settlement of outstanding liabilities on the closing of the accounts of the guaranteed line.

115. The Salt revenue shows satisfactory results, the reduction in the rate of duty announced in March last having largely increased consumption. The increase over the Budget would have been greater than 7.03 lakhs but for the fact that the clearances of salt between the 20th and the 31st March 1907 were exceptionally heavy; dealers had been deferring issues for some time in anticipation of a possible reduction in duty. The receipts under Stamps have increased in most of the Provinces. Only in Bengal (4.5 lakhs), the United Provinces, and Eastern Bengal and Assam (3.5 lakhs each) have the increases been at all considerable. In Bombay and Burma, there are decreases of 1 and 4 lakhs; but the Stamp revenue, as a whole, shows steady progress. The increase under Minor Irrigation Works is chiefly due to a change in the method of accounting for the irrigation share (8.8 lakhs) of the consolidated land revenue rate in Upper Burma; vide paragraph 112. The improvement under Assessed Taxes is chiefly in Bombay (4.52 lakhs), where it is largely due to the continued development of the cotton trade.

116. Under Forest, there is a decrease of revenue in all the large provinces, except Madras and Bombay, where improvements of 4.5 and 4 lakhs, respectively, are expected. The decrease is largest in Burma (18 lakhs), where departmental timber operations have been curtailed. The Budget Estimate as usual provided for a moderate receipt under Exchange (20 lakhs), but the actual gain is not likely to exceed 9 lakhs this year. Of this, 6.01 lakhs represents the difference of exchange in connection with the transactions of the late Madras Railway Company. The gain on the Secretary of State's drawings is small, as the rate obtained for Bills on India has fallen considerably during the year, and averages now only a very small fraction over 16d. per rupee. Under Army, the decrease is chiefly in the receipts for malt liquor, consequent on the troops making their own arrangements for the supply of beer from the 1st of January 1908; it is balanced by a corresponding decrease in expenditure, as explained in Appendix II.

117. The important variations in expenditure are the following :—

expenditure.
Interest charges.

118. The charges for Interest on the public debt as a whole are in excess of the Budget by 22.36 lakhs. The payments in India show a small decrease; but the sterling loans were issued at a discount and at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, instead of 3 per cent which has been customary in recent years; a temporary loan of £1,000,000 was also raised in England. The differences appearing against interest on ordinary, railway and irrigation debt, respectively, in the foregoing table, are mainly adjustments, due to the change in the method of calculating the charges which is fully described in paragraphs 17 to 23 of Part I. The effect of this important reform is a large reduction in the disproportionate burden of interest which has hitherto fallen on Railways and Productive Irrigation Works.

119. The estimate of Famine Relief expenditure is 77·39 lakhs. The distribution by Provinces and the comparison with the Budget is as follows :—

and Insurance.

In accordance with the new arrangements for the distribution of Famine Relief expenditure between Imperial and Provincial Revenues, described in paragraphs 48 to 56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-08, 54·88 lakhs of the total charge of 77·39 lakhs has fallen upon Imperial. The Budget however contained a provision of 33·11 lakhs under the head "Reduction or Avoidance of Debt" (Imperial) and this has been diverted to meet a portion of the Imperial charge under the head Famine Relief, thus causing a corresponding reduction under the former head. Owing to the Imperial Government undertaking the cost of famine relief up to a fixed limit, it is only in the United Provinces that any material portion of the direct expenditure on relief measures has fallen upon Provincial Revenues: the provision on this account in the Revised Estimate is 22·51 lakhs. It has not been found possible to spend the full Budget grant for the construction of Protective Irrigation Works; and there will be a lapse of 8·88 lakhs.

120. The whole increase in Civil Works expenditure is in the Provincial section and 9·92 lakhs occurs in the Central Provinces and Berar; this is chiefly due to the programme of useful public works having been developed during the course of the year to provide employment for labour in famine tracts, in preference to special measures of relief. There have also been increases in Burma, Bombay and Eastern Bengal and Assam, but these are largely counterbalanced by reductions in the United Provinces, Punjab and Madras. The increase under Stationery and Printing is distributed over most of the Provinces, but the fluctuations individually are of no great importance. The increase in the working expenses of Major Irrigation Works is chiefly in the Punjab, where important works and repairs for which the Budget did not provide had to be undertaken on the Western Jumna, Upper Bari Doab, Sirhind, and Lower Chenab canals; there was also unforeseen expenditure on special repairs to canals in Bengal, and a transfer of certain canals from the Minor Works category to Major Works.

121. Under Courts of Law, scarcity has led to specially high payments as allowances for dearth of grain; in the Punjab, Bengal and Eastern Bengal, the payments to law officers for the conduct of criminal suits have also been above the average, while in Burma an increase has resulted from the re-organisation of the provincial and judicial service, and the transfer to this head of charges for the service of processes which have hitherto been taken under "3.—Land Revenue." The Jail charges have been raised by the enhanced cost of dietary, due to the high price of food grains in most provinces.

122. Of the large decrease in Army expenditure, 51·05 lakhs is in "special" expenditure and 38·4 lakhs is in ordinary expenditure. These variations, as also that under Military Works, are explained in Appendix II. The Revised Estimate of Army expenditure includes 7·5 lakhs for the Bazar Valley Field Force.

123. The decrease in Opium expenditure results from the contraction of the poppy-growing area in Bengal, while the saving in Political expenditure is due to the drawings of His Majesty the Amir, against the balance of his subsidy, having been much smaller than was expected. The transfer of certain canals to the Major Works category accounts for part of the decrease under Minor Irrigation Works; the bulk of it, however, is due to inability to utilise fully the Budget grant. The decline in Forest expenditure is less than the corresponding decrease of revenue and, like the latter, occurs chiefly in Burma; it is due to the curtailment of departmental timber operations and to the provision for the purchase of elephants and a launch not having been fully utilised. The reduction in the charges for Interest on Capital deposited by Railway Companies is a consequence of the stringency in the English money market, which has led to the raising of less capital by Railway Companies than the Budget anticipated.

Variations in

Provincial

Revenue.

125. All the important variations which have contributed to the net deterioration of 80'88 lakhs under Imperial have been explained in the preceding paragraphs. Under Provincial, the decrease of 36'07 lakhs in revenue occurs chiefly under the following heads:—

	Lakhs.
Increases—
Land Revenue due to Irrigation	20'97
Minor Irrigation Works	10'00
Stamps	4'67
Receipts in aid of Superannuation	3'85
Assessed Taxes	3'05
	42'54
Decreases—
Land Revenue	60'66
Forest	10 49
Miscellaneous	5 29
Other heads (net)	2'17
	78'61

The net decrease in the Provincial share of Land Revenue (39'69 lakhs) has been explained in paragraph 112. The distribution of the net figure into a decrease of 60'66 lakhs and an increase of 20'97 lakhs, as shown in the foregoing table, is purely an account matter. In Bombay and the Punjab, it was formerly the practice to divide the gross land revenue collections between Imperial and Provincial, before deducting from them the portion of Land Revenue due to Irrigation. The deduction on the latter account was then made from the Imperial share of Land Revenue and credited as an Irrigation receipt (Imperial). It has now been decided to deduct the revenue due to irrigation and transfer it to the shared head "Major Works" before allocating the rest of the Land Revenue receipts between Imperial and Provincial. The net effect on Imperial and Provincial balances is nil; and the distribution of the receipts from Land Revenue due to Irrigation now follows that of the parent Irrigation head.

126. The differences under Stamps, Assessed Taxes, Forest and Minor Irrigation Works have been explained in paragraphs 115 and 116. The increase in Superannuation Receipts is caused by a special credit of 3.53 lakhs in Bengal, representing the sale proceeds of debentures belonging to the Calcutta Police Superannuation Fund which has been abolished. Under Miscellaneous, the main cause of the decrease of 5.29 lakhs is the remission, with effect from 1907-1908, of fees which have hitherto been recovered from Municipalities and certain other local bodies for the audit of their accounts; there is also a decrease in the sums accruing to Government on account of deposits which have remained unclaimed for years.

127. The increase of 40.3 lakhs in Provincial expenditure is the result of the following variations:—

128. The increase in the Provincial charge for Interest is chiefly in the United Provinces (3.35 lakhs), agricultural conditions having necessitated the issue of exceptionally heavy takavi advances, upon which the Local Government has to pay interest to Imperial revenues. Under General Administration, the increase is distributed over all the provinces and is nowhere considerable; it is partly due to the remission, with effect from 1907-1908, of fees which have hitherto been recovered for the audit of District Boards' accounts and taken in reduction of Provincial expenditure under this head. The decrease of expenditure under the head Land Revenue is partly in Madras, where the provision of a lakh for the constitution of additional districts has not been utilised and savings have occurred on similar provisions for revision of establishments; there are also general savings in Bombay and Burma, which are partly counterbalanced by increased grain compensation and other charges in the United Provinces and elsewhere. Most of the remaining variations have already been explained in paragraphs 118 to 121 and 123.

figures.

The figures this year present no outstanding features of special importance. Until the next harvest is assured, scarcity must unfortunately continue in the greater part of the United Provinces, in large tracts of Bombay, the Central Provinces and the Punjab, and in certain districts in other provinces. Expenditure on famine relief, both direct and indirect, must consequently be high; and there will be heavy remissions and suspensions of land revenue, as well as losses under the other heads of receipts which are affected by scarcity. No provision has thus been made for any reduction of taxation; and the grants to Local Governments in aid of administrative developments which have been a prominent feature of recent budgets have had to be kept within the most moderate dimensions. The estimates have been framed generally on the assumption that normal agricultural conditions will be restored with the next monsoon; and they anticipate a small surplus of only 85·72 lakhs (£571,500).

Assignments for Police expenditure
and Sanitation.

130. The Budget Estimate provides for special assignments to Local Governments for further Police reform and for Sanitation of 12 and 30 lakhs (£80,000 and £200,000), respectively. The distribution by Provinces is as follows:—

	For Police reform. Lakhs.	For Sanitation. Lakhs.
Madras	3·50
Bombay	4·25	4·50
Bengal	4·00	4·50
United Provinces	5·00
Punjab	4·00
Burma	3·00
Eastern Bengal and Assam	1·25	3·00
Central Provinces and Berar	1·50	2·00
North-West Frontier Province	0·50
Minor Administrations	1·00	...
TOTAL	12·00	30·00

No portion of the additional grant for Police reform is allotted to Madras, the United Provinces, or Burma, as full provision on this account was made on the occasion of the last revision of the settlements of these Provinces; and no grant is being made to the Punjab as it has already received subsidies which cover the cost of all reforms that are likely to be carried into effect before the end of the year.

1908-1909.
General.

131. In the Budget of 1908-1909, the total revenue and the total expenditure give a surplus of £46,400, and as the excess of expenditure over revenue in the Provincial section alone is £525,100, there is an Imperial surplus of £571,500. The improvement of £336,100 as compared with the surplus of the Revised Estimate is the net result of increases of £612,000 and £275,900 in Imperial revenue and expenditure, respectively. Under Provincial, there are increases of £1,837,700 in revenue and £1,335,800 in expenditure. The Local Governments will thus draw from their Provincial balances £501,900 less than in 1907-1908. On the whole, therefore, Imperial and Provincial figures being amalgamated, the Budget shows an improvement of £838,000 as compared with the Revised Estimate.

This is very largely the result of the decided improvement of 221·49 lakhs (£1,476,700) which is expected in the collections of Land Revenue. The net Railway receipts show an increase of 120·01 lakhs (£800,100); and there are enhancements of 29·19 lakhs (£194,600) and 22·62 lakhs (£150,800) in the receipts from Excise and Irrigation, respectively. The expenditure on Civil Works is anticipated to be less by 33·70 lakhs (£224,700) than is provided for in the current year's Revised Estimate; and there is a reduction of 26·34 lakhs (£175,600) in Opium expenditure.

132. Against these improvements, provision has had to be made for a decline of 57 lakhs (£380,000) in the Opium revenue. The Army receipts have fallen off by 19·04 lakhs (£127,000); and the Army expenditure has risen by 32·69 lakhs (£217,900). Famine Relief is responsible for an increased charge of 54·68 lakhs (£364,500). There is a drop in the Mint revenue of 24.88 lakhs (£165,900), and the Interest on the public debt has risen by 35.08 lakhs (£233,900). Among other anticipated increases of expenditure, the chief are under the heads Police (£301,100), Medical (£280,000) and Education (£183,200). It should also be noted that, under the terms of the new financial settlement with the United Provinces, a transfer of Imperial revenue, which is estimated at about 16½ lakhs net, has been made to the provincial account; this of course does not affect the gross figures.

133. The following table shows the more important heads of Revenue and compares for each of them the Budget figures of next year with the latest estimate of receipts during the current year:—

134. Based, as they are, on the expectation of the return of normal conditions, the estimates of Land Revenue show an increase in most of the Provinces. In the United Provinces, Bombay and Burma where the failure of crops has necessitated specially large remissions and suspensions this year, the increases are taken at 1,15.17, 64.96 and 29 lakhs, respectively; in Bengal it is 5 lakhs, and less elsewhere. Only in the North-West Frontier Province is there a small decline (1.25 lakhs), due to the necessity for granting remissions and suspensions of revenue in four districts.

135. One of the main features of the Railway estimates of 1908-1909 is the absence of any entries, either on the receipt or expenditure side, against "Guaranteed Companies." This is a consequence of the purchase, with effect from the 1st January 1908, of the Madras Railway, the last of the old "Guaranteed lines,"—a category which once included the Bombay, Baroda and Central India, the Great Indian Peninsula, the South Indian and other important railway systems that have now been acquired by the State. The acquisition of the Madras Railway in the last quarter of the current year has occasioned increases of 1,26.8 and 91 lakhs in the Budget Estimate of gross receipts and working expenses, respectively, of State Railways for 1908-1909.

Apart from these exceptional transactions and the large differences which they occasion in the estimates of the Railways which will work the newly purchased line, the only important variations in the gross receipts and working expenses of State Railways, between the Revised Estimate of 1907-1908 and the Budget of next year, are the following:—

	INCREASE + DECREASE —
	Gross Receipts.	Working Expenses.	Net Receipts.

South Indian Railway . .	+ 7'18	+ 11'62	—4'44
Nilgiri Railway and Azikhall Mangalore Railway . . .	—4'85	—3'85

136. With effect from the 1st April 1908, the transactions of the Kalka-Simla Railway will be incorporated in the accounts of the North Western Railway, while those of the Nilgiri and Azikhall-Mangalore Railways have been included in the accounts of the South Indian Railway since the 1st January 1908. Apart from these disturbing factors, and the differences in the estimates occasioned by the transfer of the Katpadi-Dharmavaram-Pakala-Gudur section of the South Indian Railway to the Southern Mahratta Railway in January 1908, the several increases shown above represent the general development of traffic and its attendant expenses which may reasonably be expected next year. In the case of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, the recent opening of the Purulia-Ranchi branch and the fact that portions of the Gondia-Chanda and Vizianagram-Raipur Railways will also be opened to traffic account for part of the increase. The decrease of working expenses on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway follows on specially large expenditure for renewals in the current year. The scarcity in Gujerat is expected to augment the receipts of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, but working expenses are likely to be no higher than in 1907-1908. The decreases shown against the Mayavaram-Mutupet Railway are formal, being due to the exclusion from the Government accounts of the transactions of Local Funds, to which reference has already been made in paragraphs 9 to 15.

137. The growth of the Excise receipts has been taken with moderation, allowance having been made for the effects of the prevailing scarcity on this important source of revenue. The total increase of 29'19 lakhs is distributed over all the Provinces, but nowhere except in the Central Provinces does it exceed 5 lakhs. Increases of that amount are expected in Bengal and Madras, of 4'5 lakhs in Bombay, 3'58 lakhs in the Punjab, and 3 lakhs in Eastern Bengal and Assam. The expansion of Stamp receipts is largest in Bengal (6 lakhs) and Madras (5'4 lakhs). In Eastern Bengal and Assam and in Burma it is taken at 4 and 3 lakhs, respectively, and less elsewhere. A decline of a lakh is expected in the Central Provinces, while in the Punjab it is assumed that the receipts will be stationary.

138. The decrease of Opium revenue is a direct consequence of the policy of restricting exports to China. The Budget has been framed on the assumption that the total exports in 1908-1909 will not exceed 61,000 chests and that of these 45,900 will be of Bengal opium and 15,100 of the Malwa drug. The duty on the latter is fixed at R600 per chest, but the prices of Bengal opium vary at the monthly sales, and an average rate of R1,300 per chest has been adopted for the purposes of the Budget. This is R73 less than the price realised at the last sale; but in view of the fact that the average sale price has declined from R1,587 and R1,434 in 1904-1905 and 1905-1906, respectively, to R1,391 and R1,350 in the last two years, it has not been thought advisable to budget for a higher average than R1,300 next year.

Revenue.

Opium Revenue.

139. Under both Salt and Customs the increases of revenue are specially low, but this is not so much the result of the prevailing distress, as of the special conditions which have contributed to the receipts obtained under both these heads in the current year. In Madras, the Salt revenue was swelled by 19·7 lakhs owing to the recovery of duty at the rate of R1·8 per maund on credit sales of the year 1906-1907 which were made prior to the 20th March 1907. But for this disturbing factor, the increase of Salt revenue in the Budget would have been 29·5 lakhs, corresponding to an anticipated increase in consumption of approximately 2·9 million maunds. The rise under this head of revenue, under the stimulus of the recent reduction in duty, would have been much higher had it not been for the presence of famine in the land. Under Customs, the comparative smallness of the total increase is due to the unprecedented growth of the import duties this year which has already been noticed in paragraph 113. This growth has been so large, that it has been considered expedient to budget for a small decrease (0·55 lakh) next year, in view of the heavy accumulation of stocks and the probable slackening of imports. Nor has any material increase of the export dues on rice been feasible. In all recent famines of any intensity, the diversion of rice from the export trade to the markets in the distressed tracts has been considerable, and this will no doubt be again the case in 1908-1909. On the other hand, a moderate increase (3·5 lakhs) in the excise duty on cotton goods and the miscellaneous receipts of the Customs Department is anticipated.

140. Practically the whole increase of Irrigation revenue is in the Punjab. The failure of the wheat crop necessitated large special remissions on the Lower Chenab and Lower Jhelum canals this year; the Budget provides for no such loss in 1908-1909, while it takes account of a development of irrigation which is expected on the Lower Jhelum canal.

141. The Post Office Budget provides for normal growth of the receipts—chiefly from the sale of postage stamps and money order commission. The revision of postal rates to which reference was made in paragraphs 38 and 157 of the last Financial Statement was given effect to from the 1st October 1907, but the loss of revenue has been less than was anticipated owing to an increase in the volume of business. The estimate of Forest revenue presents no special features; the growth of the receipts taken is not specially large and 9 lakhs of it is in Burma; the balance (6·55 lakhs) is distributed over all the Provinces, save the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province which anticipate a slight decline. In the Punjab, this is due to the restoration to the Chamba State of the management of its forests. Under Assessed Taxes also the increase is general, the greatest rise in any one province being 1·5 lakhs in Bengal. The enhancement of Interest receipts is exceptional, being the result of the heavy issues of takavi loans in famine stricken areas. The total increase in India is 13·63 lakhs, of which 11·42 lakhs is in the United Provinces. This, however, is partly counterbalanced by a decrease of 8·57 lakhs in Interest receipts in England: it is not expected that so large a portion of the Secretary of State's cash balance will be available for temporary investment as has been the case in the current year. The variation under Tributes is the result of irregularity in payments of the fixed demands: the collections this year were about 6 lakhs short of the Budget.

142. Apart from Opium, the largest decrease of revenue is in Mint receipts; it is due to the expectation that the coinage of new rupees will be much smaller than in the current year, and that the profit on the circulation of nickel and bronze coin will also be somewhat less. The large decline under Army is chiefly in the receipts for malt liquor, consequent on the troops making their own arrangements for such supplies; there is a corresponding decrease in expenditure.

Miscellaneous.

143. Two heads of receipt which do not appear in the foregoing table are Exchange and Miscellaneous. No revenue is expected from the former in the coming year, thus causing a loss of 9 lakhs compared with 1907-1908. Under Miscellaneous, there is a drop caused mainly by the fact that the last instalment (8·33 lakhs) of the Tibet indemnity was brought to account in the current year.

145. The variations under Army and Military Works are explained in Appendix II. The increase of Interest charges is greater than usual, and is chiefly in the Home section of the estimates. It is partly due to the sterling loans of 1907-1908 carrying interest at the enhanced rate of $3\frac{1}{4}$ per cent (vide paragraph 118), but mainly to the fact that a full year's interest on the loan of £5,000,000 raised in January 1908 has to be paid for the first time. Necessary provision has also been made in the Budget for the service of the rupee loan announced in paragraph 84. The share of interest chargeable to the Railway and Irrigation accounts, respectively, in accordance with the arrangements described in paragraphs 17 to 23, exceeds by 39'84 and 6'75 lakhs the corresponding charges of the current year. The whole increase being, however, only 35'08 lakhs, the portion chargeable to ordinary debt shews a decrease of 11'51 lakhs.

Expenditure, and Interest charges.

146. The net variation under Railways is comparatively small, but there is a decrease of 90'01 lakhs under Guaranteed Companies and an increase of 59'82 lakhs in the charge for Annuities in purchase of Railways, both of which arise out of the recent acquisition of the Madras Railway. The total annuity payment incurred on the purchase of the undertaking is approximately 83 lakhs, but the Budget provides for the exchange of 9'75 lakhs for new stock of the Southern Mahratta Railway Company and for the payment next year of three-quarters of the reduced annuity, plus a half year's annuity to holders who exchange. There is also an increase of 34'34 lakhs in the charge for Interest on Capital deposited by Railway Companies.

diture other than

147. The large decrease under Civil Works is in Provincial expenditure and is a somewhat unusual feature of a Budget. The requirements under this head are generally over-estimated, with the result that the Revised Estimate, which takes account of heavy lapses, is ordinarily much lower than the following year's Budget. The reversal in this case is due to the restriction of public works expenditure in Burma and Bengal in view of the comparatively low Provincial balances, to the adoption of a smaller programme in the Punjab where Provincial revenues have suffered by reason of the prevailing distress, and to the absence of special expenditure which was undertaken this year in Bombay. In the United Provinces, there is an increase of 4'88 lakhs in Provincial expenditure; but of this, 4'30 lakhs is for a payment to District Boards which ordinarily would have been recorded under the recently abolished adjusting head Contributions from Provincial to Local.

Expenditure.

148. Apart from a growth of 6'75 lakhs in the annual charge for interest on irrigation debt, the Irrigation expenditure has risen by 5'90 lakhs. This falls under Minor Works, where a lump Imperial grant of 5 lakhs has been provided for distribution during next year. The bulk of the decrease in Opium is due to the poor outturn of last winter's crop. The strong dry winds in February forced it to ripen prematurely and the produce is likely to be abnormally short. The advances for next year's crop will also be made on an area substantially reduced in accordance with the accepted policy of helping the Chinese reforms.

1908-1909.
Irrigation and Opium
Expenditure.

149. Of the increases under Police and Medical, 12 and 30 lakhs, respectively, represent the additions made to the Budget by the Government of India to allow of expenditure being incurred next year against the special grants for additional police reforms and sanitation referred to in paragraph 130. The balance of the increase under Medical is chiefly for plague expenditure in the Punjab and Bombay, for improvements in the lighting and equipment of hospitals, and for grants-in-aid of the expenditure of local bodies which have hitherto been taken under the abolished adjusting head Contributions from Provincial to Local. The balance of the increase under Police is indicative of the progress which has been made in the development of schemes for the re-organisation of the police force. The enlarged provision under Education is also partly due to the school grants to District Boards being now taken under this head instead of as contributions, and partly to a general advance in the expenditure.

Police, Medical and
Expenditure.

150. The increase under Administration is chiefly in the requirements for imported stores, while that under Land Revenue is in Provincial expenditure in Bombay, Burma and Madras, and Imperial settlement expenditure in Eastern Bengal and Assam where operations are in progress in the Bakerganj, Faridpore, Jalpaiguri and Mymensingh districts.

1908-1909.
Administration
and Land Revenue
Expenditure.

1908-1909.
Superannuation,
Post Office
and Telegraph
Expenditure.

151. The increase under Superannuation represents the usual growth of the retired list. Under Post Office, provision has been made, in addition to normal growth, for the appointment of a Postmaster General for the Central Circle, for the reorganisation of the establishments of the three presidency post offices, for two additional Deputy Comptrollers, and for establishment required for the Madras audit office. The growth of Telegraph expenditure is small and normal.

1908-1909.
Famine Relief
and Insurance.

152. The direct expenditure on Famine Relief is estimated at 1,32'07 lakhs, the distribution of which is as follows :—

	Imperial. Lakhs.	Provincial. Lakhs.	Total. Lakhs.
India (chiefly Ajmer)	1'57	...	1'57
Central Provinces and Berar	10'00	...	10'00
Bengal	8'44	1'56	10'00
United Provinces	50'00	50'00	1,00'00
Punjab	3'00	...	3'00
Madras	2'50	...	2'50
Bombay	5'00	...	5'00
TOTAL	80'51	51'56	1,32'07

The division of the total expenditure between Imperial and Provincial has been made in accordance with the arrangements described in paragraphs 48 to 56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-1908. The increase of Famine Relief expenditure over the Revised Estimate is 54'68 lakhs, but there is a small per contra reduction of 2'3 lakhs under Protective Railways and Irrigation Works.

1908-1909.
Forest, Political
and Scientific.

153. Forest expenditure in the Punjab shews a decrease (1'83 lakhs), consequent on the restoration to the Chamba State of the management of its forests. Elsewhere, the Budget differs but slightly from the Revised or provides for a small growth of expenditure. Only in Burma and Madras is the increase at all considerable (4'86 and 2'95 lakhs). The difference under Political is chiefly in the provision for the drawings of His Majesty the Amir against the balance of his annual subsidy. Under Scientific Departments, there is a fairly general increase of Provincial expenditure on veterinary and agricultural services, and a growth of Imperial survey expenditure. In Madras, provision has also been made for the expansion of the chrome tanning department, and for the development of expenditure in connection with fisheries; and both in Bengal and Madras there is increased provision for the purchase of cinchona bark.

Courts of Law,
Jails, Excise and
expenditure.

154. After the full provision made under Courts of Law and Jails in the current year, no further growth of expenditure is anticipated. Under Excise, however, which does not appear in the table at page 38, there is a large increase of 13'69 lakhs, which represents a general development of excise establishments in accordance with the recommendations of the Excise Committee, and includes a sum of 0'55 lakhs for the newly created appointment of Inspector General of Excise and his establishment. Of the total decrease under "Miscellaneous," 16'56 lakhs in the United Provinces is caused by the abolition of the adjusting head Contributions from Provincial to Local. This is due to contributions aggregating 24'18 lakhs which were made to District Boards during 1907-1908 having had to be transferred to this head in the Revised Estimate, as the payments were made for general, and not for specific, purposes. In the Budget, similar contributions have been distributed over the heads of account to which they relate, and the sum taken under this head is 7'62 lakhs only. There is a similar decrease of 5'33 lakhs in Bengal, and smaller provision is made in the Imperial estimates for special commissions and committees, and for the refund of fines and penalties incurred by contractors in England.

155. The Imperial and Provincial results are compared separately in the table below :—

156. The large increase of Provincial Revenue next year over the Revised Estimate of 1907-1908 is chiefly under the following heads:—

1908-1909.
Variations in Provincial
Revenue.

Increases—	Lakhs.
Land Revenue (including Land Revenue due to Irrigation)	+99'03
Excise	+93'79
Forest	+23'46
Assessed Taxes	+15'60
Major Irrigation Works	+13'93
Interest	+13'43
Stamps	+9'30
Registration	+6'98
Other Heads (net)	+0'13

The gross increases under the first seven of the above heads have been dealt with in paragraphs 134, 137, 140 and 141, but under Excise, Forest, Assessed Taxes, and Registration the increase of the Provincial share of the revenue is greater than the total growth. This is the result of the altered distribution of these revenues effected at the revision of the Settlements with Madras and the United Provinces to which reference has already been made in paragraph 66. Of the net increase in the Provincial share of Land Revenue, 40'5 lakhs represent the aggregate of the assignments from Imperial to Provincial Revenues for additional police reforms and sanitation (vide paragraph 130). In the Budget, there are also special assignments of 6'47 and 14'82 lakhs to the United Provinces to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlement, and to avoid a minus Provincial balance in the Budget, respectively. There is also a substantial true betterness in collections.

157. The chief variations resulting in the increase of 2,00'36 lakhs in Provincial expenditure next year are the following :—

1908-1909. *
Variations in Provincial
Expenditure.

Increases—	Lakhs.
Land Revenue	+45'98
Medical	+40'05
Police	+39'78
Famine Relief	+29'05
Education	+25'96
Major Irrigation Works—Interest on Debt	+15'71
Forest	+14'36
Excise	+9'46
Major Irrigation Works—Working Expenses	+8'89
Scientific and other Minor Departments	+7'45
Other Heads (net)	+21'63
Decreases—
Civil Works	—34'49
Miscellaneous	—23'47

The gross increase or decrease of expenditure under most of the above heads has been explained in paragraphs 148 to 154. Under Land Revenue, Forest, and Interest on Irrigation Debt, the increases in the Provincial section of the Budget are larger, however, than the total increase. This, and similar differences under Excise and Major Irrigation Works, are the result of the recent revision of the Provincial Settlements of Madras and the United Provinces. Of the increase in the Provincial charge for Famine Relief, 27.5 lakhs are in the United Provinces and 1.56 lakhs in Bengal. As stated in paragraph 152, these fluctuations are due to the division of the total expenditure on Famine Relief between Imperial and Provincial in accordance with the arrangements described in paragraphs 48 to 56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-1908.

158. Freed of all technicalities as to adjustments between Imperial and Provincial, the large deterioration in the current year's collections is almost entirely the result of the failure of the monsoon and consequently of the autumn harvest in several provinces. The heaviest drop is in the United Provinces, where it is estimated that nearly $1\frac{1}{4}$ crores of the current demand will be suspended or remitted during the year. In the second order of magnitude comes Bombay, where heavy collections of the arrears from the previous famine were realized during the earlier part of the year, and partially obscure the losses on account of the autumn harvest; the suspensions and remissions of the current demand being reckoned at about 4 crore. The Punjab and the Central Provinces also suffer, though in a minor degree; and there has also been a reduction in the revenue demand due to the failure of crops in certain districts in Upper Burma. In Burma, however, a part of the loss is nominal, being the result of transferring 8·8 lakhs from the Land Revenue to the Irrigation head of account; this sum represents the share of revenue which is calculated as due to irrigation on lands served by the minor irrigation works in the province. For next year, the revenue from the crops which are now being harvested will be in serious defect in the scarcity provinces: but the estimates assume that a normal autumn monsoon will subsequently allow of the collection of a substantial share of the arrears. In the United Provinces and Bombay particularly, in spite of large suspensions and remissions in the revenue which falls due between April and July, substantial arrear payments are expected in the later months. The increase in Burma follows, under the fluctuating assessment system, the larger area which ought to be cultivated in normal seasons. The more noticeable increases in expenditure are the result of survey and settlement charges in Eastern Bengal, and of extra allowances to the subordinate establishments in several provinces as compensation for the dearness of grain.

159. These figures have been discussed in paragraphs 113 and 138 above. The price of Bengal opium opened well at R1,457 in April : but it subsequently sagged in consequence of rumours as to the establishment of opium monopolies in China. In December and January it dropped to close on the budget figure of R1,250 : but there was an improvement towards the end of the year, and the average price obtained has been R1,350. The revenue has thus exceeded the Budget estimate by 45·3 lakhs. A fine opium harvest in Malwa in the spring of 1907 has stimulated the exports from Bombay. Up to the end of February, 14,647 chests had passed the scales against 13,488 chests in the first 11 months of the previous year ; and it is estimated that, for the whole year, 15,000 chests may be declared for export.

160. Now that the outcome of the negotiations with China is public knowledge, and that further curtailment of exports has been decided upon, a more stable price may be expected for Bengal opium. It would hardly be prudent however, in view of the constant unforeseen fluctuations in value, to assume a higher average than R1,300. The exports of Malwa opium will probably reach the permissible maximum during the calendar year 1908, as stocks are believed to be high ; and under the new system, there will presumably be a tendency to a disproportionate activity of export during the earlier part of the year. Budget provision has therefore been made for 15,100 chests paying pass duty. The drop in expenditure is due to the steady contraction which is now being effected in the area under poppy in Bengal, and to the very poor outturn of the crop which has just been harvested.

(a) Chiefly excise on local manufacture.

(b) Chiefly duty on imported salt.

161. The movements of the salt revenue during the current year were erratic. After the enormous run upon stocks which followed the reduction of duty in the last eleven days of March 1907, there was a comparative lull in the issues of salt: but the consumption rose steadily, as compared with previous years, until September, when there was a sharp set-back, probably owing to the untimely closing of the monsoon. There has been a noticeable recovery however since November, and it is estimated that the total issues for the year will be nearly 443 lakhs of maunds. The figures indicate how the consumption has been stimulated, even in a famine year, by the lower rate of taxation. For next year a further large increase is confidently expected, and the budget is based on issues of nearly 472 lakhs of maunds. There is a corresponding rise in revenue everywhere except in Madras, where the current year's receipts include 59.09 lakhs received on account of salt sold in the previous year at the higher rate of duty (R1-8-0 per maund) under the credit system and are thus abnormal to the extent of 19.7 lakhs.

162. The reduction in charges is nominal, being due mainly to a readjustment of the proportions in which the cost of the joint establishment for salt, excise and customs in Madras is debited to these different heads.

163. Except in Burma, where the budget estimate was high, and in Bombay where the resort to conciliation procedure is said to be affecting court-fees, the growth of stamp revenue has been general. For next year, a normal increase is counted upon except in the provinces affected by famine: in them, it is expected that the revenue will virtually be stationary.

164. There has been a large increase in the current year's receipts in Madras, due mainly to a higher revenue from country spirits. On the other hand, there is a drop of 14½ lakhs in the Central Provinces, the result partly of ceasing to make advance collections from contractors, and partly of agricultural distress. The latter reason accounts for the big fall in the United Provinces; while the decrease in Burma is attributed chiefly to increased vigilance in restricting the sale of opium to the needs of the consumers. For next year a more moderate increase is taken than usual: famine will keep down the revenue in the United Provinces, and there are indications that the rapid improvement in Excise efficiency of recent years has brought the revenue up to a point from which the advance in future must necessarily be slower. The lapses in expenditure have occurred chiefly in Burma, where a provision of nearly 2 lakhs for revision of establishments could not be utilized during the year. Of the increased expenditure for next year, about 7 lakhs is nominal, representing a redistribution of the cost of the joint Salt, Excise and Customs Establishment in Madras: the balance is largely due to the strengthening of the preventive agencies which most provinces are now undertaking.

With a few petty exceptions, all the other rates and cesses which formerly appeared under this head are now credited to local funds, which are excluded from the general estimates and accounts of the Empire.

166. The import trade during the earlier part of the year was one of unprecedented activity: and the influence of famine has not yet made itself felt on the volume of business. There has been a large increase over the budget estimate in respect of petroleum, cotton manufactures and manufactured articles generally; the small set-back in consequence of the swadeshi movement last year not having been maintained. The great fall in the price of silver has stimulated the import of that metal, which has developed abnormal activity during the last few months of the year. On the other hand, the demand for rice in India on account of local scarcity has again deflected the export from Burma and reduced our revenue from that source. For 1908-1909, in view of the prevalence of famine, it would be imprudent to budget for any substantial increase upon the large receipts of the current year. There should be some improvement in consequence of the doubling of the duty on beer, and the steady development of the cotton-mill industry, but in most other respects the budget follows closely the revised estimate of 1907-1908. The rise in expenditure is due to improvements in the preventive arrangements at Rangoon and Calcutta, and to increased allowances, overtime and otherwise, at Bombay.

167. In Bombay the estimate for the current year had not made sufficient allowance for the high profits in the mill industry, and has been exceeded by about $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs: a further improvement has been anticipated in the figure for next year. In the famine provinces, the revenue is stationary for the time: but elsewhere the general activity of trade has led to an increase in the current year's actuals over the estimate, and justifies a further moderate development of the revenue in 1908-1909.

168. The revenue has fluctuated considerably in different provinces. It has dropped heavily in the Andamans where it is always very unsteady. In Burma it has fallen short of the estimate by 18 lakhs, mainly owing to the curtailment of departmental operations and the working out of refuse teak in certain forests. In Madras, on the contrary, increased exploitation by departmental agency and a rise in the price of produce have raised the receipts by $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs over the original estimate. For next year a moderate improvement is expected, chiefly in Burma, where a revival in prices is looked for. The cost of working the forests follows in a general way the movements of the revenue.

169. The falling off under this head of revenue in the current year is only nominal. When the last budget was framed, an instalment of interest amounting to 5·96 lakhs was due from the Calcutta Port Commissioners; and provision was made for their paying the money in April 1907. Contrary to expectation, they paid it at the end of March, so that it appears in the figures for 1906-1907. In other respects the figures approximate closely to the original estimate: in the scarcity provinces the collections of interest on agricultural loans are weak, but on the other hand there have been higher recoveries of interest on overdrawals of capital by Railway Companies. This last mentioned reason will give a still further increase next year: but the main cause for the large rise in 1908-1909 is the expected recovery of an additional 10 lakhs or so on the heavy advances of takavi for famine purposes in the United Provinces. The variations in England depend on the extent to which the Secretary of State is in a position to make temporary investments of his cash balances, and on the interest which he obtains on them.

171. The reduction in postal rates from last October has made very little impression on the steady progress of postal revenue; the increase over the current year's budget estimate being almost wholly on account of the sale of postage stamps. A further improvement under the same head and also in the receipts for Money Order commission is provided for next year. The excess of expenditure in the current year results mainly from the grant of compensation for the dearness of grain. The further increase next year is accounted for by certain new appointments (vide paragraph 151); by necessary improvements in the pay of the executive staff; by larger payments to railways and by subsidies for new postal routes.

173. The decline in exports and the marked slackening of the demand for rupees led to the curtailment and ultimate cessation of the coinage of rupees in the latter part of the year: but the heavy output in the earlier months served to bring the receipts from seignorage nearly 3 lakhs above the original estimate. Famine brought an extraordinary demand for bronze coinage, which is now being worked almost entirely to the exclusion of silver; and the profits on the outturn have risen by 10 lakhs as compared with the Budget Estimate. The profits on the nickel one-anna piece, of which the issue began in August 1907, are expected to amount to 16 lakhs against the tentative provision of only 2 lakhs made under this head in the Budget. For 1908-1909 the figures are based on the assumption that the rupee coinage will be very much less than it was in the current year; that the rush on bronze will cease when the monsoon is established, and that the new nickel coin will be in moderate request. There is a corresponding reduction in the charges for labour and overtime allowances at both Mints.

174. The chief reasons for the difference between the budget provision for 1907-1908 and the revised estimate are:—Increases: the appointment of an Inspector General of Excise and Salt; minor re-organizations in judicial and magisterial establishments; larger fees to pleaders in Government cases; grain compensation allowances to petty employes; increased cost of dietary in jails; and special grants for plague expenditure to municipalities in the United Provinces: Decreases: the failure of most provinces except Bengal and Bombay to use their full allotments for police reform; the lapse of about 2 lakhs of special grants for agricultural and similar purposes in Bombay; and the probability that His Majesty the Amir will draw only about 15 lakhs from his subsidy account against the 35½ lakhs provided in the budget. In 1908-1909 a considerably enhanced provision is made for pushing on the police re-organization in every province. The increased educational expenditure occurs chiefly in the United Provinces where it is proposed to take over all English schools from District Boards and simultaneously to give large grants to those bodies for primary education; but in other provinces also, the similar grants which formerly appeared as contributions from Provincial to Local have now been brought under this head owing to the abolition of the local column in the accounts. The provision for agricultural development is raised in most provinces: the Amir's subsidy drawings are taken at 25 lakhs against 15 lakhs this year; and the expenditure on sanitation is increased by the amount of the special Imperial grant for that purpose. Minor differences are due to strengthening the petty court establishments in the Central Provinces and to the purchase of a new Hooghly pilot steamer in Bengal.

175. There has been a general excess over the estimate for stationery and printing requirements in all provinces, particularly Bengal; this has also affected the purchase of stores in England. A reversion to more normal conditions is anticipated for next year. Under the head Miscellaneous, the drop in the Budget figure for 1908-1909 is mainly formal. In the recasting of the figures for previous years which has been necessitated by the exclusion of the Local column, it was found impossible in two provinces to classify with precision the purposes for which certain large contributions to District Boards have hitherto been given: they have accordingly been entered as miscellaneous debits in the provincial accounts.

176. The grant of $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores which is provided in normal years under this head has hitherto been earmarked, in the first place, for famine relief if necessary; and in the second place, for protective railway and canal works up to a maximum of 75 lakhs; any balance that remained being made available for capital expenditure which would otherwise have had to be met from borrowed funds. In the present year, a special charge upon the grant has been created by the arrangements for building up provincial credits for famine expenditure which are described in paragraphs 48—56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-08. The $37\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs which are assigned to Local Governments under that scheme, are debited to this grant, whether the other claims upon it leave any balance or not. During the current year, the cost of famine relief is expected to be $2\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs in the Central Provinces, 6 in Bengal, $67\frac{1}{2}$ in the United Provinces and less than a lakh in Bombay and the Punjab. No financial restrictions have been placed on the programme of protective works for which budget provision was made before there was any indication of famine, the shortage of expenditure being the result purely of administrative difficulties in pushing on the works. The aggregate result is a large excess over the normal total of 150 lakhs. For the next year, this excess will be still larger, as the direct famine expenditure is taken at 10 lakhs in the Central Provinces, 10 in Bengal, 100 in the United Provinces, 3 in the Punjab, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in Madras and 5 in Bombay; while a liberal provision of 60 lakhs has been made for protective irrigation works which either could not be postponed without waste or are likely to be useful as providing labour in distressed areas.

178. The figure of receipts estimated for 1907-1908 was well worked up to in every province except the Punjab, where revenue was lost on the Lower Chenab and the Lower Jhelum Canals in consequence of a bad wheat crop in 1906-1907: special remissions too had to be given owing to labour not being available to reap the crops in certain districts depopulated by famine. The other variations as between Revised and Budget 1907-1908 are nearly all of a formal character. In the first place, the share of Interest charges that is thrown on the Irrigation accounts has been reduced with effect from 1906-1907, as explained elsewhere in this statement, and distributed between England and India; secondly, [the direct receipts from Minor Works have received a credit of 8·8 lakhs in Burma by transfer from the Land Revenue head (vide paragraph 112); and thirdly, certain small irrigation works in Madras and the United Provinces have been moved from the Minor to the Major category with effect from the 1st April 1907. For next year the absence of the influences which adversely affected the Punjab Canals in 1907-1908, should allow for an improvement of over 22 lakhs in that province; and the demand for water in a dry rabi season in the United Provinces has suggested the bulk of the rest of the improvement in receipts.

179. The provinces which have most notably exceeded their Civil Works grants are the Central Provinces, Burma and Bombay; there have been savings, on the other hand, in the United Provinces, Punjab and Madras. In the Central Provinces the cost of taking over tools and stores from the Warora Colliery, and the expansion of the ordinary programme in distressed districts, were the chief reasons for over-spending: in Burma and Bombay, lapses under other heads of expenditure were freely utilized for pushing on public works. The saving in Madras was mainly due to the postponement of a number of water supply and drainage schemes: in the United Provinces and Punjab it was an intentional contribution to the cost of famine.

Section V.—Capital Expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works not charged to Revenue.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

181. The expenditure on Railway Construction for which the Government of India undertakes financial responsibility or gives any direct guarantee is now estimated at Rs 15,00,00,000 in 1907-1908, the Budget grant of 13½ crores having been increased by 1½ crores as explained in paragraph 74. There was a lapse of about 114 lakhs of rupees from the amount placed at the disposal of the Secretary of State, but this lapse has been counterbalanced by increased grants for expenditure in India.

182. For 1908-1909 the programme of capital outlay on Railway Construction has been placed at Rs 15,00,00,000.

183. The distribution of the total expenditure on Railway Construction between State and Companies' agency in each of the three years from 1906-1907 to 1908-1909 is as follows:—

Including this expenditure, and also some small expenditure from Provincial Revenues, the total outlay on Railway Construction in the three years is as follows:—

The heavy outlay which is being incurred on a number of large irrigation schemes, especially in the Punjab, is likely to lead to a small excess of 5 lakhs over the Budget grants for 1907-1908 under this head. The Budget grant for 1908-1909 has been fixed at Rs 1,50,00,000, as it appears probable from the progress of expenditure in recent years that the increased allotment will be usefully employed.

Section VI.—Provincial Finance.

188. When the scheme of quasi-permanent provincial settlements was introduced, as explained in section VI of the Financial Statement for 1904-1905, Madras and the United Provinces were two of the first provinces to come under the new arrangements. This priority has had its disadvantages, as the provinces whose settlements have been revised more recently have obtained, in some respects, more favourable terms. In the earlier quasi-permanent settlements, the prevailing practice was to treat as Imperial three-fourths of the divided heads of revenue and of the corresponding heads of expenditure: certain exceptions were made which are detailed in paragraph 215 of the Financial Statement for 1904-1905, but which are not of sufficient importance to call for repetition. In Madras and the United Provinces, this method of division was a feature of the settlements which have remained in force up to the current year. In the settlements, however, which were more recently concluded, such as those of Bombay and the Central Provinces, the Government of India were able to raise the Provincial shares of revenue to one-half under all the divided heads and to make one of them, Registration, wholly Provincial. Again, when the Bengal and Assam settlements were revised in consequence of the formation of the new Province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, the new settlements were modelled on the latest principles. Madras and the United Provinces were therefore the only provinces which remained under the old and less liberal terms. Another defect in their existing arrangements is that their fixed assignments are now disproportionate to the rest of their revenues. The growth in the last four years of the grants from Imperial revenues in compensation for remitted taxes, in aid of District Boards, for the furtherance of education, and the like, has left the two provinces with an unduly high proportion of their resources as a fixed allotment, so that they do not progress pari passu with the needs of the provincial administration. For these reasons it was found desirable to modify the Madras and the United Provinces Settlements of 1904 on the following lines.

*Revision of the
Provinces Settlements.*

Madras.—The province has now been given a one-half share of all the principal heads of revenue which are ordinarily divided between Imperial and Provincial; Registration, however, continuing wholly Provincial. It has also been given a half share in the direct receipts from Major Irrigation, which formerly were wholly Imperial. The corresponding expenditure heads have been treated in the same way, with the exception of Land Revenue, which is now a purely Provincial head in all settlements. Applied to the Budget figures of the province for 1907-1908, these re-adjustments would have given Madras an increase of ₹77,86,000 in revenue, against an increased expenditure of ₹36,03,000. After allowing for an increase of ₹19,26,000, the bulk of which is on account of Police reorganisation and projects of tank restoration (for which an Imperial subvention of 5 lakhs was promised), a surplus of ₹22,57,000 would have been left; and this figure will accordingly be taken as a fixed assignment from Provincial to Imperial through the Land Revenue head. Madras is therefore in the fortunate position of having all its revenue in the shape of growing revenues. A minimum receipt of ₹308 lakhs from Land Revenue is guaranteed to the provincial account.

■ United Provinces.—The Provincial shares of the divided heads of revenue have been fixed on the same basis as in the case of Madras, except that the Provincial share of Land Revenue will be $\frac{3}{4}$ ths (save as regards some minor receipts which will be wholly Provincial) instead of one-half, and that direct receipts from Major Irrigation Works will be wholly Provincial, as heretofore. It is proposed to guarantee a minimum receipt of 240 lakhs from the divided portion of Land Revenue, and a minimum receipt of 60 lakhs from Major Irrigation Works net (direct receipts minus working expenses); and to give Provincial revenues a fixed assignment of ₹13,89,000. The Budget for 1908-1909 has been prepared on these terms: but they are only provisional at present, as they have still to receive the sanction of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

In neither case does the settlement take into account the allotments made last year in connection with the scheme for distributing the incidence of famine relief expenditure, as it is desirable to emphasise the special character of that arrangement and not to allow it to merge in the ordinary settlement terms. Moreover, in the absence of famine, the annual allotment will cease when the reserve at the credit of the province has reached its maximum limit.

189. The shortage of the autumn rainfall in 1907, and the consequent loss of revenue, have brought into operation the guarantee clauses in some of the Provincial settlements. To bring up to the guaranteed minimum the Provincial share of Land Revenue in the current year, assignments of Rs. 25,000 and Rs. 1,12,000 have been made to Bombay and the Central Provinces, respectively, while in the Punjab an assignment of Rs. 5,75,000 has been found necessary to make good the minimum Provincial share of Irrigation receipts. In the United Provinces an assignment of Rs. 6,47,000 has been made in the Budget to cover the difference between the Provincial share of the actual Land Revenue collections and the 240 lakhs which it is proposed to guarantee under the new settlement.

Provinces.*

190. The demands of famine upon the resources of the United Provinces have necessitated special measures to prevent the accounts from closing, both this year and next, with a minus balance. It has been decided to close the Provincial section of the accounts with a credit balance of 20 lakhs (the prescribed minimum) in 1907-1908, and at equilibrium in 1908-1909. Assignments of Rs. 32,72,000 and Rs. 14,82,000 have consequently been made in the two years respectively.

*Grants for Police

191. The progress of police reforms in the different provinces involves further drafts on the assistance which the Government of India promised to give towards carrying out the reorganization recommended by the Police Commission. As stated last year, the full grant admissible to Burma has been allotted to it under the terms of its new settlement. A similar arrangement has now been effected with Madras and the United Provinces. The grants already made to the Punjab virtually cover the cost of the reform schemes for that province. In the other provinces, the extra grants for 1908-1909 have been strictly confined to the difference between the anticipated cost of the reorganization measures during the year and the subsidies already given. The aggregate grants included in the Budget are 12 lakhs, distributed as shown in paragraph 130. It has been explained in that paragraph that Imperial grants aggregating 30 lakhs will be made to Local Governments to assist them in special measures for the improvement of sanitation.

192. The exclusion of Local figures from the accounts, as explained in paragraphs 9 to 14, involves the abolition of the class of funds hitherto known as Incorporated Local Funds. The following funds, which formerly belonged to this class, have been absorbed in general revenues:—

Central Provinces	The Inland Labour Transport Fund.
Eastern Bengal and Assam	The Chittagong District Road Account and the Inland Labour Transport Fund.
Bengal	The Inland Labour Transport Fund.
United Provinces	The Inland Labour Transport Fund.
Punjab	The Copying Agency Fund.
North-West Frontier Province	The Copying Agency Fund.
Bombay	The Government Central Book Depot Fund.
Central India Agency	The Indore Agency Road Fund, the Manpur Road Fund, the Manpur School Fund, the Bundelkhand Agency Fund, and the Malwa Dharmshala Fund.

All other funds which have heretofore been treated as Incorporated Local will now be excluded from the general accounts, and their relations with the Government treasuries in future will virtually be the relations of client and banker.

193. The following table gives the usual information regarding the revenue, expenditure and balances of each province, compared with the standards assumed in the settlements in force in each :—

1907-1908
Budget

195. The Budget of 1907-1908 provided for a net disbursement of £2,476,700 including £500,000 for the discharge of railway debentures which matured in June last. To meet these charges it was estimated that Council Bills would be sold for £18,100,000, and that a sterling loan of £3,500,000 would be floated, the balance of the liabilities being met by a reduction in the Secretary of State's balances. Following the usual practice, no Budget provision was made for the purchase of silver, which would be met in ordinary course by additional drawings on India or from the Currency gold in the Bank of England.

Revised Estimate

196. The net disbursements thus budgeted for were exceeded by £2,583,100. In the first place, the activity of trade in the earlier part of the year necessitated heavy purchases of silver; and £1,191,300 were paid on that account, in addition to payments made by the withdrawal of £3,325,000 from the Currency chest in London. In the second place, the Secretary of State remitted through the Currency reserve a sum of £925,000 to the credit of the Indian Treasury balances, which had been seriously reduced by the heavy sale of Telegraphic Transfers towards the end of 1906-07. And in the third place, the net outlay on account of Railways was considerably in excess of the estimate. More detailed particulars of the Railway transactions are given in paragraphs 198 and 199; but the position may be summarized as follows. The Railway Companies which had been expected to raise capital were unable to obtain all that they had undertaken to provide; and the assistance which had been counted upon from this source fell short by £1,503,800. The debentures of the Madras Railway Company for £213,900 had to be paid off instead of being replaced by fresh capital, as had been hoped. And the payments made to Railway Companies on account of stores, and the advances to Companies working purchased lines, exceeded the Budget provision by £861,200.

Against these increased liabilities, there have been certain substantial improvements on the original estimates. The capital outlay on State Railways and Irrigation works is estimated to be £1,306,800 short of the budget provision, chiefly in consequence of delays in payments against indents from India. The Secretary of State will be left on the 31st March with £335,600 in his treasury belonging to the Gold Standard Reserve and for the time being uninvested, and his receipts in connection with Postal and Money Order business between India and the United Kingdom are expected to be £539,000 better than had been budgeted for.

197. To aggravate the net deterioration of £2,583,100 in his Treasury transactions, the Secretary of State was obliged to curtail his provision for Council Bills. The fall in Exchange owing to the weakness in the export trade, coupled for a time with the effects of the American crisis, has led to a reduction of the sale of Council Bills by approximately £2,286,000. This, however, has been partly made good by a temporary loan of £1,000,000, and the other deficiencies in the Secretary of State's net transactions have been more than covered by the £5-million loan which was floated towards the close of the year and of which approximately £4½ millions will be brought to account before the 31st of March (vide paragraph 200). It will thus be found possible to close the year by drawing on the cash balances (which opened at a much higher figure than had been estimated in the Budget) to the extent of only £491,800 against £876,700 originally estimated for.

198. The details of the transactions under capital raised and deposited by Railway Companies are as follows:—

Owing to the long stringency in the London money market, no capital for fresh outlay was raised by any of the companies except the small sums shown above against the Assam Bengal and the Indian Midland Railway Companies. Debentures for £1,216,200 were renewed at a discount of £4,300 instead of being replaced by fresh capital; and of the debentures of the Madras Railway Company £134,700, which matured on 1st January 1908, were discharged as direct liabilities of the Secretary of State in consequence of the purchase of the undertaking. Of the £1,034,200 shown in the above table as discharged during the year, £79,200 of the Madras Railway Company were discharged from funds supplied by the Secretary of State and the remainder was replaced by fresh capital.

199. The Railway Companies whose transactions are dealt with above have separate capital deposit accounts in England, and funds raised and withdrawn by them in England are brought directly to account in the Home Treasury. It is the practice for certain other Companies which work State Railways to receive advances from the Secretary of State for the purchase of stores; and funds are sometimes raised by them and deposited with the Secretary of State. These deposits and advances, instead of being brought directly to account in England, are treated as remittances from and to India respectively, and are brought to account in this country. The details of the transactions during the current year are as follows:

Fresh capital to the extent of £2,000,000, producing £1,897,100, was raised by the East Indian Railway. The debentures of the South Indian Railway were renewed at a discount of £1,200 instead of being discharged.

200. The Budget Estimate provided for a 3 per cent sterling loan of ^{1907-1908.} £3,500,000 for the discharge of Bombay, Baroda and Central India debentures to ^{Loans.} the extent of £500,000, and for advances to Railway Companies under 51 Vict., c. 5. The sterling loan was announced in May 1907, but in view of the tightness of money tenders were invited for £3,500,000 of 3½ per cent India stock. The loan was issued at the fixed price of 98½—the average rate obtained for the 3 per cent sterling loan of the previous year having been £94 16s. 5d.; and the applications amounted to £11,708,400. Later in the year, in January 1908, a further 3½ per cent sterling loan of £5,000,000 was raised in anticipation of the requirements for railway capital expenditure in the ensuing year. The issue was made at a fixed price of 99—the total tenders amounting to £31,343,300. Of this second loan £4,254,000 only are likely to be received during 1907-1908 and the remainder appears in the estimates for 1908-1909.

India Bills for £1,000,000 with a currency of six months were issued in October 1907 at an average discount of £4 3s. 3d. per cent; they were required to replace the debentures which were to have been raised by the Bengal-Nagpur and the Burma Railway Companies.

201. In addition to the loans raised during the year the Secretary of State ^{1907-1908. *} incurred liability in respect of £2,144,800 debentures of the Madras Railway ^{Redemption of} Company on the purchase of the undertaking on the 31st December 1907. ^{Railway liabilities.} The amount appears in the table in paragraph 195 both on the receipt side as Permanent Debt incurred and on the expenditure side as capital outlay on redemption of Railway liabilities, and does not affect the ways and means.

202. The Budget Estimates provide for a net disbursement of £21,102,000, ^{1908-1909.} including a payment of £865,800 for the discharge of railway debentures which ^{The Budget} mature during the year. The net disbursements are estimated at £1,374,700 ^{Estimate.} less than the current year's budget. This is the net result of the following variations:—

The difference between the total of these items and the net disbursements will be met by drawing on the cash balances of the Secretary of State, which are estimated to stand at £3,759,012, on 31st March 1909.

The Secretary of State reserves to himself the right to vary the programme to any extent that may be considered necessary during the course of the year. The estimate of Council drawings is for the amount necessary to provide for the Secretary of State's requirements, but additional Bills will as usual be sold if needed to meet the demands of trade.

* The figures under heads 2 and 14 (a) balance each other

† Head 12 represents expenditure defrayed by reduction of Provincial balances.

‡ The figures shown under head 15 differ from those given in the Home Treasury Ways and Means statement, as Bills drawn by the Secretary of State towards the end of one year are paid in India in the next. The figures of the present statement represent payments in India.

209. In the Budget Estimate of 1907-1908, the cash balance in Indian Treasuries on 1st April 1907 was taken at 16,68 lakhs. It was estimated (1) that the net Imperial revenue in India would amount to 27,84 lakhs, (2) that the net deposits in Saving Banks and Provident Institutions would increase during the year by 1,03 lakhs, (3) that 71 lakhs would be available from the Famine Insurance Grant for the avoidance of debt, (4) that the remittance transactions of Railway Companies would result in a net credit in India of 3,89 lakhs, and (5) that 25 lakhs of silver bullion purchased in England in 1906-1907 would be added to the Treasury balances in India. On the other hand, provision was made (1) for a net expenditure of 78 lakhs from Provincial balances, (2) for Capital expenditure in India on Railways and Canals to the extent of 6,59 lakhs, (3) for a net payment of 5 lakhs to Railway Companies, (4) for payments of 13, 12 and 2 lakhs in connection with the discharge of permanent debt, local loans and miscellaneous deposit transactions respectively, and (5) for payments of Council Bills to the extent of 27,15 lakhs. The payments mentioned aggregated 34,84 lakhs, and as the receipts amounted to 33,72 there was a deficiency of 1,12 lakhs. To meet this deficiency and to strengthen the cash balances which had been seriously reduced towards the end of 1906-1907 by the heavy drawings of the Secretary of State, it was proposed to raise a rupee loan of 3 crores.

210. The results according to the Revised Estimate show considerable variations from this forecast. The actual opening balance on 1st April 1907 fell short of the estimate by 1,19 lakhs in consequence of exceptionally large telegraphic transfers drawn by the Secretary of State at the end of the year. The famine has been primarily responsible for decreased receipts and increased expenditure under a number of heads: the net Imperial revenue in India being now estimated at 71 lakhs less than the Budget Estimate, while the expenditure from Provincial balances will be 76 lakhs more. As effects of the same cause, the net deposits in Savings Banks and the amount available for appropriation for the avoidance of debt will be less by 26 and 33 lakhs, respectively, while the payments on account of loans to cultivators, etc., will be more by 1,99 lakhs. Capital expenditure in India on Railways and Irrigation Works is expected to exceed the estimate by 3,57 lakhs, partly owing to short expenditure in England and partly in consequence of the additional grant of 1,50 lakhs sanctioned by the Secretary of State during the year. In part payment for silver purchases, a net remittance of 3,60 lakhs has been made from India to England through the Currency Department in consequence of the slackness in the demand for Council Bills; and the payments in connection with deposit and miscellaneous remittance transactions will be more than the Budget forecast by 60 lakhs. A reduction of 50 lakhs was also made in the amount of the rupee loan which it was contemplated in the Budget Estimate to raise during the year. The total deterioration from all these sources will amount to 13,51 lakhs. On the other hand, the slackness in the demand for Council Bills will lead to a diminution of 4,33 lakhs in the payments budgeted under this head; the receipts of silver purchased in England by the Secretary of State will be more by 6,61 lakhs; the net credits from remittances of Railway Companies will exceed the Budget Estimate by 94 lakhs; a sum of 1,69 lakhs will be received as the moiety of profits on the new rupee coinage during the year, which it has been decided to appropriate to railway construction; and the net payments to Railway Companies on account of Capital outlay are 35 lakhs less than the estimate. The total improvements mentioned above amount to 13,92 lakhs against a total deterioration of 13,51 lakhs. The cash balance on 31st March 1908 is therefore now expected to be 41 lakhs better than the figure entered in the Budget Estimate.

211. In paragraph 266 of the last Financial Statement it was announced, subject to the usual reservations, that a new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent rupee loan of 3 crores would be raised in 1907-1908. The loan was announced in July last, but in view of the large improvement that was then expected in the revenue receipts and also of the stringency prevailing in the money market, tenders were invited for a reduced amount of two-and-a-half crores of rupees only. Tenders were opened on the 17th July, and the result of the loan was as follows:—

Total amount tendered.	Amount accepted.	Average rate of accepted tenders.			Minimum rate accepted
₹	₹	₹	a.	p.	₹	a.	p.

Budget Estimate.*

212. In 1908-1909, the net Imperial revenue in India is estimated at 27,84 lakhs. It is hoped that a sum of 1,00 lakhs will be available for Railway construction out of the coinage profits likely to be realised during the year. Savings Bank deposits are expected to yield a net receipt of 68 lakhs; a sum of 37½ lakhs, representing the total of the amounts deposited by Local Governments with the Imperial Government as a reserve for meeting future expenditure on famine relief (vide paragraphs 48 to 57 of the last Financial Statement), will be available for the avoidance of debt; and the remittance and capital transactions of Railway Companies are likely to result in a net credit in India of 6,74 lakhs. On the other hand, provision has been made: (1) for an expenditure of 79 lakhs from Provincial balances; (2) for capital expenditure of 9,60 lakhs in India on Railways and Canals; (3) for payments of 13,31, and 14 lakhs in connection with the discharge of permanent debt, local loans and miscellaneous deposit and remittance transactions, respectively; (4) for a remittance of 2,25 lakhs to the Secretary of State through the Currency Department; and (5) for payment of Council Bills to the extent of about 26,98½ lakhs. The payments mentioned aggregate 40,29½ lakhs and as the receipts come to 36,63½ lakhs the net disbursements amount to 3,66 lakhs.

New Rupee Loan.

213. It is proposed to meet 3 crores out of the net disbursement of 3,66 lakhs by raising a new rupee loan for that amount in 1908-1909, the remaining 66 lakhs being met by drawing upon the cash balances. It is thus expected to close the year with a balance of 18,30 lakhs. The announcement now made regarding the rupee loan is in accordance with present intentions; but full liberty is reserved, as usual, to vary the programme now announced to any extent that may be considered desirable.

1907-1908 (Revised)	15,18,000	53,63,000	68,81,000
1908-1909 (Budget)	4,17,000	55,25,000	59,42,000

A net deposit in the Post Office Savings Banks of 30 lakhs apart from interest was assumed in the Budget Estimate of the current year. The transactions of the first ten months of the year have, however, resulted in a net increase in the deposits of about 17 lakhs only, large withdrawals having taken place since October last in consequence of the famine. Heavy withdrawals are also expected in the closing months of the year for a similar reason, and it is now estimated that during the year 1907-1908, apart from interest, there will be a net increase of 3 lakhs only in the Post Office Savings Banks deposits and of 12 lakhs in those of the other institutions classed under this head.

In the Budget Estimate for 1908-1909, a total net deposit of 4 lakhs, apart from interest, has been assumed; the figure being intentionally low in consequence of the prevalence of famine.

Section VIII.—Summary.

215. The principal features in this statement are the following :—

1.—The Accounts of 1906-1907 closed with an Imperial surplus of £1,589,340, being £263,240 more than the surplus expected in the Revised Estimates of that year.

II.—1907-1908 :—

(1) The Revised Estimates show a total Revenue of £70,989,200, a total Expenditure charged to Revenue of £70,753,800, and an Imperial surplus of £235,400. This surplus is less than that of the Budget Estimate by £539,200.

(2) The transactions of local funds (except a few funds which are being absorbed in Imperial or Provincial revenues) will be excluded from the general accounts from the 1st April 1908. The Budget and the Revised Estimates for the current year have been re-arranged so as to give retrospective effect to this change. The absorption of certain minor funds has resulted in a small reduction (£100) in the surplus of £774,700 shown in the original Budget Estimate.

(3) The failure of the monsoon has necessitated Famine Relief expenditure (£5,6,000), and a heavy reduction (£1,701,100) in the estimates of Land Revenue. In the United Provinces alone, the decrease is £945,300.

Railway net Receipts also show a heavy decline (£725,400). The increase of Working Expenses has exceeded the growth of Earnings by reason of heavy expenditure on renewals and repairs. The Madras Railway—the last of the old guaranteed lines—was purchased by the Government with effect from the 1st January 1908.

Forests and Exchange have contributed £148,100 and £73,300, respectively, towards the total diminution of Revenue ; and there have been smaller decreases under Tributes and Military receipts.

The Customs Revenue (£4,964,000) has been unprecedentedly high, being better than the Budget anticipation by £368,500. The increase over the receipts of 1906-1907 has been greatest under cotton manufactures (£142,400), spirits and liqueurs (£94,800) and manufactured articles (£91,000).

The improvement in Opium Revenue is £371,800, of which £302,000 is due to Bengal opium having been sold at an average of R1,350 per chest, as against R1,250 taken in the Budget. The exports of Malwa opium have exceeded expectation.

The great demand for bronze coin and the issue of the new one-anna nickel have yielded a profit of £226,700, as against £66,700 budgeted for. The renewal of dollar coinage and the heavy coinage of rupees in the earlier part of the year have also contributed towards the total increase of £192,700 in Mint receipts.

The Salt Revenue shows marked progress ; the increase of £46,900 over the Budget would have been larger but for exceptionally heavy clearances between the 20th and 31st March 1907, consequent on the reduction of duty. The other heads under which the Budget has been substantially exceeded are Stamps. Minor Irrigation Works and Assessed Taxes with increases of £67,700, £64,900 and £49,200, respectively.

(4) A new principle has been adopted for distributing the gross Interest charges between the Railway, Irrigation and Ordinary Debt, which reduces largely the disproportionate burden of interest hitherto borne by the accounts of railways and productive irrigation works. The increase in the gross interest charges (£149,100) is due mainly to the discount and higher rate ($3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent) of the sterling loans of the year.

Of the total charge of £516,000 for Famine Relief, £220,700 has been met from the Budget provision for Reduction or Avoidance of Debt.

There is a large excess (£115,600) over the Budget in Civil Works expenditure, which is partly due to the development of the public works programme to provide employment for labour in famine tracts. Military expenditure (including Marine) is £758,600 less than the Budget, owing mainly to smaller payments to the War Office, and to a slower rate of progress with re-organization and other special measures. The Revised Estimate under Army includes £50,000 for the Bazar Valley Field Force.

The Opium expenditure is short of the Budget provision by £141,600, as a result of the contraction in the poppy area. Political shows a saving of £119,700 attributable to smaller drawings of His Majesty the Amir's subsidy.

- (5) The balances of the United Provinces having been largely depleted as a consequence of famine, a special assignment of £218,100 has been entered in the Revised Estimate to raise the closing Provincial balance to its prescribed minimum. Other special assignments are £61,700 to Bombay and £7,500 to the Central Provinces to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlements, £38,300 to the Punjab in respect of a similar guarantee for Irrigation revenue, £33,300 to Madras for tank restoration works, and £66,700 to Burma, as the first instalment of the Imperial contribution towards the cost of the Rangoon river training scheme.

- (6) A $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent loan of two and a half crores of rupees was raised in India; and two issues of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent India stock were made in England. The first, in accordance with the Budget programme, was for £3,500,000; but in January last a further loan of £5,000,000 was effected, partly in anticipation of the requirements of next year. Of the latter, £746,000 will be received after the 31st March 1908. In addition, India Bills for £1,000,000 were issued in lieu of capital estimated to be raised by various Railway Companies. The sterling loans enabled £634,700 to be applied towards the discharge of debentures of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and the Madras Railway.

- (7) Owing to stringency in the London money market, only £2,248,000 of fresh capital was raised by Railway Companies, as against £3,840,400 entered in the Budget Estimate.
- (8) In consequence of the drop in exchange during the latter half of the year, the drawings of Council Bills in 1907-1908 are expected to amount to only £15,814,000, as compared with £18,100,000 entered in the Budget: the former figure is exclusive of £530,000 drawn for remittance to the Gold Standard Reserve. £3,325,000 have been drawn from the Currency Reserve Gold, in part payment of the silver bought by Government for coinage purposes.
- (9) The Gold Standard Reserve on the 31st March 1908 stands at £18,355,300.

- (1) The Budget Estimate of 1908-1909 shows a total Revenue of £73,438,900, a total expenditure charged to Revenue of £72,867,400, and an Imperial surplus of £571,500.

- (2) Provision has been made for special grants to Local Governments of £200,000 and £80,000 in aid of Sanitation and additional Police reforms, respectively. The annual grant for special Military expenditure has been taken at £1,666,700 only, as against £1,983,300 in the Budget of 1907-1908.

- (3) Compared with the Revised Estimate of the current year, Land Revenue (excluding the portion due to Irrigation) shows an increase of £1,435,200, of which £767,800 is in the United Provinces, £417,900 in Bombay and £193,000 in Burma. The famine necessitated exceptionally heavy remissions and suspensions this year. The estimates of 1908-1909 are based on the assumption that the next monsoon will be normal.

The purchase this year of the Madras Railway increases the gross receipts and working expenses of State Railways next year by £845,300 and £606,700, respectively. A total increase of £1,031,800 in the net receipts of State Railways is expected.

In view of the prevailing scarcity, the growth of Excise receipts is taken at £194,600 only. An increase of £126,400 is expected under Stamps. The assumption of a year of normal crops in the Punjab chiefly has caused an increase of £192,300 under Irrigation.

The Salt Budget anticipates an increase in consumption of approximately 2,900,000 maunds. But the increase of revenue is taken at £65,300 only, owing to the operation of the credit system in Madras.

Under Customs the increase is small (£36,300 only), as the growth of the import duties has been extraordinarily large this year, and no appreciable increase of the export duty on rice can be expected while famine prevails.

Opium revenue shows a decrease of £380,000. In view of the restriction of the trade with China, the number of chests of Bengal and Malwa opium to be exported have been taken at 45,900 and 15,100, respectively. The average sale price of Bengal opium has been taken at R1,300 per chest, as against R1,350 obtained in the current year.

Other important decreases of Revenue are under Mint (£165,900), due to smaller coinage of new rupces and bronze; and under Military Services (£129,900), the result largely of the discontinuance of the supply by the State of malt liquor to the troops.

- (4) The direct expenditure on Famine Relief is estimated at £880,500, of which £666,700 is in the United Provinces.

Police and Medical expenditure show increases of £301,100 and £280,000, of which £80,000 and £200,000 represent provision for expenditure against the special Imperial grants for additional police reforms and sanitation, respectively [vide paragraph III (2)].

Under Military Services, there is an increase of £233,900 in spite of a decrease of £40,200 under Marine. These variations are explained in Appendix II.

The only important decreases of expenditure are under Civil Works (£224,700), Opium (£175,600), and Miscellaneous (£177,900). In the first case, retrenchment is largely due to the depletion of the Provincial balances in some of the provinces. Under Opium, the decrease is due partly to the poor outturn of last winter's crop, and partly to the further restriction of the poppy-growing area.

The purchase of the Madras Railway causes a decrease of £600,100 under Guaranteed Companies and an increase of £398,800 under Annuities in purchase of Railways. The total annuity in purchase of the undertaking is £553,397, but the Budget provides for the exchange of a part of this for new stock of the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, and for the payment next year of three-quarters of the reduced annuity plus a half-year's annuity to holders who exchange.

- (5) The Budget includes special Land Revenue assignments of £43,100 and £98,800 to the United Provinces to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlement and to avoid a minus Provincial balance at the close of 1908-1909, respectively.
- (6) Subject to the approval of His Majesty's Secretary of State, the Provincial Settlements of Madras and the United Provinces have been revised so as to place at the disposal of the Local Governments a larger share of the heads of revenue which are ordinarily divided between Imperial and Provincial. Particulars of the changes will be found in Section VI.
- (7) Subject to the usual reservation, a loan of 3 crores of rupees in India is announced. This is intended for Capital expenditure on Railways and Productive Irrigation Works. Of the sterling loan of £5,000,000 announced in January last, £746,000 will be realised after the 31st March 1908. Provision has also been made for renewing twice in 1908-1909 the India Bills of £1,000,000 which were issued with a six months' currency in October 1907; for a fresh temporary loan of £500,000 in England; and for the discharge of Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway debentures, of which £865,800 mature next year.
- (8) Subject to the usual reservations, provision is also made for the raising of Capital through Railway Companies as follows: namely, for outlay on Companies' Railways £1,013,900, and for expenditure on purchased Railways £3,900,000.
- (9) Drawings of Council Bills are entered at £18,500,000; and provision has been made for the withdrawal of £1,500,000 from the Currency Chest in London, against an equivalent transfer from Treasury to Currency in India.

APPENDIX II.

Memorandum by the Joint Secretary, Military Finance, on Military expenditure in the years 1907-1908 and 1908-1909.

This memorandum is concerned with the expenditure both Special and Ordinary incurred in England and India under the four Budget heads "46—Army," "46A—Marine," "47—Military Works," and "47A—Special Defences."

2. Special expenditure consists of outlay on—

- (1) Measures connected with Lord Kitchener's scheme for the Reorganisation and Redistribution of the Army.
- (2) Other special measures for the improvement of military administration which had been initiated prior to the year 1904-1905. In this case the expenditure on such measures is treated as Special only to the extent by which it exceeds the budget provision made in 1904-1905.
- (3) All expenditure connected with the scheme for the re-armament and improvement of coast and frontier defences.
- (4) All other new measures which add appreciably to military expenditure. If the maximum cost of such a new measure, adding the full amount of recurring expenditure in any one year to the initial outlay, exceeds Rs20,000 (or Rs50,000 in the case of buildings), the cost is debited to the grant for Special expenditure.

The balance of military expenditure outside special outlay of these descriptions is classed as Ordinary.

1.—REVISED ESTIMATE, 1907-1908.

A.—SPECIAL EXPENDITURE.

3. The following table shows the provision for Special expenditure in the Budget of the current year and the probable expenditure of the year as now estimated:—

APPENDIX II.

Memorandum by the Joint Secretary, Military Finance, on Military expenditure in the years 1907-1908 and 1908-1909.

This memorandum is concerned with the expenditure both Special and Ordinary incurred in England and India under the four Budget heads "46 -Army," "46A—Marine," "47—Military Works," and "47A—Special Defences."

2. Special expenditure consists of outlay on—

- (1) Measures connected with Lord Kitchener's scheme for the Reorganisation and Redistribution of the Army.
- (2) Other special measures for the improvement of military administration which had been initiated prior to the year 1904-1905. In this case the expenditure on such measures is treated as Special only to the extent by which it exceeds the budget provision made in 1904-1905.
- (3) All expenditure connected with the scheme for the re-armament and improvement of coast and frontier defences.
- (4) All other new measures which add appreciably to military expenditure. If the maximum cost of such a new measure, adding the full amount of recurring expenditure in any one year to the initial outlay, exceeds Rs20,000 (or Rs50,000 in the case of buildings), the cost is debited to the grant for Special expenditure.

The balance of military expenditure outside special outlay of these descriptions is classed as Ordinary.

1907-1908,
Special
Expenditure
—(contd.)
Amount of Special grant.

4. The Special grant was reduced in 1907-1908 from $3\frac{1}{4}$ crores (£2,166,700) the amount which it was originally intended to provide annually for the financing of the schemes of Reorganisation and Redistribution and other measures involving special expenditure, to 250 lakhs (£1,666,700) supplemented by an addition of $47\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs (£316,700) on account of large lapses which had occurred in the previous year. The amount which will be spent during the current year is now estimated at 219½ lakhs (£1,462,200) or a little over 78 lakhs (£521,200) less than the provision made in the Budget.

Allocation of lapse :—

(i) Special Defences.

(ii) Marine.

5. The whole of this lapse with the exception of about 7 lakhs (£46,400) has occurred in India. It includes under Special Defences a saving of 4 lakhs (£27,500) due to the postponement of work pending the reconsideration of certain questions relating to the armament of the sea-ports. A lapse of $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs (£28,500) occurred under Marine, owing to the suspension of the construction of the Irrawaddy, and to part payment for the new vessel to replace the Investigator having been made in England at the end of 1906-1907, instead of in the current year.

(iii) Military
Works.

6. The decrease under Military Works amounted to 18½ lakhs (£124,900), and was almost entirely due to delay in initiating a number of measures forming part of the Redistribution scheme: particularly those relating to Quetta and Nowshera, and to the provision of accommodation for Artillery officers and units, the construction of which was deferred in consequence of the delay in proceeding with the schemes mentioned in the next paragraph.

(iv) Army.

7. The decrease under Army amounted to 51 lakhs (£340,300), and was mainly due to smaller expenditure than had been anticipated on the following measures :—

(1) Reorganisation of Horse and Field Batteries and Ammunition Columns.

As explained in the Memorandum on Military Expenditure attached to the Financial Statement for 1907-1908, this scheme was modified on the advice of the Army Council. The details have only been recently settled, and meanwhile it has been necessary to defer a portion of the intended expenditure.

(2) Rearmament of Horse and Field Artillery.

The short expenditure on this measure was partly due to the output of the Ordnance Factories being less than was anticipated.

(3) Conversion of two bullock draught Heavy Batteries into fully horsed Batteries.

Progress with this measure has been delayed with reference to questions of armament and accommodation.

(4) Creation of two additional Batteries of Native Mountain Artillery.

There has been unanticipated delay in the supply of guns and equipment from Home.

(5) Increase of Reserves of Artillery and Small Arms Ammunition, and of Rifles.

(6) Construction of lines for Native Troops and purchase of land for this purpose.

This decrease is mainly due to the postponement of certain Redistribution measures to which reference has already been made.

(7) Formation of a Native Cavalry Regiment from the Deoli and Erinpura Squadrons.

Special measures undertaken :—
(i) By re-
allotment.

8. On the other hand, the failure to work up to the original provision for these and other measures has made it possible to allot funds to other projects, including the purchase of rifles from England, the construction of accommodation for an additional battalion of British Infantry and for two additional Gurkha battalions at Quetta, and for an additional battalion of British Infantry and for Royal Artillery at Jubbulpore, and also the improvement of the water-supply at Lahore Cantonment and Chakrata, and repairs to the coast defences at Manora which were severely damaged by a cyclonic storm.

(ii) From Budget provision.

9. The funds provided in the Budget for Special expenditure in the current year were applied in the first place to meeting the recurring outlay on measures undertaken in previous years. Rupees 17½ lakhs (£118,200) have been expended in the prosecution of the scheme for the improvement and rearmament of coast defences. Nearly 50 lakhs (£332,600) were spent on Military Works measures appertaining to Reorganisation and Redistribution, including the construction of buildings at Quetta, Nowshera and Jubbulpore, and about 20 lakhs

9. (£134,500) were expended on other works chargeable to the Special grant. Under Marine the principal item was the payment of 4½ lakhs (£30,000) for the new vessel to replace the Investigator. The expenditure under Army enabled the scheme for increasing the number of the officers of the Native Army by 350 to be completed; new and more favourable Pension Rules were introduced for the Native Army; the reorganisation of the Staff and Establishments of Mountain Batteries was taken in hand; and progress was made with a number of the measures mentioned in paragraph 7 above, though not to the full extent anticipated in the Budget.

10. Thus against a total provision of 297·50 lakhs (£1,983,400), Special expenditure to the extent of 219·34 lakhs (£1,462,200) is likely to be incurred in the current year; the difference is made up of 51·05 lakhs (£340,300) under Army, 4·25 lakhs (£28,500) under Marine, 18·74 lakhs (£124,900) under Military Works and 4·12 lakhs (£27,500) under Special Defences. With the exception of 7 lakhs (£46,400), the whole of the lapse has occurred in India, the cause, as already stated, being the postponement of Schedule measures or inability to carry them out to the extent anticipated.

12. Marine charges are about 2½ lakhs (£18,600) in excess of the Budget owing mainly to an increase of 2¼ lakhs in Home outlay on stores.

Cause of excess or saving.
(i) Marine.

13. Ordinary Military Works expenditure is met from a fixed grant which is expected to be fully spent.

(ii) Military
Works.

14. The Revised Estimate under Army shows an improvement of 38·40 lakhs (£256,000) of which 6·77 lakhs (£45,200) occurred in England and 31·63 lakhs (£210,800) in India. The decrease under Home expenditure includes a large diminution (£71,100) in the expected outlay on stores; a reduction in payments due to the War Office owing to the early adjustment of advances made on behalf of India; and a decrease in the cost of the Indian Trooping Service: partly counterbalanced by an increase in the expenditure on furlough allowances, and by the transfer from the Indian to the Home account of certain charges for the purchase of mules.

(iii) (a) Army—

Ordinary Expen-

ss of Ai) (b) Army
India.

15. The improvement of 31·63 lakhs (£210,800) in the Indian expenditure is partly nominal, as beside the saving arising from the transfer already mentioned, there is a reduction of 5½ lakhs (£36,700), counterbalanced by a corresponding diminution of receipts, in connection with the new arrangements for the supply of malt liquor, which under the system introduced on the 1st January 1908, the soldier will obtain direct from the contractors. There are also large fluctuations, including savings of about 9 lakhs (£60,000) due to a temporary shortage in the strength of British and Native troops, of 6½ lakhs (£43,300) arising from the absence of officers on leave, and of 8½ lakhs (£56,700) in rail and other transport charges. Certain economies, particularly those connected with the reorganisation of the Supply and Transport Corps and the reduction of the Army Bearer Corps, also contribute to the total improvement.

16. The saving would have been much larger but for additional expenditure on the feeding of the army, amounting to about 12½ lakhs (£85,000), which resulted from the prevailing high prices, and the expenditure on the Bazar Valley Field Force, which is estimated at 7½ lakhs (£50,000) to be brought to account within the current year, beside 1 lakh (£6,700) of arrear charges to come forward in 1908-1909.

Summary.

17. The total Ordinary expenditure under all heads shows a decrease of over 35½ lakhs (£237,400), the result of an increase of 2½ lakhs (£18,600) under Marine and an improvement of about 38½ lakhs (£256,000) under Army. As will be seen from the foregoing explanations the principal causes of this improvement are the reduction in the demand for stores from Home, savings due to shortage in the strength of troops and absence of officers, and various economies, permanent or temporary, the total decrease arising from these causes being partly counterbalanced by extraordinary expenditure on feeding charges and Special Services.

C.—TOTAL MILITARY EXPENDITURE, ORDINARY AND SPECIAL.

18. The following statement compares the total Military expenditure, i.e., Ordinary and Special taken together, as shown in the Budget and Revised Estimates of the current year:—

GRAND TOTAL	31,91,86,000	21,279,100	30,78,08,000	20,520,500

19. The Revised Estimate shows a decrease of 113½ lakhs (£758,600) made up of a lapse of over 78 lakhs under Special expenditure and a saving of over 35½ lakhs in Ordinary charges, the reasons for which have been explained above.

D.—MILITARY RECEIPTS.

20. Certain receipts are credited under Army, Military Works, and Marine. These arise mainly from payments by His Majesty's Government against charges incurred on their account, and rents of quarters, sales of stores, and recoveries on certain issues to soldiers, such as dairy produce, rum, and in certain cases clothing.

21. The following table shows the Budget and the Revised Estimates of receipts in 1907-1908 :—

Total . . .	1,77,42,000	1,182,800	1,71,98,000	1,146,600

22. The decrease of 5.44 lakhs (£36,200) in total receipts is mainly due to the change in the system of supplying malt liquor already referred to.

E.—NET MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

23. Deducting the receipts from the gross expenditure, the net Military expenditure for 1907-1908 was taken at ₹ 37,14,44,000 (£20,096,300) in the Budget, and is now estimated at ₹ 29,06,10,000 (£19,373,900).

Amount of Special Grant.

25. For the coming year the Special grant has again been restricted to 250 lakhs (£1,666,700), and in view of the general financial situation no addition has been made on account of the heavy lapse accruing in the current year. Recurring expenditure on account of measures carried out between 1904-1905 and 1907-1908 absorbs 98 lakhs (£653,300) out of the total grant, and the sum available for new expenditure is thus restricted to 152 lakhs (£1,013,400). The bulk of this sum is required for carrying on measures already in progress. These include works connected with Special Defences and the Redistribution Scheme, and also, among others, the following measures the cost of which is chargeable to Army:—

Special measures to be undertaken.

- (1) The addition of two batteries of Native Mountain Artillery.
- (2) Increase in the reserve of rifles.
- (3) Reorganisation of Horse and Field Batteries and ammunition columns.
- (4) Re-armament of Horse and Field Artillery.
- (5) Provision of lines for native troops and purchase of land for this purpose.
- (6) Increase to the Native Army Reserve.

The usual provision has been made for new Military works of an ordinary character but costing more than Rs 50,000 (£3,300) in each case; and funds have also been allotted for a few new measures of minor importance, or are held in reserve for others which are still under consideration.

Causes of excess or decrease as compared with Budget 1907-1908.

(i) Marine.

(ii) Military Works.

(iii) (a) Army—Home.

27. As compared with the current year's Budget, Marine charges show a small increase of about 1½ lakhs (£8,000). The Military Works fixed grant stands as before at about Rs. 1 crore.

28. Army expenditure shows a decrease of 17 lakhs (£113,700) in India and about 15½ lakhs (£102,300) in England, or a total of about 32½ lakhs (£216,000) in all. The improvement as regards Home expenditure is mainly due to a reduction of £130,000 in the provision for stores, the diminution in demands from India being mainly under Ordnance.

(iii) (b) Army—
India.

29. The provision for Ordinary expenditure in India includes an addition of 32½ lakhs (£215,000) to meet increased charges on account of feeding. On the other hand, there is a nominal reduction of 23 lakhs (£153,700) in consequence of the disappearance from the accounts of the malt liquor charges (together with the corresponding receipts) owing to the change of system already explained. But for this special expenditure and nominal saving, the provision for Ordinary expenditure in India would have been 26½ lakhs (£175,400) less than that made in 1907-1908. This is in some measure attributable to economies such as those already mentioned in connection with the Supply and Transport Corps and the Army Bearer Corps. A further improvement is expected with regard to railway charges in view of the recent revision of the system of rates. The charges on account of the Aden Delimitation Commission now cease, and a reduction of 3½ lakhs (£23,300) is anticipated in connection with the Tibet Mission, owing to the withdrawal of the bulk of the troops.

30. The total Ordinary Military expenditure for the coming year is expected to fall below the provision made for the current year by 31½ lakhs (£208,000) and approximates closely to the Revised Estimate.

C.—TOTAL EXPENDITURE, ORDINARY AND SPECIAL.

32. The Estimate for 1908-1909 under the four Military heads thus shews a total decrease of 78½ lakhs (£524,700) as compared with the Budget of 1907-1908, of which 47½ lakhs (£316,700) is due to the restricted scale of Special expenditure, and a decrease of 31½ lakhs (£208,000) occurs under Ordinary. Budget 1908-1909 compared with Budget 1907-1908.

33. As compared with the probable actual outlay in the current year, the Budget Estimate for 1908-1909 provides for an increase of 35 lakhs (£233,900). This is mainly due to the heavy lapse on Schedule expenditure in 1907-1908. The estimate for Ordinary charges exceeds the probable expenditure of the current year by only 4½ lakhs (£29,400). Budget 1908-1909 compared with Revised 1907-1908.

34. The standard of expenditure now attained may also be compared with the Budget Estimate for 1904-1905, which was framed a few months before the formulation of the Reorganisation and Redistribution schemes. Notwithstanding the temporary expansion of feeding charges owing to scarcity by £85,000 during 1907-1908, and the additional expenditure of £215,000 anticipated from the same cause in the coming year, the aggregate military expenditure of 1907-1908 indicates an improvement of £471,000 on the provision made in 1904-1905, and that of 1908-1909 an improvement of £237,000. An analysis of the latter figure shews that it is made up of the following items:— Revised 1907-1908 and Budget 1908-1909 compared with Budget 1904-1905.

- (1) A reduction of about £1 million in the provision for new expenditure on special measures.
- (2) An increase of about £½ million, representing the recurring cost of special measures brought into effect since the system of a Special grant was introduced in the course of 1904-1905.
- (3) An increase of about £90,000 in Ordinary expenditure.

35. As regards the first item, it may be noted that for some years previous to 1904-1905 it was the practice to set aside large sums for Special measures, the average provision for new Special expenditure in the three years 1901-1902 to 1903-1904, including allotments from war savings, being £1½ millions a year. In the Budget of 1904-1905 this was raised to £2 millions. As already mentioned, the provision for new expenditure included in the Special grant of 250 lakhs (£1½ millions) for 1908-1909 is half this amount.

and Budget 1908-1909 compared

36. The second item represents about half the ultimate addition to permanent expenditure which will be attained when the schemes alluded to in clauses (1), (2) and (3) of the second paragraph of this memorandum have been completed.

37. The figure given against the third item somewhat understates the growth of Ordinary expenditure in the usual sense, as it is reduced by the fact that the Budget provision for 1904-1905 included about £½ million for expenditure on Special Services. Excluding this, and also the temporary addition to feeding charges in 1908-1909, the growth of Ordinary expenditure in the four years is somewhat less than £½ million.

APPENDIX III.

Memorandum by the Railway Board

ON THE

Results of Indian Railway Working, 1907-1908, and Proposals for 1908-1909.

CAPITAL EXPENDITURE.

The capital expenditure during the year 1907-1908 will amount to Rs 15,00,00,000 (£10,000,000) being more than half a crore in excess of the expenditure for the year 1906-1907.

2. For the year 1908-1909 the estimate provides for spending a sum of 15 crores (£10,000,000), which is the same as the programme for 1907-1908.

3. Under the head of lines already open, including the provision for additional rolling stock, the amount expended in 1907-1908 will be 1,109½ lakhs (£7,394,600), showing an increase of 187 lakhs in the expenditure under the same head for the previous year. Under the same heads in 1908-1909 provision is made for 1,149 lakhs (£7,659,200).

4. A comparison showing capital expenditure for 1908-1909 and the previous five years is contained in the following statement —

5. The information showing in detail how the expenditure in 1907-1908 and 1908-1909 will be distributed is contained in statement A attached to this memorandum. The programme for 1908-1909 contemplates an outlay of Rs 15 crores.

6. The mileage of lines of all gauges open to traffic on 1st April 1907 was 29,303 and under construction 2,629, on 1st April 1908 there will be 30,287 open and 1,987 under construction. At the end of the coming year there will be 1,066 miles under construction.

RAILWAY REVENUE ACCOUNT.

7. The railways of India, taken as a whole, have for a succession of years shown a balance to the credit of general revenues, after allowing for working expenses, interest on capital expended, charges for annuities in redemption of capital and miscellaneous railway expenditure. The following table shows the approximate figures for 1907-1908 compared with the actual results for the previous five years :—

* NOTE.—The figures to end of 1904-1905 include the Companies' shares of surplus profits, now shown under interest charges, etc.

† Excluding Local Fund transactions.

Compared with the results of the previous year the figures for 1907-1908 show a decrease of Rs56,94,000 (£379,600). The receipts are more by Rs2,21,31,000 (£1,475,400), the working expenses are higher by Rs2,25,23,000 (£1,501,500), while interest charges, etc., have increased by Rs53,02,000 (£353,500).

GROSS RECEIPTS.

8. In 1906-1907, the gross receipts of railways showed a large improvement over those of the previous year consequent on the opening of new lines, development of traffic on existing lines, a heavy coal traffic on the East Indian Railway, and large movements of food grains chiefly on the North Western, Eastern Bengal and Indian Midland Railways. On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway there was a falling-off in traffic in food grains and cotton owing to short crops and production being below the average.

9. In the current year while there has been a partial recovery in the earnings of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, the earnings from other railways have continued to expand, notably under coaching traffic on the East Indian Railway, and famine traffic on the North Western Railway. The earnings of the Burma, Oudh and Rohilkhand, Southern Mahratta and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways also show large increases due to general development of traffic.

10. The more important increases are :—

	R
East Indian	26,45,000
North Western	73,91,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand	15,44,000
Southern Mahratta	13,11,000
Great Indian Peninsula	15,47,000
Burma Railways	14,28,000
Bombay, Baroda and Central India	9,23,000
Eastern Bengal	11,17,000

WORKING EXPENSES.

11. The increase in working expenses during the year 1907-1908 is estimated to amount to Rs. 2,25,23,000 (£1,501,500).

This increase is due partly to more traffic being carried than was estimated for when the budget was prepared and partly to circumstances which tend to steadily increase the cost of working Indian Railways.

12. The rise in the cost of living in India both for Europeans as well as for Indians has necessitated a considerable rise in salaries of the working staff. The high price of grain too has rendered it necessary to grant grain allowances on a large scale.

The enormous rise in the price of coal is a most serious item in increased working expenses and is, moreover, one that seems at the present time to be likely to increase rather than diminish in the future.

13. The steady cause of increased working expenses is the pressing demand for more rapid transport facilities, and more conveniences to the travelling public. These improvements which take time to mature are being steadily carried out, as far as financial considerations permit of their being done. They throw a greater burden on Revenue than was the case a few years ago.

OPEN LINE CAPITAL REQUIREMENTS.

14. The total amount allotted during 1908-1909 to open lines, viz., 1,149 lakhs (£7,659,200) out of a total for the year of 1,500 lakhs (£10,000,000), has been divided between open line works and additional rolling stock approximately as follows :—

							Lakhs.
							R
1908-1909	{	Open line works	601½
		Rolling stock	547½

This shows an increase of 95 lakhs under open line works and a decrease of 55½ lakhs under rolling stock, in comparison with the provision made under these heads in 1907-1908, the figures for which were as follows :—

							Lakhs.
							R
1907-1908	{	Open line works	506½
		Rolling stock	603

The figures for 1907-1908 include the extra grant of 1½ crores sanctioned by the Secretary of State during the year which was divided between open line works generally and rolling stock to the extent of about 115 lakhs and 35 lakhs, respectively.

15. With the present demand of the trade for more rolling stock on Indian railways the decrease of 55½ lakhs in the provision for rolling stock for 1908-1909 than during the previous year requires some explanation. Large additions to rolling stock on a railway cannot be efficiently used unless additions to and improvements in open line works which are required to facilitate the effective working of the additional stock are also carried out.

16. For the year 1907-1908 the amount allotted for rolling stock was a crore in excess of that allotted for works, and as a great deal of the stock thus obtained will not come into use until the year 1908-1909, the most pressing claims during the coming year are for works to enable the increased stock to be made use of most effectively.

It thus becomes necessary to provide increased funds during 1908-1909 to enable the necessary works and facilities to be carried out simultaneously with the provision of the additional rolling stock, and it will be observed that the increase in the grant for works largely exceeds the decrease in the grant for rolling stock.

17. In their previous Memoranda the Railway Board have stated that in their opinion the standard of equipment of Indian Railways had not been maintained at a rate commensurate with the development of trade, and within the financial restrictions imposed on them they have devoted as much of the Capital at their disposal to meeting the cost of open line requirements including additional rolling stock as other claims on their resources permitted them to do.

18. For the year 1908-1909 they propose to restrict outlay on new construction as much as is possible, feeling that the demands of open lines for works to meet the requirements of existing trade have the first claim on their resources.

LINES IN PROGRESS AND NEW LINES.

19. Previous to the receipt of the Secretary of State's order regarding the extra $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores for 1908-1909 280 lakhs had been distributed to lines in progress. It is intended to increase this to 331 lakhs, and accordingly 51 lakhs have been shown in statement A as reserved for this purpose, which includes the 110 lakhs, originally allotted to the Bezwada Masulipatam Railway as the District Board of Kistna will meet further Capital outlay on this railway from their accumulated Revenue and not from Provincial loans.

20. After meeting the requirements of open lines and lines in progress as above 20 lakhs remain for new lines for which no allotment had previously been provided in the detailed statement. This 20 lakhs will be distributed over (1) the Nagpur-Itarsi Railway, (2) the Sini-Gurumaisini branch of the Bengal Nagpur Railway—both on the 5' 6" gauge. The commencement of the earthwork on the former is considered desirable in order to afford employment to the inhabitants of certain districts where scarcity prevails and funds will be allotted for this purpose. The latter line is 44 miles long and is intended mainly to serve Messrs. Tata & Co.'s Steel and Iron Works which are to be located at Kalimati.

GENERAL.

21. The year 1907-1908 has been one of considerable anxiety and trouble to Railway Administrations.

There has been considerable unrest among the working staff, which in the case of some lines caused serious dislocation to traffic and heavy losses to both the Railways and the trade of the country.

The existence of a very serious famine in Northern India has caused increased difficulties in working traffic, the normal trend of which was entirely changed for a time, so that what would ordinarily have been a large export traffic was suddenly diverted to other destinations the routes to which were not fully provided with sufficient facilities to meet the enormous increase in the traffic required to be carried over them.

22. The Railway systems of India are now in a state of transition during which they are endeavouring to deal with the rapid development of traffic with inadequate facilities for doing so. The Railway Board and Railway Administrations are however fully alive to the fact that trade has been expanding more rapidly than railway facilities and Capital is being spent as freely as financial considerations permit in developing the carrying power of Indian Railways and bringing them up to the requirements of the time, the process must however necessarily be a gradual one as a consequence of the restricted funds available for the purpose.

23. Attention is invited to statement B attached to this memorandum which shows proposed new lines which are under negotiation for construction by private Companies, and also to Statement C which shows the progress of railway construction during the year.

FIELD OPERATIONS.

No. 188.—The Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council has much pleasure in directing the publication of the following letter from the Chief of the Staff in India, dated the 16th March 1908, forwarding a despatch from Major-General Sir James Willcocks, K.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O., describing the operations of the Bazar Valley Field Force from the 13th February 1908 to the 2nd March 1908.

The Governor-General in Council concurs with the Commander-in-Chief in his opinion that the able manner in which the operations were conducted reflects great credit on Major-General Sir James Willcocks and the Brigade Commanders and Staff working under his orders.

His Excellency in Council also shares with the Commander-in-Chief his appreciation of the soldierly conduct displayed by all ranks throughout the operations.

No. 347-M. C., dated Calcutta, 16th March 1908.

From—The Chief of the Staff.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India. ARMY DEPARTMENT.

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the accompanying despatch from Major-General Sir James Willcocks, K.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O., describing the operations of the Bazar Valley Field Force.

2. The speed with which the Force was mobilised, and the rapidity of its movement into the Bazar Valley and subsequent operations, contributed very largely to the quick and successful termination of the expedition.

3. To secure speed in movement, the troops operated on a much lighter scale of equipment and transport than has been adopted on previous occasions on the frontier; but although the climatic conditions were severe, the health of the Force and the admirable spirit displayed by all ranks left nothing to be desired.

4. The losses inflicted on the Zakka Khel were unusually heavy, and were due to the excellent handling of the troops and to their training and efficiency in the field.

5. Lord Kitchener is confident that the Government of India will agree with him in considering that the work done reflects the greatest credit on all concerned.

His Excellency desires especially to commend to the notice of Government the excellent services of Major-General Sir James Willcocks, who so ably conducted the operations and brought them so rapidly to a successful conclusion.

He trusts also that those who have been brought to notice in this despatch may be considered deserving of commendation.

Field Operations, dated Peshawar, 5th March 1908.

From—MAJOR-GENERAL SIR JAMES WILLCOCKS, K.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O., Commanding Bazar Valley Field Force,

To—The Chief of the Staff, Army Head-Quarters, Calcutta.

I have the honour to submit the following report for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief on the operations of the Field Force under my command in the Bazar Valley.

1. On the 3rd February I received telegraphic orders from His Excellency which informed me that a punitive expedition against the Zakka Khel Afridis had been approved by the Secretary of State for India. It was enjoined on me to keep the matter secret and to so arrange that within a few days the troops which were to form the expeditionary force should be ready to move at once on the orders for an advance being issued. I also received written instructions which gave a general idea of what was to be done; with detailed orders for the composition of the Force and a scheme of operations as a guide up to the time the troops entered the country of the Zakka Khel.

The following were the strengths :—

First Brigade.

1st Battalion, Royal Warwickshire Regiment.
53rd Sikhs (Frontier Force), 59th Scinde Rifles (Frontier Force), and Battalion, 5th Gurkhas (Frontier Force).

Second Brigade.

1st Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders.
28th Punjabis.
45th Sikhs.
54th Sikhs (Frontier Force).

Third Brigade (in reserve).

1st Battalion, Royal Munster Fusiliers.
23rd Peshawar Mountain Battery (Frontier Force).
1st Battalion, 6th Gurkha Rifles.
55th Coke's Rifles (Frontier Force).

Divisional Troops.

2 Squadrons, 19th Lancers.
2 Squadrons, 37th Lancers.
23rd Sikh Pioneers.
25th Punjabis.
No. 3 Mountain Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery.
4 guns, 22nd (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
No. 6 Company, 1st Sappers and Miners.
No. 9 Company, 2nd Sappers and Miners.

Attached.—800 Khyber Rifles.

2. Later on I received instructions to be ready to move forward from Peshawar as soon as the Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, had interviewed the Afridi Jirgahs, which had meantime been ordered to assemble there.

3. During the few days remaining all the railway, transport, supply, medical and other arrangements were completed, mostly by verbal orders. In accordance with instructions from Army Head-Quarters and in communication with the General Officer Commanding, Rawal Pindi Division, the troops and followers from that Division which were to form part of the Field Force were held in readiness. Up to the last moment secrecy was maintained and not until within a few hours of starting were all ranks of the advanced troops equipped with field service clothing, etc.

4. On the 12th February the Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, interviewed the Afridi Jirgahs. This same afternoon troops began to move forward and next day the piquets in the Khyber Pass were taken over by detachments of the Field Force; and line of communication posts were established at Jamrud and Ali Musjid. Half a battalion, 5th Gurkhas, marched to Lundi Kotal.

5. During the 12th February the 2nd Brigade from Nowshera and other troops from outside the 1st Division area arrived by road or rail at Peshawar and the Force which was to make the first advance was completed. The troops moving from the above two stations were at once replaced by the Reserve Brigade which arrived by train.

6. On 13th February the 1st and 2nd Brigades and Divisional troops left Peshawar and bivouacked at Jamrud. No tents were carried and all officers were on half field service scale of baggage.

7. On 14th February the Force moved to Lala China near Ali Musjid.

8. I felt convinced, considering the quiet way in which the Force had been mobilised, and how little was even known of its departure from Peshawar, that by a rapid march into the centre of Bazar we should not only morally surprise the enemy but forestall them in any of the positions they might have selected to defend. Accordingly at dawn on 15th February the following troops, under command of Major-General Barrett, C.B., left Lala China :—

With the Divisional Staff I accompanied this Column.

	Strength.
3rd Mountain Battery.		45th Sikhs.
Seaforth Highlanders.		54th "
28th Punjabis.		Wing 2-5th Gurkhas.

6th Company, Sappers and Miners.

Excepting a very small proportion of water, ambulance and other necessary mules, no transport accompanied this advance and officers and men carried three days' rations on the person. The route taken was by Chora in Malikdin country. The strong fort belonging to Yar Mahomed Khan at this place was occupied by troops from General Anderson's Brigade which moved up from Ali Musjid this same day.

No opposition was met with until after passing Chora when the Zakkas began firing on the advanced guard near Tanda, Tangi and from the high hill Tsapara on to which the 5th Gurkhas were advancing. The column moved on, being fired at regularly from our left flank till we reached Walai, east of China. Only one casualty occurred, a gunner of the 3rd Mountain Battery being wounded.

It was getting late now and a position for the night was selected. The Seaforth Highlanders swarmed up Khar Ghundai, a steep hill 1,000 feet above the bivouac, and established themselves in sangars on the summit. Piquets were also placed round the Walai nala. Heavy firing was kept up throughout the night, but only caused us the loss of one Highlander and one sepoy, 28th Punjabis, killed, both in the piquets. The Highlanders also had an officer and four men struck by rocks hurled from close quarters into the sangars. The Zakkas lost three killed and seven wounded on Seaforth's hill, amongst the latter being the well-known raid leader Dadai, badly hit.

9. The 5th Gurkhas on Tsapara hill were also sniped all night, but had no casualties.

10. Whilst we were marching to Walai, a small column from Lundi Kotal, consisting of a wing 5th Gurkhas and 700 Khyber Rifles, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Roos-Keppel, Chief Political Officer with the Force, moved on the same date and rapidly crossing the Bazar pass entered the Valley without opposition and occupied China itself. The piquets were fired on all night, but no casualty occurred. This column moved without any transport whatever and carried its ammunition and 3 days' rations on the person.

11. Thus within 12 hours of leaving the Khyber the two columns had established themselves in the heart of the Zakka country. From information since received it is clear that the Zakkas had no idea of our date of leaving Ali Musjid and had made up their minds we should in any case halt at Chora for a day, and in consequence had not time to occupy Khar Gundai, the strongest position in the Valley.

12. On the same day as I moved to Walai the major portion of the first Brigade occupied Chora, thus connecting up the Line of Communications.

13. On 16th February the advanced camp was moved up the Walai stream to a well protected site where there was a plentiful supply of running water. Here the telephone apparatus of the Peshawar Division was set up and proved most useful. Head-quarters being connected with the two Brigades and all important piquets, rendering immediate communication safe and easy.

During this afternoon the Lundi Kotal column marched into Walai from China. A large convoy of supplies from Chora also arrived in camp. Whilst this convoy was moving in, the 45th Sikhs who were piquetting the lower spurs of Sara Paial hill were being annoyed by fire from the crest, which in consequence it was decided to occupy. The leading companies advanced but were brought to a standstill by a heavy fire from what appeared to be a considerable number of Zakkas. The Zakkas endeavoured to push forward, but other companies were sent in support of the Sikhs and by my orders a steady fire of shrapnel was kept up on the enemy who were plainly visible from the guns. Meantime half a battalion of the Seaforth Highlanders arrived from camp and the combined troops soon cleared the hill. The Sikhs had a native officer and a sepoy wounded. The Zakkas lost 5 killed and 10 wounded this day.

14. On 17th February most of the 1st Brigade had reached Walai, and I had sufficient troops to form two columns for daily operations. This became the head-quarters, from which punitive measures were hereafter carried out in every direction, according to the movements of the Zakkas.

15. Before daybreak on 18th February a column under Major-General Barrett moved out to destroy the towers and enclosures at China. With the Divisional Staff, I accompanied this Column.

	Strength.
Seaforth Highlanders.		5th Gurkhas.
3rd Mountain Battery.		23rd Pioneers
54th Sikhs.		6th Company Sappers.

The Seaforths and Gurkhas moving by Sarmundo and Khwar and covered by the mountain guns occupied the hills north of China. Lieutenant Macfadyen of the Seaforths was mortally wounded in this advance

After destroying the main towers and securing a quantity of wood and fodder the column began its return march to camp and the Zakkas at once closed in on the rear-guard and flanks. The troops retired very steadily, the battery and its escort of Seaforths which were in the comparatively open country south of China being specially selected for attack. The 54th Sikhs also on this flank were hotly engaged, some of the tribesmen closing to revolver range. Many Zakkas were here placed hors-de-combat.

By 4-20 P. M. the Gurkhas who held the hills above China had moved off them and the Seaforths had also come down from the eastern spurs which they had been occupying.

The column now retired quietly, the Zakkas making brave but fruitless attempts to follow. Their losses this day were heavy and they avoided the open country as far as possible, for the future. Our casualties were one British officer wounded (since dead), two British officers, two British rank and file, and four Native rank and file wounded.

16. On 19th February a column under Brigadier-General Anderson proceeded to China to complete the destruction of the towers and bring in fodder. No opposition was offered to the advance, but as usual the Zakkas followed up the retirement and were again severely punished. The troops returned to camp by the Jabagai gorge.

17. On 20th February Brigadier-General Anderson again moved out with a column to reconnoitre the Tsatsobi Pass and the Algad Valley. I accompanied this reconnaissance. The advanced guard was fired on from both sides of the Pass, but a good survey was obtained by Captain Rich, R.E.

Whilst the towers at Sarmundo and Khwar were being destroyed, a portion of the column moved up the Algad Valley and from Sarwakai Pass saw a body of Zakkas advancing from the direction of Halwai. A few shells soon scattered them. The retirement to camp was followed with less vigour than on the 18th instant, but the enemy again suffered loss.

18. News had been received for some days that the tribesmen had collected in large numbers at Halwai, where they had been joined by many Sangu Khels and other Shinwaris from across the Afghan border. On 21st February I moved with two columns under command of Generals Barrett and Anderson, keeping a squadron of the 37th Lancers with me in case an opportunity for the employment of cavalry presented itself.

Barrett's Column.

Anderson's Column.

59th Rifles.

The 28th Punjabis of Barrett's Brigade occupied the China heights soon after daylight and held them during the day to cover the retirement; the remainder of this Brigade took the route south of China. The Khyber Rifles and 6th Company, Sappers, moved by the Bazar nala and destroyed the towers at Kago Kamar. Fire was opened on them by the Zakkas and kept up during most of the day. The Seaforths on our extreme left occupied the Saran hills and kept the enemy to the south and west of Halwai.

Meantime Anderson's Brigade, moving north of China by Khwar and the Sarwakai pass, debouched on to the plain north of Halwai. During this movement the Zakkas kept up a dropping fire from the direction of Pastakai. The two columns now advanced simultaneously. The steep hills over-looking Halwai were occupied without a check, the mountain guns making the enemy's sangars quite untenable. Anderson's right was very well protected from any attack from the Thibai or Mangal Bagh passes by the 59th Rifles.

19. The towers and stacks of timber in Halwai were destroyed and the Force commenced its return march to camp. This was, as usual, the signal for numerous parties to come down from the Thibai direction. These opened fire at long ranges, but the Derajat Battery, very well handled, kept them on the move. Both Brigades were now moving by the south of China hills, which were held by the 28th Punjabis. By the time the rearmost battalion had arrived abreast of China, the Zakkas had almost died away, but as the 28th Punjabis began to leave the hills, covered by the fire of six guns, the tribesmen appeared in considerable numbers and closely pressed the battalion. The Punjabis withdrew steadily, but lost one man killed and eight wounded during the operation. Several acts of individual gallantry are reported and I am recommending three men for the Indian Order of Merit.

On our left (facing enemy) the Seaforths and Khyber Rifles were also attacked, the Zakkas advancing to close range, several of them being shot by both corps. It was whilst gallantly directing his rearmost companies at this stage of the fight that Major the Hon'ble Forbes-Sempill, Seaforth Highlanders, was killed.

The 53rd Sikhs who formed the rear centre covered the retirement and were very well handled.

By the time the rear guard had got east of China hills, the Zakkas drew off and only fired at long ranges. Our casualties were one British officer and one sepoy killed and ten native rank and file wounded. Not a shot was fired into camp this night.

20. On the night of 22nd February the tribesmen tried the effects of sniping from several directions simultaneously, but although they wounded a Sergeant in the Warwicks, their own casualties are reported to have been a good deal heavier.

21. Next morning General Anderson again visited China with a column and brought away most of the remaining wood and fodder. The Zakkas kept at a very respectful distance, but the mountain guns again did some good work. Whilst demolishing the last tower, two sappers and a follower were injured.

During the afternoon the first of the Afridi Jirgahs arrived in camp and asked for terms and mercy for the Zakka Khel and expressed their eagerness and ability to deal with them in the future. I gave them 48 hours to complete these arrangements and they all left for Halwai. In order that they might meet the Zakka elders, I suspended active operations in the Halwai direction for that period.

22. On 24th February Lieutenant-Colonel Buchanan, 54th Sikhs, with a small column visited Jabagai and destroyed the towers. The Zakkas offered but a feeble resistance.

23. On 26th February a water escort of 45th Sikhs on Tsapara hill was attacked in thick scrub jungle and had one sepoy killed and two wounded.

24. On 27th February the combined Afridi Jirgahs, about 1,100 men (including 300 Zakka Khels) arrived at China from Halwai with white flags. Lieutenant-Colonel Roos-Keppel, Chief Political Officer, went out alone half way to China to meet them and conducted them into camp.

Next day I held a public Jirgah at which they presented a petition, the details of which are known to Government. They deposited 53 rifles of English manufacture as a guarantee of keeping their promise to punish the individual raiders and begged we would now spare the Zakka Khel; undertaking to hold themselves responsible for the conduct of the tribe in future. As in my opinion the terms more than satisfied the demands of Government I accepted them and a formal agreement was drawn up and signed by 322 Chiefs and Elders, representing all the Afridi tribes, including the Zakka Khel.

25. Before the terms of above agreement were known at Chora on the night of 28th February, the camp at that post was heavily fired into and one sepoy, 23rd Pioneers, and four sepoys, 45th Sikhs, were wounded.

26. Immediately the terms of settlement with the Jirgahs had been signed on 28th February, secret orders were issued for the entire Force to leave the Bazar Valley at dawn next morning. The Zakka Khels and such others of the Jirgahs as desired were allowed to proceed to China at once, and this proceeding convinced them that we had no intention of leaving for a few days at least.

27. At daylight on the 29th February Major-General Barrett's Brigade began to leave camp for Ali Musjid via Chora, a distance of 15 miles. The transport and baggage of both Brigades had gone by 9 A.M., and by 10 o'clock the rearmost piquets began to withdraw. Anderson's Brigade covered the withdrawal and his arrangements were very well carried out. I remained with this Brigade at Chora the night and next day marched through to Jamrud, where the entire force was concentrated prior to demobilisation. A battalion and two squadrons were left at Ali Musjid as a temporary guard to surplus stores.

28. From the time we left China till arrival in British India not a shot was fired by the Zakkas. I am glad to be able to add that during the entire operations not a single follower, public or private, was killed or wounded by the enemy, and only one rifle was lost in the Bazar Valley and that was on a man killed while skirmishing in thick bush.

29. I beg to bring to the notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the soldierly conduct of all ranks of the Force. Their good discipline and cheerfulness have been very marked, and it has indeed been an honour to command such a fine division in the field. The fact that Brigades were employed intact under their own Generals and Staff, as they had been trained in peace time, made the carrying out of all operations a simple matter, and my own share in the work was appreciably lightened by having been allowed to select my Staff Officers from the permanent Divisional establishment.

That the enemy lost heavily whilst our own casualties were small is due to the improvement in musketry training and the manner in which the troops work and run up shelter at the shortest possible notice. Sangars and pits quickly covered the bivouacs and the piquets were secured against a rush at night by wire entanglements, etc. Constant night work now forms a regular part of infantry training and the results were very plainly visible. As far as hill fighting is concerned our troops had little to learn from the Afridis.

The various departments of the Force were all satisfactory and especially the transport service, where the discipline and order that prevailed were very noticeable.

The good conduct of the Khyber Rifles, many of whom were actually serving against their own kith and kin is a remarkable testimony to their efficiency and loyalty. Not a rifle was lost by the corps, nor was there a single desertion.

30. The enemy's losses as far as can be ascertained at present have been at least 70 killed and the wounded may reasonably be put at a much higher figure.

31. I have much pleasure in bringing to the favourable notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the names of the following officers and others who have rendered exceptionally good service :—

DIVISIONAL STAFF.

Brigadier-General H. Mullaly, C.B., Chief Staff Officer.

I cannot speak too highly of this officer. From start to finish his work was done with a thoroughness which left nothing to be desired. His knowledge of Staff duties, his ability and his untiring energy in the field have all helped considerably in bringing the operations to a successful issue. I specially recommend him for advancement in the service.

Colonel A. W. Money, Royal Artillery, Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster General.

An excellent Staff officer who materially helped in organising the force. His past experience in the field combined with his decided ability, energy and zeal have been of the greatest assistance and I specially commend him to the Commander-in-Chief's notice.

Captain A. B. Whatman, D.S.O., Somersetshire Light Infantry, Chief Signalling Officer.

No officer in the Force did better work. The signalling to and from India and tactically in the field was of a very high order. His energy, perseverance under trying conditions, and his coolness in all circumstances are remarkable and I strongly recommend him for advancement.

Captain N. J. C. Livingstone-Learmonth, 15th Hussars.

A fine soldier. Did very good work in the field and was most helpful in all the duties of a Staff officer.

Lieutenant A. P. Y. Langhorne, Royal Artillery, Aide-de-Camp.

An exceptionally good officer, very zealous and energetic and possesses plenty of common sense. He rendered me valuable aid in the field and I specially commend him to the Commander-in-Chief.

Captain E. T. Rich, Royal Engineers.

A very good officer, most energetic and always to the fore. His maps and reports were of great assistance during operations. He has completed a very careful survey of the Bazar Valley.

Major A. Mullaly, D.S.O., Divisional Transport Officer.

A very practical and useful officer in the field. Under his orders everything worked most satisfactorily.

FIRST BRIGADE.

Brigadier-General C. A. Anderson, C.B.

Twice commanded columns with marked success, also covered the retirement from the Bazar Valley which operation was conducted with skill. He is a very good Brigadier; and possesses the thorough confidence of all ranks.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Stewart, 2nd Battalion, 5th Gurkhas.

An excellent Battalion Commander who was frequently assigned difficult duties which he invariably carried out most satisfactorily.

Captain C de Sausmares, D.S.O., R.A., 22nd Mountain Battery.

A gallant soldier and very good gunner, did splendidly on every occasion that the battery was employed.

Captain A. L. Tarver, 124th Baluchistan Infantry, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, 1st Brigade.

A good Staff Officer whose work in the field was exceedingly well performed.

SECOND BRIGADE.

Major-General A. A. Barrett, C.B.

Commanded the Brigade in the first advance into Bazar and again on 18th February near China when the enemy were very severely handled. He has much frontier experience and is a most reliable soldier.

*Captain and Adjutant K. G. Buchanan, } 1st Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders.
Major R. S. Vandelaar,*

I specially bring these two officers to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's notice. The Seaforths have throughout the operations proved themselves a very fine battalion and have done a great share of the work of the Force. Had Major the Hon'ble Forbes-Sempill lived I should have recommended him for a reward for his distinguished services.

Lieutenant-Colonel K. F. Buchanan, 54th Sikhs (Frontier Force).

An able and energetic commanding officer. Has a fine regiment and has shown himself a capable leader of men.

Captain H. A. H. Rice,
Lieutenant S. R. Shirley, } 54th Sikhs (Frontier Force).

These two officers behaved with great gallantry before China on 18th February, and I recommend them for some mark of distinction.

A good soldier, active and resourceful. Did very good work in the field.

Acted with coolness and much judgment on 21st February during the withdrawal from China hills.

KHYBER RIFLES.

Captain H. A. H. Bickford, 56th Rifles (Frontier Force).

Commanded the corps with ability and showed how well trans-border soldiers will work even against their own people when well led.

POLITICAL.

I strongly commend to the favourable notice of the Commander-in-Chief and of Government the services of—

Lieutenant-Colonel G. O. Roos-Keppel, C.I.E., Chief Political Officer with the Force.

He commanded the column which advanced from Lundi Kotal on 15th February. This duty was very well carried out. He also accompanied me every day with the various punitive columns. It is due to his tact, judgment and thorough knowledge of all the Afridi tribes that the settlement of the Zakka Khel question was so rapidly and satisfactorily brought to a conclusion. I cannot speak too highly of his valuable services which are deserving of full recognition.

Khan Bahadur Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum, Assistant to the Chief Political Officer.

I have brought his services prominently to the notice of the Foreign Department of the Government of India, and I would here only add that his assistance to the troops during our first advance was thoroughly appreciated by us all.

Mr. F. W. Littlewood, District Traffic Superintendent, North-Western Railway.

Gave me great assistance and at the shortest possible notice arranged for the many trains necessary to move up the Reserve Brigade to Nowshera.

No. 23.—In Rule 14 of the rules for the election of Municipal Commissioners for the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore issued under the Resident's Notification No. 675, dated the 11th February 1904, for the words "30th day of April" the words "15th day of June" shall be substituted.

The 12th March 1908.

No. 26.—Under section 19 of the Indian Treasure Trove Act, 1878 (VI of 1878), as applied to the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore, the Resident in Mysore is pleased to make the following rules to regulate proceedings under the said Act.

1. When the finder of any treasure has not deposited it in the Resident's Treasury, or refuses or neglects to give the security required, the Collector may take possession of such treasure and remove it to the Resident's Treasury.

2. The Collector's Notification requiring claimants to appear shall be forthwith forwarded to—

- (i) The publisher of the Gazette of India for publication in Part II of the Gazette ;

- (iii) The Superintendent of the Government Central Press, Bombay, for publication in the Bombay Gazette ;
- (iv) The Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, for publication in the Fort St. George Gazette.

The date on which the Notification is published in the Gazette of India shall be taken to be the date of publication for the purposes of section 5, clause (a) of the Act, as applied to the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore.

3. The Collector shall whenever he has made a declaration under section 9 that any treasure is ownerless, and before delivering or dividing the treasure as provided by sections 10-15 of the Act, consult the Superintendent of the Government Central Museum, Madras, as to whether he shall declare his intention to acquire such treasure, or any portion thereof, on behalf of the Government, and shall be guided by his advice. When making the reference the Collector shall furnish the Superintendent of the Government Central Museum with a detailed descriptive list of the objects found indicating which of the objects in the list are likely to prove of historical or archaeological interest.

4. The Superintendent of the Government Central Museum, Madras, shall, on a reference being made to him by the Collector under the last rule, consult the Superintendent of the Archaeological Survey, and also, if he considers it desirable, the Assistant Archaeological Superintendent for Epigraphy, Southern Circle, and any other responsible officer of Government interested in the conservation of objects of historical and archaeological interest whom he may see fit to consult.

5. (1) All coins acquired under the Act on the recommendation of the Superintendent of the Government Central Museum, Madras, shall be sent to the Superintendent, who shall report to the Resident in Mysore their probable numismatic value and submit a distribution list of specimens of each coin which he may consider deserving of preservation. If the museum already possesses one or more specimens, or if more specimens than one, but not sufficient for all the institutions named in the preceding clause, are found, the said institution shall be supplied in the order prescribed with one specimen each until the specimens are exhausted.

(3) When a find of coins contains more specimens of a single variety than are required for the purpose of presenting one or more coins to each of the said institutions, which requires it, the Superintendent of the Government Central Museum, Madras, may, if the coins are of considerable numismatic value, recommend the acquisition of the whole or any portion of the coins. Surplus coins thus acquired shall be kept for sale at the Government Central Museum by the Superintendent who shall, from time to time, advertise coins in Part II of the Gazette of India and also supply lists of coins for sale to numismatists who register their names, and to such museums and societies as the Superintendent may consider likely to acquire coins.

6. Such coins shall be sent by the Collector to the Superintendent of the Government Central Museum, who shall deal with them in the manner prescribed in the preceding rule.

7. Any coins not sold within six months of the date of advertisement in the Gazette of India, which may be considered worth sending, shall be forwarded to the Resident for transmission to the India Office to be presented to select institutions in Europe.

PAPER CURRENCY DEPARTMENT,
The 16th March 1908.

* The Indian Treasure Trove Act, 1878, as applied to the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore, permits the Government to claim the possession of treasure of which, as laid down in section 4 of the Act, the amount or value is over 10 rupees. Such "value" is not, as in section 16, the price which the mere materials of the articles found would fetch, but the market value or the price which the discovered object might, if offered for sale, reasonably be presumed to realise. The conditions under which the finder of treasure is to be compensated in cases where the claim of Government is asserted are described in section 16 of the Act. The value at which the treasure is to be assessed is there defined as the value of the materials only plus one-fifth of such value. The extra price which the discovered article might realise in virtue of its value as an object of archaeological interest need not enter into account.

† An material portion of discovered antiquities will be ascertained on enquiry to have been found in circumstances which would bring them under the provisions of the Act. Such will be the case in respect of all ownerless antiquities of any value "hidden in the soil or in anything affixed thereto." Statuary and remains of buildings as well as coins, would, if buried under-ground, usually satisfy the required conditions and could be classed as treasure under the definition of the Act, which was intended to apply to objects of antiquarian interest discovered below the surface of the soil.

‡ The rules apply to the preservation in situ of objects of archaeological interest which may be claimed and purchased under the Act.

§ It is the duty of all servants of the State to protect national interests so far as to ascertain the particulars of any discovery which may be brought to their notice and to report the circumstances to the heads of their departments for communication to the Collector and Superintendent, Government Central Museum, Madras.

PART V.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law for the Limitation of Suits, and for other purposes, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and regulations on the 20th March, 1908 ;—

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the Law for the Limitation of Suits, and for other purposes was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the appendix, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

2. This Bill does not purport to be a general amendment of the law of limitation and we have not treated it in that sense. The objects of it are to consolidate the law, which at present is scattered throughout a series of enactments, to clear up some points of doubt on which conflicts exist between the various High Courts, to make some amendments which are ancillary to the Code of Civil Procedure Bill lately passed by Council, and to remove the hardship caused by a recent decision of the Privy Council in regard to the period of limitation for certain suits on mortgages. The criticisms on the Bill raise a number of other points and make various suggestions for wider reforms, but we have rejected these criticisms and confined ourselves to the objects stated.

3. In the notes on clauses in the following paragraph we have dealt with the amendment of the law contained in the Bill as circulated for opinion. but there are two points on which after the fullest consideration we suggest further amendment and to them we desire to invite particular attention. The first of them relates to clause 6 of the Bill, which corresponds with section 7 of the existing Act. Under that clause a minor is entitled to claim the benefit of his minority in respect of any application and he can make an application on attaining his majority in any matter whatever. In our opinion this provision leads to great hardship. It is possible for a minor to make an application to set aside a sale in execution of a decree or an order for abatement twenty years after the occurrence and this although he has been represented by a guardian ad litem at the time of the sale or abatement. We think that this clause should be limited to applications for the execution of decrees, and that in regard to other applications the minor should be bound by the acts of his representatives. The same observation applies to clause 7. We desire to point out in this connection that in regard to those applications which are now governed by periods of limitation enacted in the Code of Civil Procedure, minors cannot at the present time claim the benefit of this section. These provisions have now been removed from the Code of Civil Procedure to this Bill. It is clear that in regard to those applications the minor ought not to have the benefit of this clause and we can see no distinction between applications in this respect. The second point arises in regard to clause 14. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether misjoinder of parties or of causes of action is a "cause of a like nature" with defect of jurisdiction within the meaning of this clause. There is much to be said for the view that there is a distinction between defects of jurisdiction and misjoinder of parties or of causes of action; but on the whole we think that the clause should be extended to cover these latter cases, and we have inserted an explanation for that purpose.

4. We have somewhat re-arranged the clauses in order to preserve the existing numbering.

CLAUSES.

Clause 2.—We have omitted sub-clause 6; the definition of moveable property contained in it has been objected to, and we think on the whole that it should be omitted.

Clause 3.—The illustrations have been omitted. We think that they are not necessary, and are liable to misconstruction.

Clause 5.—It has been suggested that the scope of clause 5 should be enlarged, and a doubt has been expressed by high authority as to whether the expression "Code of Civil Procedure" would include rules which may be made under it. We have accordingly altered the clause so as to make its provisions extend to applications for leave to appeal and to all applications to which it may be made applicable by "any enactment or rule for the time being in force."

Clause 6 of the Bill as introduced is, in our opinion, merely explanatory of clause 5; we have accordingly omitted the former and embodied its purport in an explanation to the latter clause.

Clauses 6, 7 and 8.—We have already referred to the principal alteration we have made in clauses 6 and 7.

Adopting a suggestion of the Chief Justice of Bombay we have slightly altered the language of clause 7 so as to bring it more into conformity with that of clause 6.

Clause 12 (2).—We have struck out the words "as a pauper" from this sub-clause so as to make its provisions applicable to all applications for leave to appeal.

Clause 14.—We have re-drafted sub-clause (2) so as to bring it into line with sub-clause (1), and have made Explanation II more comprehensive.

We have added Explanation III to remove the conflict to which we have referred to above.

Clause 15.—We have altered clause 18 of the Bill as introduced so as to allow the period of notice to be excluded in the case of all suits of which notice is required to be given by any enactment for the time being in force, and we have brought it up as sub-clause (2) to clause 15.

Clause 16.—We have enlarged the scope of this clause. The right to apply to set aside an execution sale is not limited to the judgment-debtor.

Clause 19.—We have struck out the words in italics; we think that the object with which they were inserted would be better carried out by the explanation which we have added.

We have struck out the words "according to the nature of the original liability" in sub-clause (1) as unnecessary and added the words "subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872" in sub-clause (2) to remove a conflict.

Clause 20.—We have omitted the words "according to the nature of the original liability."

Clause 24.—We have struck out illustration (b).

Clause 31.—We have re-drafted this clause so as to make its provisions of wider application. We think it will now be found to provide for all the classes of cases which have been brought to our notice.

SCHEDULE I.

We approve of the proposal to omit Articles 34 and 35 of the Second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

Article 34 provides for suits for the recovery of a wife; we fully agree in the opinion expressed by the Special Committee on the Civil Procedure Code that there can be under the law no such decree as a decree for the recovery of a wife, and there would be no point in providing a period of limitation for a suit for that purpose.

Article 35 provides for suits for the restitution of conjugal rights.

After giving the matter our best consideration we have arrived at the conclusion that this article should also be omitted. The High Court of Allahabad and the Chief Court of the Punjab hold that these suits are not subject to any rule of limitation on the ground, amongst others, that the withholding of conjugal rights is to be regarded as a continuing wrong within the meaning of section 23 of the Act, while the Bombay High Court, whose view has been adopted by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras, has applied the bar of limitation on the ground that the specific provisions of this article must be taken to override the general provisions of section 23. The omission of the article would remove this conflict.

Suits for the restitution of conjugal rights brought under the Indian Divorce Act are not governed by any rule of limitation, and we can see no reason why similar suits brought under any other law should be differently treated in this respect.

Article 99.—We have omitted the explanation.

Article 109.—We have struck out from the third column all the words except "when the profits are received". Those words refer to suits for restitution consequential on the reversal of a decree and would no longer be needed as the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, provides that no suit would lie to claim such restitution.

Article 116.—We have restored the Article of the present Act.

Article 118.—We have not attempted to remove the conflict which exists as to the construction of this article, and we have thought it right not to make any alteration in it. We have accordingly struck out the words proposed to be added in the third column.

Article 134.—The word "purchase" in this article has been held to include mortgages and leases. We have used the general word "transfer" in its place.

Article 138.—We think that the starting point for the running of time should be the date when the sale becomes absolute; the purchaser would not be in a position to sue for possession before that date.

Article 153.—We understand that an application for a certificate that a case is a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council is in ordinary legal language spoken of as an application for leave to appeal. We have used the expression leave to appeal in this article and elsewhere to include this meaning.

Article 163.—This article has been re-drafted so as to include certain provisions relating to limitation which have been removed from the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.

Articles 164, 169.—In these two articles we have altered the time from which the period would begin to run.

Under the Code of Civil Procedure a defendant or a respondent against whom a decree has been passed ex parte may have it set aside either on the ground that the summons in the suit or the notice of appeal had not been duly served on him or on the ground that he had sufficient cause for not appearing on the day fixed for trial. We think that in cases where a person claims to have a decree passed against him set aside notwithstanding that the summons or notice was duly served on him, time should run against him from the date of the decree and that where there has been no due service of summons or notice, time ought not to run against him until he has knowledge of the decree.

We have added a new article No 180 incorporating certain provisions as to limitation which have been removed from the Code of Civil Procedure Bill.

No. II.

The bracketed marginal references relate to sections of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law for the Limitation of Suits, and for other purposes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the limitation of suits, appeals and certain applications to Courts; and whereas it is also expedient to provide rules for acquiring by possession the ownership of easements and other property; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

[S. 1.] 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Short title, extent and commencement. Limitation Act, 1908.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) This section and section 31 shall come into force at once. The rest of this Act shall come into force on the first day of January, 1909.*

[S. 3.] 2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or Definitions. context,—

(1) "applicant" includes any person from or through whom an applicant derives his right to apply:

(2) "bill of exchange" includes a hundi and a cheque:

(3) "bond" includes any instrument whereby a person obliges himself to pay money to another, on condition that the obligation shall be void if a specified act is performed, or is not performed, as the case may be:

(4) "defendant" includes any person from or through whom a defendant derives his liability to be sued:

(5) "easement" includes a right, not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another:

(6) "foreign country" means any country other than British India:

(7) "good faith": nothing shall be deemed to be done in good faith which is not done with due care and attention:

* This is the date proposed for the commencement of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.

(8) "plaintiff" includes any person from or through whom a plaintiff derives his right to sue:

(9) "promissory note" means any instrument whereby the maker engages absolutely to pay a specified sum of money to another at a time therein limited, or on demand, or at sight:

(10) "suit" does not include an appeal or an application:

(11) "trustee" does not include a benami-dar, a mortgagee remaining in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied, or a wrong-doer in possession without title.

PART II.

LIMITATION OF SUITS, APPEALS AND APPLICATIONS.

3. Subject to the provisions contained in Dismissal of suits, sections 4 to 25 (inclusive), etc., instituted, etc., every suit instituted, appeal after period of limitation preferred, and application made, after the period of limitation prescribed therefor by the first schedule shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence [S. 4]

Explanation.—A suit is instituted, in ordinary cases, when the plaint is presented to the proper officer; in the case of a pauper, when his application for leave to sue as a pauper is made; and, in the case of a claim against a company which is being wound up by the Court, when the claimant first sends in his claim to the official liquidator.

4. Where the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day that the Court re-opens. [S. 5, para. 1.]

5. Any appeal or application for a review of judgment or for leave to Extension of period in certain cases. appeal or any other application to which this section may be made applicable by any enactment or rule for the time being in force may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal or making the application within such period. [S. 5, para. 1.]

The Indian Limitation Bill.(Part II.—Limitation of Suits, Appeals and Applications.)

[S. 5A.] Explanation.—The fact that the appellant or applicant was misled by any order, practice or judgment of the High Court in ascertaining or computing the prescribed period of limitation may be sufficient cause within the meaning of this section.

[S. 7.] 6. (1) Where a person entitled to institute a suit or make an application for the execution of a decree is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit or make the application within the same period after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the first schedule.

(2) Where such person is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, affected by two such disabilities, or where, before his disability has ceased, he is affected by another disability, he may institute the suit or make the application within the same period, after both disabilities have ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

(3) Where the disability continues up to the death of such person, his legal representative may institute the suit or make the application within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

(4) Where such representative is at the date of the death affected by any such disability, the rules contained in sub-sections (1) and (2) shall apply.

Illustrations.

(a) The right to sue for the hire of a boat accrues to A during his minority. He attains majority four years after such accrues. He may institute his suit at any time within three years from the date of his attaining majority.

(b) A right to sue accrues to Z during his minority. After the accrues, but while Z is still a minor, he becomes insane. Time runs against Z from the date when his insanity and minority cease.

(c) A right to sue accrues to X during his minority. X dies before attaining majority, and is succeeded by Y, his minor son. Time runs against Y from the date of his attaining majority.

[S. 8.] 7. Where one of several persons jointly entitled to institute a suit or make an application for the execution of a decree is under any such disability, and a discharge can be given without the concurrence of such person, time will run against them all: but, where no such discharge can be given, time will not run as against any of them until one of them becomes capable of giving such discharge without the concurrence of the others or until the disability has ceased.

Illustrations.

(a) A incurs a debt to a firm of which B, C and D are partners. B is insane, and C is a minor. D can give a discharge of the debt without the concurrence of B and C. Time runs against B, C and D.

(b) A incurs a debt to a firm of which E, F and G are partners. E and F are insane, and G is a minor. Time will not run against any of them until either E or F becomes sane, or G attains majority.

8 Nothing in section 6 or in section 7 applies to suits to enforce right of pre-emption, or shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disability or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which any suit must be instituted or application made.

Illustrations.

(a) A, to whom a right to sue for a legacy has accrued during his minority, attains majority eleven years after such accrues. A has, under the ordinary law, only one year remaining within which to sue. But under section 6 and this section an extension of two years will be allowed him, making in all a period of three years from the date of his attaining majority, within which he may bring his suit.

(b) A right to sue for an hereditary office accrues to A who at the time is insane. Six years after the accrues A recovers his reason. A has six years, under the ordinary law, from the date when his insanity ceased within which to institute a suit. No extension of time will be given him under section 6 read with this section.

(c) A right to sue as landlord to recover possession from a tenant accrues to A, who is an idiot. A dies three years after the accrues, his idiocy continuing up to the date of his death. A's representative in interest has, under the ordinary law, nine years from the date of A's death within which to bring a suit. Section 6 read with this section does not extend that time, except where the representative is himself under disability when the representation devolves upon him.

9. Where once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it: [S. 9a]

Provided that, where letters of administration to the estate of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt shall be suspended while the administration continues.

10. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his legal representa- [S. 10a] ties or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration), for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, or the proceeds thereof, or for an account of such property or proceeds, shall be barred by any length of time.

- [S. 11.] 11. (1) Suits instituted in British India on contracts entered into in a foreign country are subject to the rules of limitation contained in this Act.

(2) No foreign rule of limitation shall be a defence to a suit instituted in British India on a contract entered into in a foreign country, unless the sale has extinguished the contract and the parties were domiciled in such country during the period prescribed by such rule.

PART III.

COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

- [S. 12.] 12. (1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application, the day from which such period is to be reckoned shall be excluded.

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal, an application for leave to appeal and an application for a review of judgment, the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced, and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, sentence or order appealed from or sought to be reviewed, shall be excluded.

(3) Where a decree is appealed from or sought to be reviewed, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment on which it is founded shall also be excluded.

(4) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application to set aside an award, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded.

defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action and is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any application, the time during which the applicant has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the same party for the same relief shall be excluded, where such proceeding is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

Explanation I.—In excluding the time during which a former suit or application was pending, the day on which that suit or application was instituted or made, and the day on which the proceedings therein ended, shall both be counted.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section, a plaintiff or an applicant resisting an appeal shall be deemed to be prosecuting a proceeding.

Explanation III.—For the purposes of this section misjoinder of parties or of causes of action shall be deemed to be a cause of a like nature with defect of jurisdiction.

15. (1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit or application for the execution of a decree, the institution or execution of which has been stayed by injunction or order, the time of the continuance of the injunction or order, the day on which it was issued or made, and the day on which it was withdrawn, shall be excluded. [S. 15]

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit of which notice has been given in accordance with the requirements of any enactment for the time being in force, the period of such notice shall be excluded. [New.]

16. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, the time during which a proceeding to set aside the sale has been prosecuted shall be excluded. [S. 16]

be computed from the time when there is a legal representative of the deceased capable of instituting or making such suit or application.

(2) Where a person against whom, if he were living, a right to institute a suit or make an application would have accrued dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a legal representative of the deceased against whom the plaintiff may institute or make such suit or application.

(3) Nothing in sub-sections (1) and (2) applies to suits to enforce rights of pre-emption or to suits for the possession of immoveable property or of an hereditary office.

18. Where any person having a right to institute a suit or make an application has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded, or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed from him, the time limited for instituting a suit or making an application—

(a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or

(b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration, shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or, in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production.

19. Where before the expiration of the period prescribed for a suit or application in respect of any property or right, an acknowledgment of liability in respect of such property or right has been made in writing signed by the party against whom such property or right is claimed, or by some person through whom he derives title or liability, a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the acknowledgment was so signed.

(2) Where the writing containing the acknowledgment is undated, oral evidence may be given of the time when it was signed; but, subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, oral evidence of its contents shall not be received.

Explanation 1.—For the purposes of this section an acknowledgment may be sufficient though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right, or avers that the time for payment, delivery, performance or enjoyment has not yet come, or is accompanied by a refusal to pay, deliver, perform or permit to enjoy, or is coupled with a claim to a set-off, or is addressed to a person other than the person entitled to the property or right.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section, "signed" means signed either personally or by an agent duly authorized in this behalf.

Explanation III.—For the purposes of this section an application for the execution of a decree or order is an application in respect of a right.

20. (1) Where interest on a debt or legacy is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid as such by the person liable to pay the debt or legacy, or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf, or where part of the principal of a debt is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid by the debtor or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf, a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the payment was made:

Provided that, in the case of part payment of the principal of a debt, the fact of the payment appears in the handwriting of the person making the same.

(2) Where mortgaged land is in the possession of the mortgagee, the receipt of the rent or produce of such land shall be deemed to be a payment for the purpose of sub-section (1).

Explanation.—Debt includes money payable under a decree or order of Court.

21. (1) The expression "agent duly authorized in this behalf", in sections 19 and 20, shall, in the case of a person under disability, include his lawful guardian, committee or manager, or an agent duly authorized by such guardian, committee or manager to sign the acknowledgment or make the payment.

[New.]

(2) Nothing in the said sections renders one of several joint contractors, partners, executors or mortgagees chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed or of a payment made by, or by the agent of, any other or others of them.

[S. 21.]

22. (1) Where, after the institution of a suit, a new plaintiff or defendant is substituted or added, the suit shall, as regards him, be deemed to have been instituted when he was so made a party.

[S. 22, para. 1.]

(2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall apply to a case where a party is added or substituted owing to an assignment or devolution of any interest during the pendency of a suit or where a plaintiff is made a defendant or a defendant is made a plaintiff.

[S. 23.] 23. In the case of a continuing breach of contract and in the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract, a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the breach or the wrong as the case may be, continues.

[S. 24.] 24. In the case of a suit for compensation for an act which does not give rise to a cause of action unless some specific injury actually results therefrom, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the injury results.

Illustration.

A owns the surface of a field. B owns the subsoil B digs coal thereout without causing any immediate apparent injury to the surface, but at last the surface subsides. The period of limitation in the case of a suit by A against B runs from the time of the subsidence.

[S. 25.] 25. All instruments shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar.

Illustrations.

(a) A Hindu makes a promissory note bearing a Native date only, and payable four months after date. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the note runs from the expiration of four months after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

(b) A Hindu makes a bond, bearing a Native date only, for the repayment of money within one year. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the bond runs from the expiration of one year after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

PART IV.

ACQUISITION OF OWNERSHIP BY POSSESSION.

[S. 26.] 26. (1) Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, and where any way or watercourse, or the use of any water, or any other easement (whether affirmative or negative) has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, or other easement shall be absolute and indefeasible.

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested.

(2) Where the property over which a right is claimed under sub-section (1) belongs to Government, that sub-section shall be read as if for the words "twenty years" the words "sixty years" were substituted.

Explanation.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section unless, where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Illustrations

(a) A suit is brought in 1911 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction, but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption from 1st January, 1890, to 1st January, 1910. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff, on one occasion during the twenty years, had asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed.

27. Where any land or water upon, over or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term shall be excluded in the computation of the period of twenty years in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land or water.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C, a Hindu widow, had a life interest in the land, that on C's death B became entitled to the land, and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

the passing of this Act, or within the period prescribed for such suit by the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, whichever period expires first.

in this Act or in the Indian Limitation Act,
1877, in the territories XV of 1877.
mentioned in the second schedule a suit for foreclosure or a suit for sale by a mortgagee, may the passing of this Act, or within sixty years tories instituted within the said period of sixty years and pending at the date of the passing of this Act, either in a Court of first instance or of appeal, shall be dismissed on the ground that a twelve years' rule of limitation is applicable.

on an application in writing to the Court by which the claim was dismissed or in which it was withdrawn, provided the application is made within six months from the date of the passing of this Act: and, on such restoration,

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 20th March, 1908:—

No. 3 OF 1908.

A Bill to give greater facilities to the Public for calling for and inspecting Accounts of Public Charities.

WHEREAS it is expedient to give greater facilities to the public for calling for and inspecting accounts of public charities; It is hereby enacted as follows:

1. (1) This Act may be called the Public Charities Accounts Act, 1908.
Short title, extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, except the Scheduled Districts; and

(3) It shall come into force

2. In the case of any express or constructive trust created for public purposes of a charitable or religious nature, any Court having jurisdiction to try a suit under section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, in respect of such trust, may, on the application of any two or more persons who have an interest in the trust and have obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate General to the making of such application, by order direct any trustee of such trust to cause to be prepared and filed in the Court within such time as may be specified in the order a detailed account of the receipts and disbursements in connection with the trust property for a period not exceeding three years next preceding the date of the application.

3. A copy of the order signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf and sealed with the seal of the Court shall be served on the trustee in such manner as the Court may direct.

4. Accounts filed in Court in pursuance of an order made under section 2 shall be open to inspection by the public.

5. Where a trustee fails to comply with an order duly made and served under the foregoing provisions, a suit for his removal on the ground of such failure may be instituted in the Court which made the order, and the Court may thereupon pass a decree for his removal unless he can show good cause for the failure.

6. The power conferred by section 2 on the Advocate General may, outside the Presidency-towns, be, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, exercised by the Collector or by such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of the Bill is to provide a simple procedure which would enable the public to obtain inspection of the accounts of public charities.

There is reason for suspecting that considerable portions of the revenues of these charities are misspent or squandered on useless objects. A regular inspection of accounts by the public would be an effective check upon such malpractices where they exist, and it is highly desirable in the interests of these charities to allow the public every reasonable facility for such inspection.

The Bill does not impose any new duty on trustees of public charities. The law as it stands gives sufficient powers to the Courts to direct accounts when once a suit has been instituted. The duty of keeping proper accounts, however, is not always observed by such trustees, and experience has shown that this duty is likely to be neglected unless the members of the public who are interested in the charity concerned are allowed the means of calling for and inspecting accounts without undertaking the burden of a suit.

The Bill by requiring the previous consent of the Advocate General or some officer specially empowered by the Local Government provides ample safeguard against its provisions being utilized for any indirect or other improper purpose.

PART II.

PROCEEDINGS FROM ACT OF INSOLVENCY TO DISCHARGE.

Acts of insolvency.

[46 & 47
Vict., c. 52,
s. 4:
Act III, 1907,
s. 4.] 9. A debtor commits an act of insolvency in each of the following cases, namely:—

- (a) if, in British India or elsewhere, he makes a transfer of his property to a third person for the benefit of his creditors generally;
- (b) if, in British India or elsewhere, he makes a transfer of his property or of any part thereof with intent to defeat or delay his creditors;
- (c) if, in British India or elsewhere, he makes any transfer of his property or of any part thereof, or of any interest therein, which would, under this or any other enactment for the time being in force, be void as a fraudulent preference if he were adjudged an insolvent;

(d) if, with intent, to defeat or delay his creditors,—

(i) he departs or remains out of British India,

(ii) he departs from his dwelling-house or usual place of business or otherwise absents himself,

(iii) he secludes himself so as to deprive his creditors of the means of communicating with him;

(e) if any of his property has been attached in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money;

(f) if he petitions to be adjudged an insolvent;

(g) if he gives notice to any of his creditors that he has suspended, or that he is about to suspend, payment of his debts;

(h) if he is imprisoned in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section, the act of an agent may be the act of the principal.

Order of adjudication.

10. Subject to the conditions specified in this Act, if a debtor commits an act of insolvency, an insolvency petition may be presented either by a creditor or by the debtor, and the Court may on such petition make an order (hereinafter called an order of adjudication) adjudging him an insolvent. [46 & 47
Vict., c. 52, s. 5.]

Explanation.—The presentation of a petition by the debtor shall be deemed an act of insolvency within the meaning of this section, and on such petition the Court may make an order of adjudication.

11. The Court shall not have jurisdiction to make an order of adjudication, unless— [46 & 47
Vict., c. 52,
s. 6 (1).]

(a) the debtor is, at the time of the presentation of the insolvency petition, in prison within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court in execution of the decree of a Court for the payment of money; or

(b) the debtor, or, if he is a member of a firm, his partner or one of his partners, has, within a year before the date of the presentation of the insolvency petition, ordinarily resided or had a dwelling-house or has carried on business either in person or through an agent within those limits.

The Presidency-towns Insolvency Bill.(Part II.—Proceedings from Act of Insolvency to Discharge.)

12. (1) A creditor shall not be entitled to present an insolvency petition against a debtor unless—

Ss. 8 and 9:
P. 46 & 47
Act, c. 52,
s. 6:
Act III, 1907,
s. 9 (4), 51.

(a) the debt owing by the debtor to the creditor, or, if two or more creditors join in the petition, the aggregate amount of debts owing to such creditors, amounts to five hundred rupees, and

(b) the debt is a liquidated sum payable either immediately or at some certain future time, and

(c) the act of insolvency on which the petition is grounded has occurred within three months before the presentation of the petition.

(2) If the petitioning creditor is a secured creditor, he shall in his petition either state that he is willing to relinquish his security for the benefit of the creditors in the event of the debtor being adjudged insolvent or give an estimate of the value of the security. In the latter case he may be admitted as a petitioning creditor to the extent of the balance of the debt due to him after deducting the value so estimated in the same way as if he were an unsecured creditor.

13. (1) A creditor's petition shall be verified by affidavit of the creditor, or of some person on his behalf having knowledge of the facts, and be served in the prescribed manner.

Vict., c. 52,
s. 7:
Act III, 1907,
s. 14.]

(2) At the hearing the Court shall require proof of—

(a) the debt of the petitioning creditor,

(b) the act of insolvency or, if more than one act of insolvency is alleged in the petition, some one of the alleged acts of insolvency, and,

(c) if the debtor does not appear, the service of the petition; and, if satisfied with the proof, may make an order of adjudication in pursuance of the petition.

(3) If the Court is not satisfied with the proof of the petitioning creditor's debt, or of the act of insolvency or of the service of the petition, or if satisfied by the debtor that he is able to pay his debts, or that for other sufficient cause no order ought to be made, the Court may dismiss the petition.

(4) Where the debtor appears on the petition and denies that he is indebted to the petitioner, or that he is indebted to such an amount as would justify the petitioner in presenting a petition against him, the Court, on such security (if any) being given as the Court may require for payment to the petitioner of any debt which may be established against the debtor in due course of law, and of the costs of establishing the debt, may, instead of dismissing the petition, stay all proceedings on the petition for such time as may be required for trial of the question relating to the debt.

(5) Where proceedings are stayed, the Court may, if by reason of the delay caused by the stay of proceedings or for any other cause it thinks just, make an order of adjudication on the petition of some other creditor, and shall thereupon dismiss, on such terms as it thinks just, the petition on which proceedings have been stayed as aforesaid.

(6) A creditor's petition shall not, after presentation, be withdrawn without the leave of the Court.

14. A debtor shall not be entitled to present an insolvency petition unless—

[Act III,
1907, s. 6 (3)]

(a) his debts amount to five hundred rupees, or

(b) he has been arrested and imprisoned in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money, or

(c) an order of attachment in execution of such a decree has been made and is subsisting against his property.

15. (1) A debtor's petition shall allege that the debtor is unable to pay his debts, and, if the debtor proves that he is entitled to present the petition, the Court shall thereupon make an order of adjudication.

[S. 5; and 46 & 47
Vict., c. 52,
s. 8.]

(2) If, in the opinion of the Court, the proceedings ought to have been taken before some other Court having jurisdiction under this Act or the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, the Court may, if it thinks fit, make an order of adjudication and transfer the proceedings to such other Court, and the order of adjudication shall thereupon have effect as if it had been made by such other Court.

(3) A debtor's petition shall not, after presentation, be withdrawn without the leave of the Court.

16. On the making of an order of adjudication, the property of the insolvent shall thereupon and thereby vest in the official assignee as from the date of the filing of the insolvency petition on which the order is made and shall become divisible among the creditors. The insolvent, if in prison for debt, shall be released, and thereafter, except as provided by this Act, no creditor to whom the insolvent is indebted in respect of any debt provable in insolvency, shall, during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings, have any remedy against the property or person of the insolvent in respect of the debt, or shall commence any suit or other legal proceeding, except with the leave of the Court and on such terms as the Court may impose:

Vict., c. 52,
s. 11.]

(2) The debtor may be appointed special manager.

(3) The special manager shall give security and furnish accounts in such manner as the official assignee, subject to the control of the Court, may direct, and shall receive such remuneration as the official assignee may, within limits prescribed and subject to that control, determine.

(2) Where an adjudication is annulled under this section, all sales and dispositions of property and payments duly made, and all acts theretofore done, by the official assignee or other person acting under his authority, or by the Court, shall be valid, but the property of the debtor who was adjudged insolvent shall vest in such person as the Court may appoint, or, in default of any such appointment, shall revert to the debtor to the extent of his right or interest therein on such terms and subject to such conditions (if any) as the Court may declare by order.

22. (1) When an order of adjudication is made against a debtor, he shall prepare and submit to the official assignee a schedule of and in relation to his affairs in the prescribed form, verified by affidavit, and showing the particulars of the insolvent's assets, debts and liabilities, the names, residences and occupations of his creditors, the securities held by them respectively, the dates when the securities were respectively given, and such further or other information as may be prescribed or as the official assignee may require.

(2) The schedule shall be so submitted within the following times, namely :—

(i) if the order is made on the petition of the debtor, within seven days from the date of the order,

(ii) if the order is made on the petition of a creditor, within fourteen days from the date of the order.

(3) If the insolvent fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with the requirements of this section, the Court may, on the application of the official assignee or of any creditor, make an order for his committal to prison.

(4) If the insolvent fails to prepare and submit any such schedule as aforesaid, the official assignee may, at the expense of the estate, cause such a schedule to be prepared in manner prescribed.

[30 & 47 Vict.,
p. 52, s. 15.]

23. As soon as may be after the making of an adjudication order against an insolvent, a first meeting of creditors (in this Act referred to as the first meeting of creditors) shall be held for the purpose of considering whether a proposal for a composition or a scheme of arrangement shall be entertained and to consider the circumstances of the insolvency and the insolvent's statement of affairs and his explanation thereof, and generally as to the mode of dealing with the property of the insolvent.

[30 & 47 Vict.,
p. 52, s. 17.]

24. (1) Where the Court makes an order of adjudication it shall hold a public sitting on a day to be appointed by the Court of which notice shall be given to creditors in the prescribed manner for the examination of the insolvent, and the insolvent shall attend thereat, and shall be examined as to his conduct, dealings and property.

(2) The examination shall be held as soon as conveniently may be after the expiration of the time for the filing of the insolvent's schedule.

(3) The Court may adjourn the examination from time to time.

(4) Any creditor who has tendered a proof or his representative authorised in writing may question the insolvent concerning his affairs and the causes of his failure.

(5) The official assignee shall take part in the examination of the insolvent; and for the purpose thereof, subject to such directions as the Court may give, may employ a solicitor or attorney with or without counsel.

(6) The Court may put such questions to the insolvent as it may think expedient.

(7) The insolvent shall be examined upon oath, and it shall be his duty to answer all such questions as the Court may put or allow to be put to him. Such notes of the examination as the Court thinks proper shall be taken down in writing and shall be read over either to or by the insolvent and signed by him, and may thereafter be used in evidence against him and shall be open to the inspection of any creditor at all reasonable times. [53 & 54 Vict., c. 71, s. 2 (1).]

(8) When the Court is of opinion that the affairs of the insolvent have been sufficiently investigated, it shall, by order, declare that his examination is concluded, but such order shall not be made until after the day appointed for the first meeting of the creditors, and shall not preclude the Court from directing further examination of the insolvent whenever it may deem fit to do so.

(9) Where the insolvent is a lunatic or suffers from any such mental or physical affliction or disability as in the opinion of the Court makes him unfit to attend his public examination, the Court may make an order dispensing with such examination, or directing that the insolvent be examined on such terms, in such manner, and at such place as to the Court seems expedient. [53 & 54 Vict., c. 71, s. 2 (2).]

Composition and schemes of arrangement.

25. (1) An insolvent may at any time after the making of an order of adjudication submit a proposal for a composition in satisfaction of his debts or a proposal for a scheme of arrangement of his affairs in the prescribed form, and such proposal shall be submitted by the official assignee to a meeting of creditors.

(2) The official assignee shall send to each creditor who is mentioned in the schedule or who has tendered a proof before the meeting a copy of the insolvent's proposals with a report thereon, and if on the consideration of such proposal the majority in number and three-fourths in value of all the creditors whose debts are proved resolve to accept the proposal, the same shall be deemed to be duly accepted by the creditors.

The Presidency-towns Insolvency Bill.(Part II.—Proceedings from Act of Insolvency to Discharge.)

(3) The insolvent may at the meeting amend the terms of his proposal if the amendment is in the opinion of the Court calculated to benefit the general body of creditors.

(4) The insolvent or the official assignee may after the proposal is accepted by the creditors apply to the Court to approve it, and notice of the time appointed for hearing the application shall be given to each creditor who has proved.

(5) The application shall not be heard until after the conclusion of the public examination of the debtor. Any creditor who has proved may be heard by the Court in opposition to the application notwithstanding that he may at a meeting of creditors have voted for the acceptance of the proposal.

(6) The Court shall before approving the proposal hear a report of the official assignee as to the terms thereof and as to the conduct of the debtor and any objections which may be made by or on behalf of any creditor.

(7) Whenever the Court is of opinion that the terms of the proposal are not reasonable or are not calculated to benefit the general body of creditors or in any case in which the Court is required to refuse the insolvent's discharge, the Court shall refuse to approve the proposal.

(8) If any facts are proved on proof of which the Court would be required either to refuse, suspend or attach conditions to the debtor's discharge, the Court shall refuse to approve the proposal unless it provides reasonable security for payment of not less than six annas in the rupee on all the unsecured debts provable against the debtor's estate.

(9) In any other case the Court may either approve or refuse to approve the proposal.

(10) If the Court approves the proposal, the terms shall be embodied in an order of the Court, the order of adjudication (if any) shall be annulled, and the composition or scheme shall be binding on all the creditors so far as relates to any debts due to them from the insolvent and provable in insolvency.

(11) If default is made in the payment of any instalment due in pursuance of the composition or scheme, or if it appears to the Court that the composition or scheme cannot proceed without injustice or undue delay or that the approval of the Court was obtained by fraud, the Court may, if it thinks fit, adjudge the debtor insolvent and annul the composition or scheme, but without prejudice to the validity of any transfer or payment duly made or of anything duly done under or in pursuance of the composition or scheme. When a debtor is adjudged insolvent under this sub-section, all debts provable in other respects which have been contracted before the date of such adjudication shall be provable in the insolvency.

(12) No composition or scheme shall be approved by the Court which does not provide for the payment in priority to other debts of all debts directed to be so paid in the distribution of the property of an insolvent.

26. Notwithstanding the acceptance and approval of a composition or scheme, the composition or scheme shall not be binding on any creditor so far as regards a debt or liability from which, under the provisions of this Act, the insolvent would not be discharged by an order of discharge in insolvency, unless the creditor assents to the composition or scheme.

Control over person and property of insolvent.

27. (1) Every insolvent shall, unless prevented by sickness or other sufficient cause, attend the first meeting of his creditors and any other meeting which the official assignee may require him to attend, and shall submit to such examination and give such information as the meeting may require.

(2) The insolvent shall give such inventory of his property, such list of his creditors and debtors, and of the debts due to and from them respectively, submit to such examination in respect of his property or his creditors, wait at such times and places on the official assignee or special manager, execute such powers-of-attorney, conveyances, deeds and instruments, and generally do all such acts and things in relation to his property and the distribution of the proceeds amongst his creditors, as may be reasonably required by the official assignee or special manager or may be prescribed or be directed by the Court by any special order or orders made in reference to any particular case, or made on the occasion of any special application by the official assignee or special manager, or any creditor or person interested.

(3) The insolvent shall aid, to the utmost of his power, in the realisation of his property and the distribution of the proceeds among his creditors.

(4) If the insolvent—

(a) wilfully makes false entries in the inventories or lists referred to in sub-section (1), or

(b) fraudulently or vexatiously conceals, destroys, transfers, removes or refuses to produce any property or books of account, or

(c) commits any other act of bad faith in the performance of the duties imposed on him by this section, he shall, in addition to any other punishment to which he may be subject, be guilty of a contempt of Court, and may be punished accordingly.

28. (1) The Court may, either of its own motion or at the instance of the official assignee or of any creditor, by warrant addressed to any police-officer or prescribed officer of the Court, cause a debtor to be arrested, or if in prison to be detained and any books, papers, money and goods in his possession to be seized, and him and them to be safely kept as prescribed until such time as the Court may order, under the following circumstances:—

- (a) if, after presentation of an insolvency petition by or against him, it appears to the Court that there is probable reason for believing that he has absconded or is about to abscond with a view of avoiding service of an insolvency petition or of avoiding appearance to any such petition, or of avoiding examination in respect of his affairs, or of otherwise avoiding, delaying or embarrassing proceedings in insolvency against him;
- (b) if, after presentation of an insolvency petition by or against him, it appears to the Court that there is probable reason for believing that he is about to remove his property with a view of preventing or delaying possession being taken of it by the official assignee, or that there is probable reason for believing that he has concealed or is about to conceal or destroy any of his property or any books, documents or writings which might be of use to his creditors in the course of his bankruptcy;
- (c) if, after service of an insolvency petition on him, he removes any property in his possession above the value of fifty rupees without the leave of the official assignee;
- (d) if, without good cause shown, he fails to attend any examination ordered by the Court or to comply with the requirements of this Act or of any rules.

(2) No payment or composition made or security given after arrest made under this section shall be exempt from the provisions of this Act relating to fraudulent preferences.

[46 & 47
Vict., c. 59, s.
26.]

29. Where an order of adjudication is made, the Court, on the application of the official assignee, may, from time to time, order that for such time, not exceeding three months, as the Court thinks fit, post letters addressed to the insolvent at any place or places mentioned in the order for re-direction shall be re-directed, or delivered by the Postal and Telegraph authorities in British India to the official assignee, or otherwise as the Court directs; and the same shall be done accordingly.

[S. 261
46 & 47
Vict., c. 59, s.
27.]

30. (1) The Court may, on the application of the official assignee or of any creditor who has proved his debt, at any time after an order of adjudication has been made, summon before it in such manner as may be prescribed the insolvent or any person known or suspected to have in his possession any property belonging to the insolvent, or supposed to be indebted to the insolvent, or any person whom the Court may deem capable of giving information respecting the insolvent, his dealings or property; and the Court may require any such person to produce any documents in his custody or power relating to the insolvent, his dealings or property.

(2) If any person so summoned, after having [S. 36.] been tendered a reasonable sum, refuses to come before the Court at the time appointed, or refuses to produce any such document, having no lawful impediment made known to the Court at the time of its sitting and allowed by it, the Court may, by warrant, cause him to be apprehended and brought up for examination.

(3) The Court may examine any person so brought before it concerning the insolvent, his dealings or property.

(4) If on the examination of any such person it appears to the Court that he is indebted to the insolvent, the Court may, on the application of the official assignee, order him to pay to the official assignee, at such time and in such manner as to the Court seems expedient, the amount in which he is indebted, or any part thereof, either in full discharge of the whole amount or not, as the Court thinks fit, with or without costs of the examination.

(5) If, on the examination of any such person, it appears to the Court that he has in his possession any property belonging to the insolvent, the Court may, on the application of the official assignee, order him to deliver to the official assignee that property, or any part thereof, at such time, in such manner and on such terms as to the Court may seem just.

Discharge of insolvent.

31. (1) An insolvent may, at any time after [Ss. 47 & 51; and 53

Discharge of insol-

Court shall appoint a day for hearing the application, but the application shall not be heard until after the public examination of the insolvent has been concluded. The application shall be heard in open Court.

(2) On the hearing of the application the Court shall take into consideration a report of the official assignee as to the insolvent's conduct and affairs, and may either grant or refuse an absolute order of discharge, or suspend the operation of the order for a specified time, or grant an order of discharge subject to any conditions with respect to any earnings or income which may afterwards become due to the insolvent, or with respect to his after-acquired property:

Provided that the Court shall refuse the discharge in all cases where the insolvent has [Sa. 50 &

committed any offence under this Act, or under sections 421 to 424 of the Indian Penal Code, and shall, on proof of any of the facts herein-after mentioned, either refuse the order or suspend the operation of the order for a specified time, or grant an order of discharge subject to such conditions as aforesaid.

(3) The facts hereinbefore referred to are—

(a) that the insolvent's assets are not of a value equal to six annas in the rupee on the amount of his unsecured liabilities, or of such other value as may be prescribed, unless he satisfies the Court that the fact that the assets are not of such value has arisen from circumstances for which he cannot justly be held responsible;

(b) that the insolvent has omitted to keep such books of account as are usual and proper in the business carried on by him and as sufficiently disclose his business transactions and financial position within the three years immediately preceding his insolvency;

(c) that the insolvent has continued to trade after knowing himself to be insolvent;

(d) that the insolvent has contracted any debt provable under this Act without having at the time of contracting it any reasonable or probable ground of expectation (the burden of proving which shall lie on him) that he would be able to pay it;

(e) that the insolvent has failed to account satisfactorily for any loss of assets or for any deficiency of assets to meet his liabilities;

(f) that the insolvent has brought on or contributed to his insolvency by rash and hazardous speculations, or by unjustifiable extravagance in living, or by gambling, or by culpable neglect of his business affairs;

(g) that the insolvent has within three months preceding the date of the presentation of the petition, when unable to pay his debts as they become due, given an undue preference to any of his creditors;

(h) that the insolvent has on any previous occasion been adjudged an insolvent or made a composition or arrangement with his creditors;

(i) that the insolvent has concealed or removed his property or any part thereof or has been guilty of any other fraud or fraudulent breach of trust.

(4) For the purposes of this section the report of the official assignee shall be deemed to be evidence, and the Court may presume the correctness of any statement contained therein.

(5) Notice of the appointment by the Court of the day for hearing the application for discharge shall be published in the prescribed manner and sent one month at least before the day so appointed to each creditor who has proved, and the Court may hear the official assignee and may also hear any creditor. At the hearing the Court may put such questions to the insolvent and receive such evidence as it may think fit.

(6) The Court may, in making an order of discharge, pass a decree against the insolvent in favour of the official assignee for any balance of the debts provable under the insolvency which is not satisfied at the date of his discharge; but in that case the decree shall not be executed without leave of the Court, which leave may be given on proof that the insolvent has since his discharge acquired property or income available for payment of his debts.

(7) A discharged insolvent shall, notwithstanding his discharge, give such assistance as the official assignee may require in the realisation and distribution of such of his property as is vested in the official assignee, and, if he fails to do so, shall be guilty of a contempt of Court; and the Court may also, if it thinks fit, revoke his discharge, but without prejudice to the validity of any sale, disposition or payment duly made or thing duly done subsequent to the discharge, but before its revocation.

(8) Where the Court refuses the discharge of the insolvent, it may, after such time and in such circumstances as may be authorised by general rules, permit him to renew his application for an order of discharge.

Fraudulent settlements. 32. In either of the following cases, that is to say:—

(1) Any creditor of a deceased debtor whose debt would have been sufficient to support an insolvency petition against the debtor, had he been alive, may present to the Court a petition in the prescribed form praying for an order for the administration of the estate of the deceased debtor according to the law of insolvency.

(2) Upon the prescribed notice being given to the executor, administrator or other legal representative of the deceased debtor, the Court may in the prescribed manner, upon proof of the petitioner's debt, unless the Court is satisfied that there is a reasonable probability that the estate will be sufficient for the payment of the debts owing by the deceased, make an order for the administration in insolvency of the deceased debtor's estate, or may upon cause shown dismiss the petition with or without costs.

(3) An order of administration under this section shall not, in cases where a grant of probate or administration is required to establish a legal representative, be made until the expiration of two months from the date of the grant of probate or letters of administration, unless with the concurrence of the legal representative of the deceased debtor, or unless the petitioner proves to the satisfaction of the Court that the debtor committed an act of insolvency within three months prior to his decease.

(4) A petition for administration under this section shall not be presented to the Court after proceedings have been commenced in any Court of Justice for the administration of the deceased debtor's estate; but that Court may in that case, on the application of any creditor, and on proof that the estate is insufficient to pay its debts, transfer the proceedings to the Court exercising jurisdiction in insolvency, and thereupon the last-mentioned Court may, in the prescribed manner, make an order for the administration of the estate of the deceased debtor, and the like consequences shall ensue as under an administration order made on the petition of a creditor.

(5) Upon an order being made for the administration of a deceased debtor's estate under this section, the property of the debtor shall vest in the official assignee of the Court, and he shall forthwith proceed to realize and distribute the same in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(8) If, on the administration of a deceased debtor's estate, any surplus remains in the hands of the official assignee after payment in full of all the debts due from the debtor, together with the costs of the administration and interest as provided by this Act in case of insolvency, such surplus shall be paid over to the legal representative of the deceased debtor's estate, or dealt with in such other manner as may be prescribed.

(9) Notice to the legal representative of a deceased debtor of the presentation by a creditor of a petition under this section shall, in the event of an order for administration being made thereon, be deemed to be equivalent to notice of an act of bankruptcy, and after the notice no payment or transfer of property made by the legal representative shall operate as a discharge to him as between himself and the official assignee. Save as aforesaid, nothing in this section shall invalidate any payment made or act or thing done in good faith by the legal representative before the date of the order for administration.

(10) General rules, for carrying into effect the provisions of this section, may be made in the same manner and to the like effect and extent as in insolvency.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section, the expression "Court" shall, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to mean the Court exercising jurisdiction in insolvency within the local limits of the jurisdiction of which the debtor resided or carried on business for the greater part of the six months immediately prior to his decease; and "creditor" means one or more creditors qualified to present an insolvency petition as in this Act provided.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

(See section 36.)

PROOF OF DEBTS.

Proofs in ordinary cases.

[46 & 47 Vict., c. 52, Sch. II.] 1. Every creditor shall prove his debt as soon as may be after the making of an order of adjudication.

2. A debt may be proved by delivering or sending by post in a registered letter to the official assignee an affidavit verifying the debt.

3. The affidavit may be made by the creditor himself or by some person authorised by or on behalf of the creditor. If made by a person so authorised, it shall state his authority and means of knowledge.

4. The affidavit shall contain or refer to a statement of account showing the particulars of the debt, and shall specify the vouchers, if any, by which the same can be substantiated. The official assignee may at any time call for the production of the vouchers.

5. The affidavit shall state whether the creditor is or is not a secured creditor.

6. A creditor shall bear the cost of proving his debt unless the Court otherwise specially orders.

7. Every creditor who has lodged a proof shall be entitled to see and examine the proofs of other creditors at all reasonable times.

8. A creditor proving his debt shall deduct therefrom all trade discounts, but he shall not be compelled to deduct any discount, not exceeding five per centum on the net amount of his claim, which he may have agreed to allow for payment in cash.

Proof by secured creditors.

9. If a secured creditor realises his security, he may prove for the balance due to him, after deducting the net amount realised.

10. If a secured creditor surrenders his security to the official assignee for the general benefit of the creditors, he may prove for his whole debt.

11. If a secured creditor does not either realise or surrender his security, he shall, before ranking for dividend, state in his proof the particulars of his security, the date when it was given and the value at which he assesses it, and shall be entitled to receive a dividend only in respect of the balance due to him after deducting the value so assessed.

12. (1) Where a security is so valued the official assignee may at any time redeem it on payment to the creditor of the assessed value.

(2) If the official assignee is dissatisfied with the value at which a security is assessed, he may require that the property comprised in any security so valued be offered for sale at such times and on such terms and conditions as may be agreed on between the creditor and the official assignee, or as, in default of agreement, the Court may direct. If the sale is by public auction, the creditor, or the official assignee on behalf of the estate, may bid or purchase:

The Presidency-towns Insolvency Bill.(The First Schedule.—Proof of Debts.)

Provided that the creditor may at any time, by notice in writing, require the official assignee to elect whether he will or will not exercise his power of redeeming the security or requiring it to be realised, and if the official assignee does not, within six months after receiving the notice, signify in writing to the creditor his election to exercise the power, he shall not be entitled to exercise it; and the equity of redemption, or any other interest in the property comprised in the security which is vested in the official assignee, shall vest in the creditor, and the amount of his debt shall be reduced by the amount at which the security has been valued.

13. Where a creditor has so valued his security, he may at any time amend the valuation and proof on showing to the satisfaction of the official assignee, or the Court, that the valuation and proof were made bonâ fide on a mistaken estimate, or that the security has diminished or increased in value since its previous valuation; but every such amendment shall be made at the cost of the creditor, and upon such terms as the Court shall order, unless the official assignee shall allow the amendment without application to the Court.

14. Where a valuation has been amended in accordance with the foregoing rule, the creditor shall forthwith repay any surplus dividend which he has received in excess of that to which he would have been entitled on the amended valuation, or, as the case may be, shall be entitled to be paid out of any money for the time being available for dividend any dividend or share of dividend which he has failed to receive by reason of the inaccuracy of the original valuation, before that money is made applicable to the payment of any future dividend, but he shall not be entitled to disturb the distribution of any dividend declared before the date of the amendment.

15. If a creditor after having valued his security subsequently realises it, or if it is realised under the provisions of rule 12, the net amount realised shall be substituted for the amount of any valuation previously made by the creditor and shall be treated in all respects as an amended valuation made by the creditor.

16. If a secured creditor does not comply with the foregoing rules he shall be excluded from all share in any dividend.

17. Subject to the provisions of rule 12, a creditor shall in no case receive more than sixteen annas in the rupee and interest as provided by this Act.

Proof in respect of distinct contracts.

18. If an insolvent was at the date of the order of adjudication liable in respect of distinct contracts as a member of two or more distinct firms, or as a sole contractor and also as member of a firm, the circumstance that the firms are in whole or in part composed of the same individuals or that the sole contractor is also one of the joint contractors shall not prevent proof in respect of the contracts against the properties respectively liable on the contracts.

Periodical payments.

19. When any rent or other payment falls due at stated periods, and the order of adjudication is made at any time other than one of those periods, the person entitled to the rent or payment may prove for a proportionate part thereof up to the date of the order as if the rent or payment grew due from day to day.

Interest.

20. (1) On any debt or sum certain whereon interest is not reserved or agreed for, and which is overdue when the debtor is adjudged an insolvent, and which is provable under this Act, the creditor may prove for interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum—

- (a) if the debt or sum is payable by virtue of a written instrument at a certain time, from the time when such debt or sum was payable to the date of such adjudication; or,
- (b) if the debt or sum is payable otherwise, from the time when a demand in writing has been made giving the debtor notice that interest will be claimed from the date of the demand until the time of payment to the date of such adjudication.

(2) Where a debt which has been proved in [Act III, 1907 insolventcy includes interest or any pecuniary s. 32 (a).] consideration in lieu of interest, the interest or consideration shall, for the purposes of dividend, be calculated at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, without prejudice to the right of a creditor to receive out of the debtor's estate any higher rate of interest to which he may be entitled after all the debts proved have been paid in full.

Debt payable at a future time.

21. A creditor may prove for a debt not payable when the debtor is adjudged an insolvent as if it were payable presently, and may receive dividends equally with the other creditors, deducting therefrom only a rebate of interest at the rate of six per centum per annum computed from the declaration of a dividend to the time when the debt would have become payable, according to the terms on which it was contracted.

The Presidency-towns Insolvency Bill.(The First Schedule.—Proof of Debts. The Second Schedule.—Enactments Repealed.)Admission or rejection of proofs.

22. The official assignee shall examine every proof and the grounds of the debt, and in writing admit or reject it in whole or in part, or require further evidence in support of it. If he rejects a proof, he shall state in writing to the creditor the grounds of the rejection.

23. If the official assignee thinks that a proof has been improperly admitted, the Court may, on the application of the official assignee, after notice to the creditor who made the proof, expunge the proof or reduce its amount.

24. If a creditor is dissatisfied with the decision of the official assignee in respect of a proof, the Court may, on the application of the creditor, reverse or vary the decision.

25. The Court may also expunge or reduce a proof upon the application of a creditor if the official assignee declines to interfere in the matter, or, in the case of a composition or scheme, upon the application of the insolvent.

26. For the purpose of any of his duties in relation to proofs, the official assignee may administer oaths and take affidavits.

1908	V	The Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.	Section 120, subsection (7).

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the Law of Insolvency in force in the Presidency-towns and in the town of Rangoon. That law is at present contained in the Indian Insolvency Act of 1848 (11 & 12 Vict., c. 21), a statute framed on the same lines as the English Acts before 1869. Those Acts were long since found inadequate in England; they were superseded by the Bankruptcy Act of 1869 and the law was again recast and re-enacted by the existing Act of 1883. In India, however, no amendment has been made, although for many years past it has been generally admitted that the present Act is altogether out of date and ineffective.

2. As long ago as 1870 Sir James Stephen introduced a Bill to repeal the existing law and to substitute for it an Insolvency Law based on the English Bankruptcy Act of 1869. This Bill was applicable to the whole of India. It was considered to be too complicated for the Mufassal, and was withdrawn. In 1883 the present Bankruptcy Act was passed in England and Sir C. Ilbert proposed to the Government of India to introduce a Bill, based on the lines of that Act, to supersede the Statute of 1848. The proposal to pass an entirely new enactment met with general approval. It was supported by the various Chambers of Commerce and by the High Courts, accepted by the Government of India and approved by the Secretary of State. A Bill was drafted accordingly and was introduced in the Legislative Council at Simla on the 20th May, 1886. This Bill followed with some exactness the English Act and contained provisions taken from that Act which were commonly thought to go somewhat beyond the needs of India. For some reason it was not immediately proceeded with; indeed, no further step was taken until 1899, when the Bill was referred to a Select Committee, who reported that as drafted it was too complicated to suit Indian conditions and advised that it should be modified. Nothing has been done since.

3. Meantime the commercial communities have not ceased to urge reform. In 1902, in commenting on the Code of Civil Procedure Bill, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce expressed their disappointment that no indication of any intended amendment of the Insolvency Law in the Presidency-towns was put forward. They observed that the necessity for a new law was increasing and that in the public interests, and particularly in the interests of the trading community, the desired amendment should not be longer delayed. Within the last year they have made a similar representation, and it cannot be doubted that their opinion is shared by the Chartered High Courts and by the representatives of commerce in the other Presidency-towns. In the last session of the Legislative Council an Act was passed dealing with insolvency in the Mufassal on modern lines, but that Act has no application to the Presidency-towns or to Rangoon.

4. The main defect of the existing law lies in the absence of any adequate powers to compel the production of assets. The primary object of the Act of 1848 was the protection of debtors: the provision it makes for the discovery of the property of insolvents is treated as of secondary importance and has long since been found insufficient to prevent fraud. The protection of honest debtors should be one of the objects of every Insolvency Law, although it is of less importance now than it was in 1848, when imprisonment for debt was more frequent. But it is equally important, in the interests of commerce, that creditors should not be defrauded and that dishonest debtors should not be able to make use of insolvency proceedings merely to free themselves from their liabilities while preserving their assets more or less intact.

5. The present Bill follows the general lines of the English Act, but there are important simplifications introduced to meet the different conditions of India. It continues the existing protection for debtors but, at the same time, sets up a machinery by which the whole of the assets of an insolvent should be secured for the benefit of the creditors. The details of this machinery are for consideration, but it is thought that there will be general agreement as to the desirability of a new law on the lines of the Bill.

6. The first point of substance to which it is desired to invite attention is the question of the stage at which there should be adjudication. Under the Act of 1848 adjudication takes place on the presentation of a petition. The Bill of 1886, following the English law, provided for a receiving order in the first instance, but the Committee of 1892 reported that the interposition of a receiving order, with all the legal and other complications attendant on it, between the presentation of a petition and adjudication was undesirable. This view has been adopted in the present draft; there is no provision in it for any receiving order,—adjudication is to be made, as under the existing law, on petition. This adjudication will be made as of course on all debtors' petitions and all creditors' petitions which are dropped. The Provincial Insolvency Act proceeds on an alternative course and provides for adjudication after a hearing of the petition at which the creditors may appear and cross-examine the debtor. The conditions in the Presidency-towns, however, differ from those in the Mufassal and there is less danger of adjudication being made on insufficient materials.

7. The second stage under the Bill will be a meeting of the creditors and a public examination of the debtor by the Court. These two provisions should enable the creditors to obtain full information as to the dealings of the insolvent and the assets of his estate.

8. The third and last stage will be the discharge. This cannot be granted until after the public examination of the insolvent has been concluded and may be refused or suspended if the insolvent is found to have been guilty of misconduct. An order of adjudication operates of itself to release the debtor from prison; it is no longer necessary therefore to retain the provisions of the present Act relating to applications for personal discharge.

9. Provisions have been made for compositions and schemes of arrangement which are, it is hoped, of a practical character.

10. The distinction between traders and non-traders has been abolished.

11. Under the Act there is power to appoint special assignees, but it is believed that this power has never in fact been exercised in recent years. The object of it is to secure for the creditors some control over the proceedings in insolvency, but the fact that it is not made use of appears to show that it is ineffective for that purpose. It is proposed therefore, for consideration, that the power to appoint special assignees should not be retained, but that there should be power to appoint a committee of creditors to supervise proceedings in cases in which it may be desirable to do so. This procedure is new to Indian law and for that reason it seems inexpedient, in the first instance, to define with any exactness the extent of the control which should be given to such committees. It is thought better to leave the matter to rules, in order that advantage may be taken of experience.

12. Under the English system the supervising authority for bankruptcy proceedings is the Board of Trade, but in India we have nothing corresponding to that body; powers of supervision must therefore be left to the Courts.

13. An explanation of other amendments will be found in the Notes on Clauses.

14. If this Bill be passed into law it will be necessary to repeal the 1848 Act, and this raises a question which deserves consideration. The present Act is an Act of the Imperial Parliament and a vesting order made under it vests in the assignee by direct operation all the real and personal estate and effects of the insolvent in whatever part of the King's dominions they may be situate or accrue; and a discharge under the Act has effect in every part of those dominions. The Act is one of those which it is within the competency of the Legislative Council of the Governor General to repeal, but if it be repealed and an Indian Act be substituted, it follows that these advantages must at least for the most part be abandoned, since an Act of the Indian Legislature cannot operate for this purpose outside the limits of India. In 1886 it was proposed that an Act of the Imperial Parliament should be obtained to give this authority to insolvency proceedings in India, but no such Act has as yet been passed. It is believed, however, that the advantages conferred by the Act of 1848 are of no real value, since experience has shown that in practically every case in which there are assets in both countries concurrent proceedings are instituted in England and in India. It may be that the Imperial Parliament will, at some future date, pass an enactment to give direct effect to Indian and Colonial insolvency proceedings in all parts of the Empire, but meantime it would appear that we are not surrendering any practical advantage by giving up the position we hold under the 1848 Act. In any case we cannot allow this consideration to be a perpetual bar to the reform of Insolvency Law in India.

Notes on Clauses.

Clauses 1 and 2.—The title and definitions have been brought into line with the Provincial Insolvency Act.

The Bill is to all practical intents a Bankruptcy Bill, but it has been thought better for the present, at any rate, to observe the title "insolvency" with which legal practitioners in this country are familiar, both for this Bill and for the Provincial Act.

Clauses 3 and 4 represent the existing law.

Clauses 5 and 6.—These clauses give powers which it is thought will be useful; they are taken from the English Act.

Clause 7 (1) gives the Court in the exercise of insolvency jurisdiction the same powers as it has in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction.

Sub-clauses (2) and (3) are taken from the English Act

Clause 8—The law of appeals remains unaltered.

Clause 9—The list of acts of insolvency has been made uniform with that in the Provincial Act and follows the English law, with one exception. It is proposed that a debtor who has allowed his property to be attached should be held to have committed an act of insolvency. It is said that one of the most favourite tricks of a fraudulent insolvent is to get rid of his property to special creditors or friends by illusive decrees or attachments and that the property once sold in this way is difficult to recover. The point is for consideration, but it may well be that it is possible to be more strict in this respect in the Presidency towns than in the Mufassal.

Clauses 10 to 16 follow the Provincial Act and make no change of importance in the law except that to which attention has already been called, namely that under clause 16 the adjudication of itself releases the debtor from prison. Section 13 of the Act of 1848 has been omitted for the reasons already stated.

Clause 19—The power to appoint a special manager is one that has been suggested in connection with the Arbuthnot case.

Clause 23 provides for a general meeting of creditors to be held after the adjudication. The proceedings at the meeting will be regulated by rules. Express power has been given to the official assignee or to creditors to question the insolvent. Clause 69, sub-clause (2) gives power to the official assignee to summon subsequent meetings of creditors at any time and compels him to do so if directed by the Court or requested in writing by one-fourth of the creditors.

Clause 24 provides for the public examination of an insolvent to which reference has already been made.

Clauses 25 and 26 deal with composition and schemes of arrangement.

Clause 27 is taken from the English Act. It sets out in full the duty of the insolvent to discover and realise his property and empowers the Court to sentence a fraudulent insolvent to a term of imprisonment following section 50 of the 1848 Act and section 43 (2) of Act III of 1907.

Clause 28 gives the Court power of arrest in certain circumstances.

Clause 30 gives the official assignee wider powers for the discovery of the insolvent's property. It enables the Court to order production of the books of a partnership of which the insolvent was a member—a point on which there has been some doubt.

Sub-clauses (4) and (5) go somewhat beyond the corresponding sections of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, sections 27 (4) and (5), under which the Court can only make an order when the respondent admits liability but having regard to the facility with which in this country property can be put away and to the fact that between examination and action the property might be made away with it seems necessary to have a stringent provision.

Clause 31—The system of double discharge has been abandoned and provision is made for one discharge only. The clause is in line with the corresponding section of the Provincial Act.

It is for consideration whether the limit of six annas in the rupee prescribed in sub-clause (3) (a) is not too high. In small insolvencies it is at least it might be desirable to reduce it. Power is therefore given to the Court to prescribe a lower limit.

Clause 33 differs from the Provincial Act inasmuch as it makes a discharge operate to free a debtor from all debts provable in insolvency. But in this it follows the existing law as to traders and the objections to giving this wide effect to a discharge which exist in regard to the Mufassal do not have the same weight in Presidency towns where greater publicity attaches to proceedings before the Court.

Clause 33—It is a question whether there should be inserted after this clause a new clause disqualifying an insolvent from holding office on the lines of the corresponding provisions in the English Act. This was proposed but not adopted at the time in the Provincial Insolvency Act. It may be that it will be better that this disqualification should be inserted as opportunity offers in enactments relating to public bodies.

Clause 36—Rules as to proof of debts have been put in the schedule following the English Act.

Clause 39—The title of the assignee is made to relate back to presentation of the petition and not to the date of the act of insolvency. This follows the existing law and the Provincial Act, but differs from the English Act under which the title relates back to the act of insolvency.

Clauses 41 to 45.—The provisions as to the effect of insolvency on antecedent transactions follow generally the English law. The transactions referred to in clauses 41, 42 and 43 are made to stand or fall by the time of the presentation of the petition, not of adjudication, a departure from the Provincial Insolvency Act which makes the law somewhat more stringent. The limit of time within which salary or wages of clerks, servants, etc., can be recovered has been maintained at six months as in section 46 of the Act of 1848, but a limit of amount in each case of Rs. 500 is suggested.

Clauses 46 to 52 are taken from the English law and the Provincial Act.

Clause 53 is shorter than the corresponding section (55) of the English Act.

Clauses 60 to 68 sum up the position of the official assignee, the present incumbents are preserved in their office.

Clauses 74 to 84 deal with matters of procedure and are taken from the English law. The last clause gives powers for proceedings to be taken either by or against a firm in the firm's name.

Part VII penalties clauses 85 87.—It appears necessary to retain section 50 of the present Act. Non criminal failure to maintain proper books is dealt with sufficiently by clause 31 (3) (b) by suspension or refusal of discharge. The other penal sections of the present Act appear to be sufficiently covered by sections 421 to 424 of the Penal Code.

Clause 88—It is thought that a power to summarily administer small cases will be of use.

Special provisions—The sections of the existing Act as to married women and lunatics have been omitted. They appear to be unnecessary.

Clause 90 provides for the administration in insolvency of the estate of a person dying insolvent and is new to Indian law. It reproduces section 125 of the Act of 1883.

The Arbuthnot insolvency afforded a striking example of the necessity of this provision.

Clauses 91 and 92 give power to the Courts to make rules subject to the sanction, in the case of the Calcutta High Court of the Governor General in Council, and, in the case of the other High Courts of the Local Governments. The provision for submitting rules for the approval of His Majesty is omitted.

It is thought that this power will enable Courts if they so think fit, to re enact in substance the existing rules, with such changes as may be rendered necessary by the Act. Clause 91 (2) (b) gives the Court an unlimited power of dealing with the proceeds of investments of unclaimed dividends.

Clause 95 provides for the persons before whom affidavits may be sworn, section 68 of the 1848 Act is altogether obsolete on this point.

Clauses 100 to 103 provide for dealing with unclaimed funds or dividends, on the lines of Act II of 1874, sections 62, 63.

Schedule I, as to proof of debts, is taken from Schedule II of the English Act of 1883.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1908-1909.

PART I.

Introductory.

1. I beg to present the Financial Statement for 1908-1909, together with the usual accounts and appendices.

2. The dominating feature of the present budget is the famine which unhappily is widespread over a large part of Northern India, and some other tracts elsewhere. The course of the monsoon during the autumn of 1907 bore some resemblance to those of 1896 and 1899, but on the whole the failure of the rains was less extensive, and the resultant distress is both more restricted in area and with some local exceptions less severe in intensity than on those occasions. Nevertheless the calamity which has befallen the country is of no small magnitude. It extends, roughly speaking, to the greater part of the United Provinces, to the eastern districts of the Punjab, the northern half of the Central Provinces, some parts of Bengal and Bombay, and many of the Native States in Central India, besides isolated tracts in other Provinces. The area in which famine has been declared to exist is approximately 118,000 square miles in British India and about 20,000 square miles in the States of Central India and has a population of about 49 millions. In these tracts the outturn of the kharif crops over the whole of the United Provinces and the greater part of the distressed areas in other provinces is a good deal less than half of an average crop, and in the worst tracts very much less. The distress would have been much more severe but for the fall of useful rain in September and October in Bombay, and but for the winter rains which, though late, were of enormous benefit in Northern India. Even as it is, the export of wheat has been almost wholly stopped in consequence of the prevalent high prices in India, and a great part of the Burma rice crop which was fortunately abundant has been diverted to India to take the place of that which had been lost.

3. The general situation is thus less serious than in 1897-1898 or 1900-1901, and the financial position is also stronger than in those years. In the former year Sir J. Westland was forced to budget for a deficit of £1,643,000, of which a great part, though doubtless not the whole, was due to famine. In the latter, Mr. Clinton Dawkins, with the aid of improved exchange, was able to secure practical equilibrium with a small surplus of £160,300. On the present occasion, although the surplus of £774,600 for which we had budgeted last March is likely to be reduced to £235,400, we nevertheless hope, if the ensuing monsoon is normal, to secure much more favourable results in 1908-1909, and I am able to estimate for a surplus of £571,500 at the close of the ensuing year, notwithstanding the very liberal provision for suspension and remission of revenue which is referred to below. In part these results are due to the smaller extent and severity of the present famine. That, however, is not the only reason. The lessons of the two famines of the past decade have not been lost on us. In the first place our machinery for combating distress has been brought by the teaching of experience to a higher pitch of efficiency than before. Secondly, it is now a primary canon with us to issue takavi advances on the most liberal scale and by the promptest possible methods the moment that the situation has clearly declared itself. Thus in the present year over 2 crores of rupees have already been distributed or sanctioned for distribution in this way, and 2 crores are being provided for issue next year, making upwards of 4 crores in all, as compared with 2·3 crores in 1896-1898, and 2·9 crores in 1899-1901. Moreover, in every province, the arrangements for the suspension of revenue at the first sign of distress are far more highly developed than before. In the current year, nearly 222 lakhs of revenue have already been suspended, and about 135 lakhs more will, it is estimated, be suspended in 1908-1909, making 357 lakhs in the two years. Of this sum, a large proportion will necessarily be remitted, but it is too soon to frame any definite estimate of the amount. Not only have the suspensions of revenue been on a very liberal scale; but, what is at least equally important, they were made with great promptitude when it was certain that the crops must fail.

4. Partly owing to these measures and partly, we may reasonably conclude, owing to the greater resisting powers of the people the numbers of those to whom it has been necessary to give direct relief have been much less than in previous famines. In the Province most severely affected—the United Provinces—the numbers at first rose very slowly; the liberal grants of takavi encouraged cultivation and the construction of wells, and maintained the demand for agricultural labour. In January the demand slackened and there was a rapid increase in the number of applicants for relief, but even at the end of February the total number in receipt of relief from the State in British districts, which in the two previous famines at that date exceeded or approached three millions, amounted to less than a million and a quarter. Some further increase in numbers may no doubt be expected after the rabi is harvested, but according to the best forecasts which the local authorities can now supply the total direct expenditure on famine relief in the two years will not be greatly in excess of 2 crores of rupees, as compared with 930 lakhs in 1899–1901 and 740 lakhs in 1896–1898.

5. The distress caused by high prices has undoubtedly affected all classes, and has pressed with great severity on the urban populations and on all who are dependent on small fixed incomes. But the more painful conditions which we associate with widespread famine in India—the emaciation, the aimless wandering, the disruption of social ties, and the increase of crime—are as yet so rare and exceptional as to be scarcely noticeable. The energy and determination with which the people have themselves faced the calamity have been observed on all hands, and we may reasonably hope that if the coming season is favourable the progress of the country will resume its normal course, without any such check as a famine on a similar scale would have caused in bygone times.

6. The total loss of revenue and increase of expenditure attributable to the famine in the two years has been estimated at about 461 lakhs and 524 lakhs, respectively. Some of the items comprised in these totals however are conjectural, and while they may be taken for what they are worth, I would not be understood to imply that but for the famine our surplus would have been larger by these sums, or even by the Imperial portion of them, which amounts to 302½ and 323½ lakhs, respectively.

7. In view of the foregoing facts, it will be manifest that we are in no position to undertake any measures for the remission of taxation, or to embark on any schemes of administrative improvement involving considerable expenditure. On the contrary the occasion is one for rigid economy and retrenchment wherever it can be effected. The only measures with which we have felt justified in proceeding are set forth in a later part of the present Statement.

Changes in the form of Accounts.

8. The form in which our accounts are presented has been improved since last year in three respects.

9. The most important of these changes is the exclusion from our estimates and accounts of the transactions of District Boards and of certain other local funds which used to appear in the Imperial Budget. In the Budget discussion of March 1906 the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale raised this question, and it was again adverted to a year ago. I then explained that the matter had already engaged the attention of Government, but that the examination of the detailed accounts of the numerous funds which the proposal involved was a matter of time. I am now glad to announce that the Secretary of State has sanctioned our recommendation to remove all transactions of a purely local character from our estimates and accounts; and the following is a brief description of the method by which we propose to give effect to the scheme.

10. The financial transactions of the Government of India have hitherto been recorded under three distinct divisions—Imperial, Provincial, and Local. The two former comprise transactions which may be said to pertain to the general functions of Government, inasmuch as they concern either the general administration or the large commercial or quasi-commercial departments—Post Office, Telegraph, or Railways—which are under governmental control. The revenues in these cases, so far as they accrue from taxes, are derived from a system of taxation which, broadly speaking, is common to all India; while the expenditure which is met therefrom is incurred in the interest of the country as a whole. The third section of the accounts, on the other hand, related to a group of funds, known as “incorporated” funds, which are raised locally

(to a large extent in the shape of rates on land), devoted mainly to local purposes, and are, in the most important cases at least, managed by local bodies.

11. The system of embodying the revenue and expenditure of certain local funds in the general accounts and estimates of the Empire dates from a period before local authorities possessed the financial and administrative powers with which they are now invested. It was then natural and fitting, for the accounts of these funds represented transactions which were under the direct control and responsibility of Government. With the spread of financial decentralization, however, the position has altered; and it is inexpedient to encumber the public accounts with entries of revenue which the Government no longer enjoys, and of expenditure which it does not incur. The practical inconvenience of the old arrangements led, many years ago, to the exclusion of municipal and port funds, which were at one time incorporated. The continued incorporation of the funds of District and Local Boards and District Councils has been found to be attended by similar inconvenience, though in a less marked degree. It compels those bodies, for example, to frame their budget at a much earlier date than would otherwise be necessary. It deprives them of the freedom of re-appropriation which Municipal authorities enjoy. It forces them to adopt the Imperial system of classification, which is not well adapted to their circumstances. And it tends to subordinate their requirements to those of Provincial finance, and even occasionally to those of other local bodies. These difficulties were felt also in the case of the other and less prominent local funds which have hitherto been incorporated in the public accounts.

12. The decision now arrived at will effect the complete exclusion of the accounts and estimates of District and Local Boards from the Imperial Budget and the statements appended thereto, thus following the practice in the United Kingdom, where the income and expenditure of County Councils are kept entirely separate from the public accounts. The minor incorporated local funds have been either absorbed or excluded, the decision generally depending upon the agency by which they are controlled. If the revenues are not specially assigned to local management, and the expenditure is under the orders of Government, the fund ceases to have a separate existence, and its accounts are absorbed in the Imperial or Provincial accounts, according to the facts of the case. If, on the other hand, the income and expenditure are clearly under the control of a local authority, the fund has been excluded, and treated for budget purposes exactly like municipal or cantonment funds. Certain exceptions have been admitted to this general principle in the case of funds which have been specially created for local purposes and are administered by Government officers in an ex-officio capacity, as, for instance, the funds relating to village police.

13. It is not intended that this change in the method of exhibiting the figures shall involve any alteration in the administrative arrangements of local funds. The exclusion of a fund from the general accounts will not imply the cessation of any control, statutory or otherwise, which Government may hitherto have exercised over its administration, nor any alteration in the status of its employés. The transactions of District and Local Boards will continue to be set forth in full in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, but they will there be shown in a special appendix as is already the case with the accounts of Municipalities and Port Trusts.

14. With the disappearance of the "local" column, the adjusting head used for contributions between Provincial and Local revenues has also been abolished; contributions made from Imperial or Provincial revenues to a local fund, or vice versa, are now charged as expenditure or shown as a receipt (as the case may be) under the head which is most appropriate to the nature of the charge. Thus, a grant to a District Board for educational expenditure now appears under the head 22.—Education; a grant for plague expenditure under the head 24.—Medical; a grant for construction of roads under 45.—Civil Works; and a grant for general purposes—such as a grant to make good a deficit—has been classified under the head 32.—Miscellaneous.

15. The effect of this change is to exclude a sum of approximately £2,433,000 of revenue and approximately £2,231,000 of expenditure from the aggregate figures. Thus in the accounts for 1906-1907, the figures for Imperial, Provincial, and Local according to the old system would have appeared as follows, viz. :—

Revenue	75,577,812
Expenditure (including that which is defrayed from Provincial and Local balances)	73,473,676

The figures will now appear as follows, for Imperial and Provincial only :—

Expenditure (including that which is defrayed from Provincial balances)	71,242,937

16. The second change in the form of the accounts has been effected in the method of exhibiting the military figures. Grouping together of Military figures. The military receipts and expenditure have not hitherto been grouped in a convenient way; and in particular considerable expenditure on the defence of India has been hidden away under the head "Marine", which appeared among a group of civil departments. We have now split up this head into two; the new head "Marine" will record the receipts and charges of what is known as the Royal Indian Marine, and takes its proper position among the military group of figures, the total of which shows at a glance the expenditure upon the defence of the country. Receipts and charges connected with the maintenance of river flotillas, pilot services, harbours and the lighting of the coasts will be shown under the new head "Ports and Pilotage" which has taken the place of the old head "Marine" in the Civil Department group of heads. This re-arrangement makes no change in the total figures on either side of the account.

17. The third of the changes which we have introduced relates to the distribution of our total debt, and more particularly of the interest payable upon it, between the two great divisions of Ordinary or non-productive debt, and Public Works or productive debt. The arrangement hitherto in force has been faulty inasmuch as it has operated to show too large a part of the aggregate interest charge as pertaining to the productive debt, and too small a part as pertaining to the ordinary debt. I proceed to explain how this result has ensued and how we propose to rectify it.

18. In a certain number of cases we have raised loans specifically for the purchase or construction of railways. A recent instance of this occurred in 1905-1906 when India stock to the amount of nearly 12½ millions sterling was issued for the purchase of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway. When a loan of this kind is raised, it is naturally shown as Railway or productive debt, and the interest actually payable on it is charged accordingly. In regard to this class of debt, which may be called specific Railway debt, there is nothing to object to, and I need not refer to it further.

19. The bulk of our debt however is not of this character. It has been raised sometimes on account of war, sometimes on account of famine, mostly on account of capital outlay on Railways and Irrigation works; but it has not been specifically earmarked for the one or the other. In order, therefore, to determine what portion of the whole is properly accountable as productive debt, the practice has been as follows. In the first instance, all loans are treated as ordinary or non-productive debt. Then, at the end of each year, the amount actually spent during the year for capital purposes on Railways and Canals is ascertained, and that amount is transferred to the productive debt class, the remainder only being treated as ordinary or non-productive.

20. Of recent years, the sums thus transferred from ordinary to productive debt have usually been considerably larger than the total of the loans actually raised during the year. The explanation of this is that the funds obtained by actual borrowing have been supplemented from other sources, such as revenue surpluses, Savings Bank deposits, net receipts under other non-revenue heads, the Secretary of State's cash balances, and the like. The result has been to effect a gradual reduction of the ordinary debt, while the productive debt has grown more rapidly than the aggregate of our total debt, productive and non-productive taken together.

21. In thus determining the amounts chargeable as productive and non-productive, respectively, there was nothing to object to. But when we came to allocate the interest charges on the two portions of the debt, as thus determined, the position was different. The total charge on account of interest on the whole debt (including discount on loans raised below par) was of course known; but this total charge was not divided proportionately between the two classes. Down to the 31st March 1900, the practice was to calculate interest on the productive portion, determined as explained in paragraph 19 above, at 4 per cent. The charge so calculated was debited to the productive class, and the remainder of the total interest charge was taken to represent the portion debt on account of the non-productive class. In 1901, it was decided with the approval of the Secretary of State to calculate interest on productive debt incurred from the year 1900-1901 onwards at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Now, taking rupee and sterling loans together, each of these rates, both 4 per cent and even $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, is considerably in excess of the rate which we have actually been paying on our real indebtedness. It is obvious therefore that the result has been to swell unduly the burden of interest nominally falling on the productive portion of the debt, and to diminish unduly the share falling on the ordinary or non-productive portion. The following figures, which summarize the account as it stood at the end of 1905-06, will show how wide the divergence had become:—

	Amount of debt.	Interest charges.	Rate per cent.
Ordinary debt	54,425,226	954,787	1.75
Railway debt	149,035,455	5,353,212	3.59
Irrigation debt	27,050,799	1,041,456	3.85
TOTAL DEBT	230,511,480	7,349,455	3.18

22. The existence of the specific debt, to which I have referred in paragraph 18, will always result in some difference between the two rates of interest: but it cannot properly amount to anything like so much as the figures in the last column of the foregoing statement would indicate.

23. The remedy we have decided to adopt is simple. The interest on the specific debt will continue to be calculated and charged as at present. But in respect of all non-specific debt, which is more than four-fifths of the whole, we shall cease to adopt any conventional rate for calculating interest on the productive portion: but instead, shall divide the aggregate interest charge between the productive and non-productive portions in proportion to their respective amounts. This will involve some increase of labour in making the calculations, but it will give correct results, which cannot be said of the former practice.

24. The opportunity has been taken to introduce certain other changes, all making for greater accuracy. It has hitherto been the practice to make the transfer of interest from the ordinary to the productive head wholly in the Indian section of the accounts: and this has resulted in a large minus entry in India under head 13—Interest on Ordinary Debt. We have accordingly arranged that the transfer in respect of so much of the non-specific debt as is recorded in the Secretary of State's books in England shall be shown in the Home section of the accounts. This adjustment does not get rid of the minus entry altogether, but reduces it to moderate dimensions.

25. Secondly it has been found that the rate of interest charged on the Railway Revenue account was unduly exaggerated by the fact that while the interest on money which has been advanced to Railway Companies for capital expenditure is debited to the Railway Revenue Account, the amount of such advances (which are made from borrowed funds) did not find a place in the Capital figures of Railway debt. It appeared in the category of Ordinary debt, the interest charge on which was consequently made to appear unduly low. This error has now been corrected, and a sum of over £13 millions has thus been transferred from the Ordinary to the Railway debt. A third minor correction affects the portion of the specific debt incurred in connection with purchase of Railways which is redeemed by the operation of sinking funds; the total debt is reduced by this amount, but the reduction has hitherto been wrongly made from the Ordinary and not from the Public Works portion of the debt.

26. The adjustments indicated above have been made in the Finance and Revenue Accounts for 1906-1907 and the Revised Estimates of 1907-1908 and Budget of 1908-1909.

27. After making these adjustments, I present the figures for the three years reduced to their simplest form, and excluding Capital, Debt and Remittance transactions. They are as follows:—

	1906-1907 (Accounts). £
Revenue	73,144,554
Expenditure (charged against Revenue)	71,555,179
Surplus	1,589,375
	1907-1908 (Revised Estimate). £
Revenue	70,989,200
Expenditure (charged against Revenue)	70,753,800
Surplus	235,400
	1908-1909 (Budget Estimate). £
Revenue	73,438,900
Expenditure (charged against Revenue)	72,867,400
Surplus	571,500

Accounts of 1906-1907.

The following remarks are based on the figures published in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, and include local transactions, as the detailed exclusion of these was not carried out in the Revised Estimate of the past year.

28. Last March we estimated that the year would close with a surplus of £1,326,100. The account as finally made up shows an actual surplus of £1,589,340, being an improvement of £263,240. This represents the result of the Imperial section of the accounts only. The net Provincial and Local surplus was less than had been estimated by £98,704, so that the net result of both sections was a betterment of £164,536.

29. The revenue brought to account was £49,088 less than the estimate. The receipts from Land Revenue, Excise, Forests and Postal Services were somewhat less than was expected; but the principal factor was a large reduction of £323,273 in net Railway earnings, mainly owing to freight on traffic carried at the end of the year not having been adjusted till April in consequence of the Easter holidays. Expenditure on renewals was also somewhat heavier than had been estimated on the Eastern Bengal State Railway and some other lines. On the other hand the receipts from Opium, Salt, Customs and Army were largely in excess of the estimate. In the case of Salt the increase amounted to £72,706. This was due to enormous clearances made in the last 12 days of the year, after the reduction of the duty on the 20th March 1907. Up to the end of February, issues of salt exceeded those of the corresponding period of 1905-1906 by only 5,14,000 maunds. During March, however, 59 lakhs of maunds were cleared, and the actual excess in the whole year amounted to no less than 23,57,000 maunds.

30. Under Military Services, the increase amounted to £122,153, the bulk of which occurred in England, and was due to refunds by the War Office of arrear charges on account of sea transport.

31. On the expenditure side of the account there was a large apparent increase of £573,858 under interest on Ordinary Debt, and decreases of £460,115 and £142,669 under Railways and Irrigation respectively. These variations however were almost wholly nominal, and due to the change of classification described in paragraphs 23 to 25 of the present statement, by which a larger part of the total interest charge will henceforward be debited, as it should be, against ordinary debt, and a smaller part against Railways and Irrigation. The only other variation of importance was a reduction of £152,663 under Military Services. This was due to lapses in the provision for expenditure on stores in England, and to a lesser extent to short outlay in India, and to a refund by His Majesty's Government on account of bounties on re-engagement. These savings were partly counterbalanced by larger expenditure under Marine on account of vessels under construction.

32. Further details will be found in Part II of the present Financial Statement and in the Comptroller General's Appropriation Report which has recently been published.

Revised Estimate for 1907-1908.

33. In comparing the figures of the Revised Estimate for 1907-1908 with those of the Budget Estimate for the same year presented last March, it is necessary to make allowance for the exclusion of the figures of Local Funds, as explained in paragraphs 8 to 14 above. Where the figures now quoted differ from those presented a year ago, it should be understood that the difference is due to this cause.

34. After making these adjustments, it will be seen that a year ago we estimated that the revenue of the year would amount to £72,500,000, the expenditure charged against revenue to £71,725,400, and the surplus to £774,600.

35. The failure of the monsoon and the presence of famine will have prepared the Council for a less favourable result. We now anticipate a revenue of £70,989,200, being a falling-off of £1,510,800. The expenditure charged against revenue has also fallen off to the extent of £971,600, of which however only £462,500 represents real reductions, the remainder, £509,100, representing increase of expenditure defrayed from Provincial balances in the manner which I explained last year. The Imperial surplus is now expected to amount to only £235,400, or less than one-third of that for which we had originally budgeted.

36. The following are the principal heads of revenue and expenditure which differ from the original Budget Estimate by £50,000 or thereabouts:—

REVENUE.
Increase—		£
Opium		371,800
Salt		46,900

EXPENDITURE.
Increase—		£

Military Services		758,600

Full explanations will, as usual, be found in Part II of the statement. The only matters that need be mentioned here are the following.

37. Last March I explained the reasons why it was then necessary to make a cautious estimate of the prices likely to be obtained for Bengal opium during the year. The price assumed was R1,250 per chest, but this has consistently been exceeded, and the average rate actually obtained has been R1,350. This has increased our receipts by over 45 lakhs. At that time also the Malwa trade was depressed, and we estimated that only 13,292 chests would pass the scales for export during the year. Since then the trade has revived somewhat, and the number of chests on which duty will be paid is now likely to amount to 15,000. This will yield a further increase of 10½ lakhs under this head.

38. We now anticipate that the salt revenue of the year will amount to ₹3,336,900 as compared with the Budget Estimate of ₹3,290,000, being a small increase of ₹46,900. Our calculations were based on the assumption that the issues of salt would amount to 434 lakhs of maunds, which figure is now likely to be exceeded by the comparatively small amount of 9 lakhs of maunds. This would have been larger but for the fact, already referred to in paragraph 29 of the present statement, that in the latter part of 1906-1907, dealers held up their requisitions in anticipation of a reduction of the duty. When this was announced on the 20th March 1907, there was an immediate rush to replenish stocks, the issues during that month amounting to 59 lakhs of maunds as compared with 40 lakhs in March 1906. Had this large excess been more regularly distributed, the later year would have shown a much larger improvement.

39. The effect of the successive reductions in the duty has been very marked, as will readily be seen from the following statement:—

Year.	Issues of salt (in lakhs of maunds).	Increase + or decrease — as compared with the previous year.
1898-1899	355	+ 10	Duty at ₹2-8 per maund.
1899-1900	352	- 3
1900-1901	362	+ 10
1901-1902	360	- 2
1902-1903	369	+ 9	Duty at ₹2 per maund.
1903-1904	376	+ 7
1904-1905	394	+ 18	Duty at ₹1-8 per maund
1905-1906	407	+ 13
1906-1907	431	+ 24	Duty at ₹1 per maund
1907-1908 (Estimate)	443	+ 12

The duty in Burma was levied at ₹1 per maund throughout the whole period

40. It is true that the effect of a reduction of the duty takes a certain time to filter down to the consumer: and the figures of individual years are liable to be affected by the fact that alterations in the duty do not exactly synchronize with the commencement of the official year. But after allowing for these disturbing factors, the contrast between the progress of consumption in the first five years of the series, during which the duty was ₹2-8-0 per maund, and that of the second half, during which it has been gradually reduced to ₹1 per maund, is sufficiently marked. Between 1897-1898 and 1902-1903, under the former system, the issues increased by 24 lakhs of maunds in all. Between 1903-1904 and 1907-1908, the corresponding increase has been 74 lakhs of maunds, or more than three times as much. The sacrifice of revenue has no doubt been very large. Our receipts now amount to only ₹3,336,900 as compared with ₹6,184,400 in 1902-1903. and we cannot hope, within any period worth considering, to make this good, even with the accelerated consumption which now prevails. But we entertain no doubt that it is money well lost, and that the sacrifice has been made in the true interests of the people of India.

41. Before leaving this subject, I should like to make a short digression. * It is perhaps not generally known that the levy of a revenue from salt is by no means confined to India, but forms a feature of the fiscal system in not a few of the leading countries of Europe. I have not obtained particulars of all but by the courtesy of the Consulates at Calcutta, to the gentlemen in charge of which our acknowledgments are due for the assistance they have rendered us, information has been collected in regard to France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy, and the Netherlands. The systems in force in these countries vary largely, and in some cases are of much complication. It would be inappropriate to encumber the present statement with the details, but broadly speaking it may be said that each of them includes either an import duty, an excise, or a State monopoly, and frequently a combination of these methods. The consumption of comestible salt, the net revenue derived from its taxation, after deducting

	Consumption of comestible salt in millions of lbs.	Revenue from taxation.	Average payment per head.
France	751.6	1,339,000	0 8
*Germany	931.3	2,468,000	0 11
Italy (excluding Sicily and Sardinia)	424.3	2,961,000	2 0
Austria-Hungary	896.5	2,766,000	1 2
Netherlands	114.4	138,000	0 6
India	3,571.7	3,090,000	0 2½

* The figures for Germany are of somewhat old date.

42. In the case of the European countries, the figures of consumption relate to edible salt only. In addition to this there is a large consumption in each of them for industrial and manufacturing purposes, and this salt is usually either exempt from taxation, or charged at reduced rates. Similar concessions are also allowed in India for salt used for certain manufacturing purposes, but India is not a great manufacturing country and the amount of salt so used is comparatively trifling.

It may be mentioned that the Commonwealth of Australia has recently imposed a duty of £1 per ton on salt imported from outside the Colony.

43. After being nearly stationary for three years, the Customs revenue has made a long stride forward, yielding 55½ lakhs in excess of the estimate, and nearly 92 lakhs in advance of that of the previous year. This result was obtained notwithstanding a reduction of 6 lakhs under sugar and 15 lakhs in the export duty on rice, the latter being due to the diversion of Burma rice to Indian ports in consequence of the scarcity in Northern India. The imports of cotton piece goods were unprecedentedly large, and yielded 15½ lakhs more than the estimate, while the excise duty on cotton goods manufactured in India was also the highest on record, yielding the substantial sum of 32½ lakhs. The other items which contributed chiefly to the increased receipts were manufactured articles 14 lakhs, silver 13½ lakhs, other metals 9½ lakhs, petroleum 8½ lakhs, and articles of food and drink, other than sugar, 4 lakhs.

44. The increase under Mint receipts was due mainly to the success of the nickel coinage, the profits on which amounted to 16 lakhs, whereas credit had been taken for only 2 lakhs in the Budget Estimate. The demand for bronze coins was also much greater than had been anticipated, and we realized a profit of 18 lakhs, or 10 lakhs more than the original estimate. As has been explained elsewhere in the present statement, the coinage of new rupees was comparatively restricted, but even so the receipts from seignorage exceeded the estimate by rather less than 3 lakhs of rupees.

45. The great falling-off of nearly 1½ millions sterling under Land Revenue is of course attributable to the famine, which has necessitated suspensions and remissions on a very large scale. The loss is greatest in the United Provinces where it is expected to amount to nearly 142 lakhs of rupees. Next comes Bombay with 46 lakhs; Burma with 30 lakhs, of which, however, a part is due to a change of classification; the Central Provinces with 13 lakhs, the Punjab with 17½ lakhs, and Madras with 6½ lakhs. The total sums sanctioned as suspensions and remissions reach the high figure of 284 lakhs.

46. Down to October inclusive our Railways did extremely well, and the net receipts were more than 94 lakhs in excess of the proportionate estimate of the year. From November however a deterioration set in mainly in consequence of the scarcity in Northern India and the stoppage of wheat exports. The gross earnings are still expected to be in excess of the Budget figure. But the working expenses and charges for renewals have increased in much greater proportion especially on the Great Indian Peninsula, the Oudh and Rohilkhand, the Bengal Nagpur and the Eastern Bengal State Railways. The net receipts of the year are now estimated at £12,929,400, which is less than the Budget Estimate by £725,400, and fall short of the receipts of 1906-1907 by £54,400.

47. On the expenditure side of the account, there is a large increase of £734,800 under Interest on ordinary debt, and a decrease of £585,700 under Interest on Railway and Irrigation debt. The bulk of this is due to the more correct classification of the productive and non-productive debt which was explained in an earlier part of the present statement. In so far as the increase was real and not merely apparent it was due to the fact that the sterling loans raised during the year aggregated 8½ millions as compared with the forecast of only 3½, while the rate of interest was 3½ per cent instead of 3 per cent.

48. The large decrease of £187,300 under Irrigation is mainly due to the transfer of £135,300 of interest charges to the non-productive head. The expenditure under Opium was less than estimated by £141,600, mainly in consequence of the poorness of the poppy crop. Expenditure on Forests fell by £85,300 following the reduced receipts under the same head.

49. The increase under the miscellaneous group of charges is chiefly due to an increase in the charges for stationery and printing: but also in part to the cost of the various special committees that have been at work during the year, including among others the Royal Commission on Decentralization, the Factory Committee, and the Committee on the Civil Procedure Code.

50. For direct expenditure on the relief of famine, we originally provided only a small sum of slightly over 9 lakhs, almost all for Bengal. We now anticipate that the charges on this account will amount to nearly 77½ lakhs, including 67½ lakhs in the United Provinces, and 6 lakhs in Bengal, besides smaller sums in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and Bombay. On the other hand, the provision of 31½ lakhs in the Imperial Budget for "Reduction and Avoidance of Debt," has necessarily disappeared. There is a provision of 37½ lakhs in the Provincial column of the same head, almost all of which would have been swallowed up also, but this now remains in virtue of the system introduced last year for the relief of Local Governments from a part of the burden of famine relief charges, as explained in paragraphs 48 to 57 of the last Financial Statement.

51. The large saving of £758,600 under the Army group is made up of reductions amounting to £575,600 under Army (effective), and £20,700 (non-effective), £124,900 under Military Works, £27,500 under Special Defences, and £9,900 under Marine.

As regards the first and largest of these items, a decrease of £256,000 occurred under ordinary Army charges, and was mainly due to smaller payments to the War Office in respect of British forces serving in India owing to the earlier settlement of advances made by the India Office, to temporary shortage in the strength of troops (British and Native), lower railway charges, smaller home expenditure on stores, smaller expenditure on the supply of malt liquor, and the suspension of the training of reservists. There was also a decrease of expenditure consequent on the re-organisation of the Supply and Transport Corps, and the reduction of the Army Bearer Corps. The net saving would have been larger but for an increase of £85,000 on food supplies, due to the prevailing high prices, and for the expenditure on the Bazar Valley Expedition which we now estimate at £50,000 falling within the year 1907-1908 besides arrear charges of £6,700 which will be brought to account in the following year. The remainder, £340,300 represents a lapse on the special grant for the improvement of the Army, and was due to the postponement of various measures for which provision had been made in the Budget, or to delay in carrying them out. These included the rearmament of Horse and Field Artillery, the conversion of two Bullock Draught Heavy Batteries into fully Horsed Batteries, the formation of two additional Native Mountain Batteries and of an additional Native Cavalry regiment, the re-organisation of Horse and Field Batteries and of ammunition columns, and the increase in the reserves of ammunition and of rifles. The expenditure on the construction of lines for Native troops and on the purchase of land for this purpose was also considerably less than had been anticipated. The funds available from these and other smaller savings were however utilised in part to accelerate the progress on other measures. The entire saving under Military Works also occurred in connection with the grant for "Special" expenditure, the greater part being due to the slow progress made in initiating or carrying out a variety of measures for the redistribution of the Army. Expenditure on Special Defences was similarly delayed by a reconsideration of certain questions of armament.

52. The large increase of 76·37 lakhs in the Provincial deficit is due partly to some of the Local Governments having spent more than their allotments, to the extent of 40·3 lakhs net, mainly on account of famine relief in the United Provinces, and larger outlay on Public Works in the Central Provinces, and Burma. An important contributing cause however was the contraction of Provincial Revenue due to the famine. The total loss of Land Revenue has been 255.16 lakhs, and of this the Provincial share was 60.66 lakhs. This would have been greater but for (1) the payment of 10.37 lakhs to Bombay and the Central Provinces under their minimum guarantees, and (2) the grant of 32.72 lakhs from Imperial Revenues to the United Provinces to enable the latter Government to close the year with a balance of 20 lakhs. There were improvements under some other heads, but the net reduction in the total Provincial Revenues under all heads as compared with the Budget was 36.07 lakhs, and this sum combined with the net increase of Provincial expenditure mentioned above, makes up the aggregate increase of 76.37 lakhs by which the Provincial balances have been depleted during the year.

Budget Estimate for 1908-1909.

53. For next year, we estimate the revenue at £73,438,900, the expenditure chargeable against revenue at £72,867,400, and the surplus at £571,500. The total actual expenditure is estimated at £73,392,500, but of this amount £525,100 will be met from Provincial balances. These estimates are based on the assumption that the monsoon of the coming year will be normal in character.

54. Under the important head of Land Revenue, we hope for an improvement of £1,435,200 over the figures of the Revised Estimate of the current year. If these expectations are realized, we shall receive slightly more than was collected in 1906-1907, but £265,900 less than we had originally estimated for 1907-1908. This result is of course due to the necessity for making liberal provision for suspensions and remissions in the United Provinces, and other areas in which famine is now prevalent. In these, and indeed almost everywhere, the prospects of the rabi crops are excellent, though the area sown is perhaps 25 per cent less than usual.

55. Under Opium, we estimate that our gross receipts will amount to 726.43 lakhs and our net revenue to 503.29 lakhs in 1908-1909, as compared with 783.43 and 534 lakhs respectively in the current year. The reduction in net revenue would have been greater but for the poor outturn of the crop now being gathered which will reduce the payments to be made to the cultivators. The number of chests of Bengal opium to be offered for sale has been reduced from 48,900 to 45,900, and the average price likely to be obtained has been estimated at R1,300 per chest as against R1,350, the average obtained during the current year. The trade in Malwa opium has slightly revived of late, and we have assumed that 15,100 chests will pay duty, that being the full amount permissible during the calendar year, as explained below.

56. In last year's Financial Statement, I referred to the fact that negotiations were in progress with the Government of China in regard to the restriction of the opium trade, but these had not at that time reached a stage at which any announcement was possible. Papers have recently been presented to Parliament explaining the nature of the settlement that has been arrived at. The gist of the latter in so far as it is material for the present purpose is to the following effect—vis., (1) that the Government of India have agreed to restrict the export of opium from this country to 61,900 chests during the calendar year 1908, and to effect further reductions of 5,100 chests in each of the two following years, (2) that the question of making still further reductions after the year 1910 will depend on whether China has, in the interval, effected a proportional reduction in its own production and consumption of opium; (3) that the question of increasing the Chinese import duty, which at present stands at 110 taels per picul, has been postponed for the present, as the objections entertained to that course are felt to require much fuller consideration, and (4) that China shall be permitted to post a Chinese official at Calcutta to watch the auctions and the packing, but with no power of interference.

In pursuance of this agreement we have reduced the area under poppy cultivation in the Bihar and Benares Agencies from 845,000 bighas to 800,000 bighas. The number of chests of Bengal opium to be offered for sale has been reduced to 3,900 per mensem till December next, and to 3,600 from January to March 1909 and the number of chests of Malwa opium which may be exported from Bombay has been limited to a maximum of 15,100 during the present calendar year. Further reductions will probably be effected in 1909 and 1910.

57. India is thus prepared to do its part in co-operating with China towards the eventual extinction of the opium habit among the Chinese. Whether further measures will hereafter be taken will depend on the degree of success which may be found to attend the efforts of the Chinese Government. That those efforts are sincere we entertain no doubt, and such evidence as we possess indicates that the present movement is backed by a greater measure of official influence and public opinion than has been the case on former occasions. The difficulty of the task however is enormous, and it cannot be affirmed with confidence that a habit which has acquired a strong hold over many millions of people, and a trade which yields large profits not only to the Chinese Government but to great numbers of cultivators and middlemen, can be effectually stamped out in the brief space of ten years.

58. Under the remaining principal heads of revenue, such as Salt, Stamps, Excise, Customs, and Assessed Taxes, we have taken credit for a normal development of revenue. The Forest receipts in the current year have been disappointing especially in Burma and the Punjab, but it is an expanding head, and we hope that a considerable part of the set-back will be made up next year, though possibly not the whole. Departmental receipts also, from the Post Office, the Telegraphs and the Civil Departments generally, are not likely to be affected by any exceptional influences, and may be expected to exhibit their normal growth. Mint receipts however are expected to be less than in the current year by £165,900. This is due to there being no probability of any considerable coinage of rupees from purchased silver during the ensuing year. We have also taken a moderate estimate of the profits from bronze and nickel coinage. Under "Miscellaneous" there is a decrease of £129,700 which is due partly to there being no provision for payment of the Tibet indemnity, the last instalment of which was paid during the present year. In view also of the present state of exchange we have made no provision for gain on that account. In the present year we expect to realize 9 lakhs from that source. In Military receipts there is a drop of £129,900 which is mainly due to the discontinuance of the system of supplying malt liquor to the Army by State agency. There is a corresponding reduction on the expenditure side.

59. I have explained elsewhere that there has been a set back in net Railway earnings during the current year. We hope that the causes which have led to this will not continue, and that the progress of this important branch of our assets will resume its normal course. In this view we have estimated for an increase of £800,100 under this head as compared with the current year. The figure taken, viz., £13,729,500, is only slightly more than we originally estimated for 1907-1908. Under Irrigation also, we expect to receive a substantial increase of £192,300, the greater part of which comes from the Punjab.

60. On the expenditure side of the account the most important feature is an increase of £995,200 in the expenditure of the Civil Departments. The principal items which go to make up this considerable total are Police (£301,100), Medical (£280,000) and Education (£183,200), besides smaller sums under Political, Scientific and Minor Departments, and General Administration. All the Provincial Governments are making vigorous efforts to expend the allotments we have made during the last three years for the reform of their police establishments, and Bombay in particular hopes to make large progress during the ensuing year. As explained below we are making further grants aggregating 12 lakhs for this purpose on the present occasion. Under Medical the bulk of the increase is explained by the special grant of 30 lakhs referred to in paragraph 65. The increased provision for Education occurs partly in the two Bengals, but chiefly in the United Provinces, where extensive schemes of educational improvement are on foot. Part of the increase in the last-named province, however, is nominal, and is due to the transfer of the Zilla schools from local to Provincial management with effect from next year.

61. Under the head of Famine Relief, we have provided for an outlay of 132·07 lakhs, of which one crore is for the United Provinces, 10 lakhs each for Bengal and the Central Provinces, and smaller sums elsewhere. Of the total amount, 80·51 lakhs falls on Imperial revenues, and 51·56 on Provincial. Of this last amount, however, 50 lakhs belongs to the United Provinces, and as the balances of that Government have unfortunately been entirely depleted by reason of the famine, the bulk of this charge, as well as the greater part of that incurred in the same Province in the current year, will eventually fall on Imperial.

62. I explained last year the operation of the new arrangements for apportioning the cost of famine relief between the Imperial and Local Governments. It is a matter of much regret that the occasion for putting them in force should have come round so soon, but the relief actually afforded to provincial revenues has been substantial. Excluding the United Provinces, the circumstances of which are special, we find that in the five other provinces affected, vis., the Central Provinces, Bengal, Punjab, Madras and Bombay, charges aggregating 9.46 lakhs have been transferred to Imperial during the current year, and a further sum of 28.94 lakhs will be similarly transferred in 1908-1909. But for the introduction of the revised system, the whole of those charges would have devolved upon the revenues of the provinces concerned.

63. The reduction of £224,700 under Civil Public Works occurs chiefly in Bengal, Burma, and the Punjab, where the diminution of the provincial balances has necessitated some slackening of the rate of expenditure incurred of late years. The Military charges are dealt with more fully in another part of the present statement. Although they are estimated at £233,900 more than in the present year, they are less than those of 1906-1907 by £831,700, and are also less than the budget provision of 1907-1908 by £524,700. This result is partly due to the restriction of the grant for "special" expenditure on the improvement of the Army to 2½ crores, no regrant of lapses being made. The reduction would have been greater but for a large increase of £130,000 in the cost of food supplies as compared with the present year, due to the prevalence of high prices.

64. As already explained, the financial position does not permit of our undertaking any new measures involving large expenditure. We have however provided a sum of 12 lakhs per annum for the further prosecution of police reform in accordance with our established policy, and have distributed it as follows —

	R
Bombay	4,25,000
Bengal	4,00,000
Eastern Bengal and Assam	1,25,000
Central Provinces	1,50,000
Minor Provinces	1,00,000

Burma, Madras and the United Provinces do not share in the present allotment because those three provinces have already received their full grants in connection with the revision of their Provincial Settlements. In the case of the two last named, this is contingent on the approval of the Secretary of State. The Punjab also has practically received its full assignment.

65. We have also been able to make some provision for another object to which we attach great importance. I refer to the improvement of the public health. Hitherto comparatively little has been done in this direction, and it is sometimes made a reproach against us that no organized effort has been made to improve the sanitary conditions in which the people live. The continued prevalence of plague, and the special measures which have been concerted to combat it, have brought this question into exceptional prominence. In those measures there is reason to hope for the co-operation of the people in a degree which has not previously been attained; and notwithstanding the present pressing need for economy, we believe that it will be politic to give a tangible proof of our sympathy in the form of some special assistance from Imperial funds. Apart from expenditure of this nature, which will not, we trust, be of a permanent character, there is room for almost unlimited outlay of the most beneficial description in reforming the sanitary arrangements of the larger towns. The necessity for financial assistance to enable these to achieve a sanitary standard less primitive than at present prevails has been pressed upon us by more than one of the Local Governments. We have therefore decided to allot a sum of 30 lakhs per annum, among the different provinces, for expenditure on sanitary improvements with special reference to the prevention of plague. Each Local Government will be at liberty to expend the money at its discretion, and to attack the problem in whatever way it prefers. The sums assigned to each of the provinces are shown below: and it is a matter of regret to us that it has not been possible to make them larger:—

Madras	3,50,000
Bombay	4,50,000
Bengal	4,50,000
United Provinces	5,00,000
Punjab	4,00,000
Burma	3,00,000
Central Provinces	2,00,000
Eastern Bengal and Assam	3,00,000
North-West Frontier Province	50,000

66. The only other point to which I need allude is the framing of new Provincial Settlements with Madras and the United Provinces. These were worked out during the past year, and were designed to give to the Local Governments concerned the same share of the divided heads of Revenue, vis., Land Revenue, Stamps, Excise, Assessed Taxes and Forests, as is enjoyed by other provinces. In the case of the United Provinces, it was also desired to effect some improvement in the general financial position of the Local Government. The new arrangements have been incorporated in the budget for next year, but they are still under the consideration of the Secretary of State, and must be regarded as only provisional pending receipt of his orders. It is unfortunate that the occurrence of famine has seriously affected the finances of the United Provinces. Their balances have been not merely exhausted but overdrawn, and, in addition to the Imperial grant of 32.72 lakhs made in the current year, it has been necessary to make a further grant of 14.82 lakhs in the ensuing year in order to secure bare equilibrium. The consideration of the further measures that will be necessary to place the Provincial finances on a better footing must be deferred until after the character of the next monsoon shall have declared itself.

Military Expenditure.

67. I append the usual statement showing the total expenditure on the Army under the various heads during the past 5 years:—

	Army.	Marine.	Military Works.	Special Defences.	Total.
	£	£	£	£	£
1904-1905	20,175,694	620,789	981,599	128,295	21,906,377
1905-1906	19,267,130	551,070	1,094,905	146,306	21,059,411
1906-1907	19,657,845	662,368	1,127,515	138,358	21,586,086
1907-1908 (Revised)	18,754,600	513,500	1,134,200	118,200	20,520,500
1908-1909 (Budget)	18,972,500	473,300	1,199,200	109,400	20,754,400

68. I need not again describe our policy for the financing of special military expenditure, of which a full account was given in paragraphs 60—67 of the Financial Statement for 1907-1908. As I there explained, the annual grant provided to meet this expenditure was reduced in 1907-1908 by half a million, but a large additional sum was also granted on account of lapses which had occurred in the previous year. For 1908-1909 we have again taken the special grant at the reduced amount adopted for the current year, and it has also been decided, in view of the general financial situation, not to make any further addition on account of lapses, though these have again been large. The total provision made for special expenditure is therefore £1,666,700. Out of this amount, close on two-thirds of a million are required to meet recurring expenditure on measures already brought into effect, and the provision for new expenditure on measures for the improvement of the Army is therefore limited to one million. The bulk of this sum will be required for work already in progress, but it includes some provision for new measures.

69. We are beginning now to obtain the full advantage of various economies which have been effected in the last few years. Our demands for stores from England are also reduced, and a large item of expenditure (£153,700), together with corresponding receipts, now disappears from the accounts in consequence of the new arrangements for the supply of malt liquor to British troops. These causes would have enabled us to reduce our estimate for ordinary Military expenditure in 1908-1909 to £425,200 below the provision made in the current year, but for the rise in prices due to the prevailing scarcity which has made it necessary to provide £215,000 for additional expenditure on the feeding of the Army. The actual improvement as regards ordinary expenditure is thus reduced to £210,200. We have still to learn whether the deliberations of the Romer Committee will result in extra charges being thrown on Indian Revenues in respect of the British troops employed in this country.

70. I should also mention certain changes by which we hope to strengthen the control over military expenditure. When the Commands were abolished in June last, the financial responsibilities attached to the appointments of Lieutenant-General Commanding devolved upon the Divisional Generals, but the Budget grants which had been framed in the preceding March were of course on a Command basis. We have now decided that each General Commanding a Division or Independent Brigade shall have a separate Budget, and this arrangement will come into effect from the 1st of April. We have also re-organized the Military Accounts Department with the object of arranging that a single Accounts officer shall transact all the accounts work of a Division, including that which relates to Supply and Transport, and be in a position to advise the General Officer Commanding on financial points; and we propose to establish a special Controllership to deal for the whole of India with all technical supply work such as the accounts of Ordnance Factories and the auditing of railway charges. Simultaneously we have re-classified the military accounts with the object of grouping charges in such a way as to correspond more closely with the distribution of financial responsibility. We believe that these measures will tend to establish closer relations between the administrative and the financial authorities, and to remove from the Military Accounts system much of the obscurity which has hitherto been an obstacle to effective control.

Railway Construction and Earnings.

71. The following statement shows in the usual form the capital expenditure on railways during the past five years and the Budget Estimate for 1908-1909, whether incurred directly by the State or through the agency of Guaranteed or Assisted Companies:—

	1903-1904.	1904-1905.	1905-1906.	1906-1907.	1907-1908 (Revised).	1908-1909 (Budget).

72. On the 31st March 1907 the total length of open lines was 29,303.37 miles classified according to gauge as follows:—

5' 6" gauge	15,630.08
Metre "	12,330.40
Special gauges (2' 6" and 2')	1,342.89

TOTAL. 29,303.37

73. During the current year we have added to these approximately the following mileage :—

5' 6" gauge	338'33
Metre „	453'85
Special gauges (2' 6" and 2')	192'98
TOTAL	985'16

During the ensuing year we hope to increase this length by 921'35 miles more.

74. The original estimates of the current year provided for 9 millions of capital expenditure. Later on however, on the advice of the Railway Finance Committee, it was decided to increase this by another million, the additional funds being provided from the profits on coinage. It is anticipated that the enhanced allotment of 10 millions will have been spent in full by the end of the year.

75. For 1908-1909, we have again been able to arrange for a grant of 10 millions, at which figure the programme has now stood for three years in succession. The important question of the most effective and economical method of providing the growing sums required for the development and maintenance of our Railway system was referred by the Secretary of State to a special Committee in London; the latter have been placed in possession of the views of the principal commercial bodies in this country, and have received a mass of other evidence; and it now remains to await the conclusion of their deliberations.

76. The distribution of the grant and the allotments for rolling stock among the various lines, so far as they are yet finally settled, will be found set forth in the annexed memorandum by the Railway Board.

77. The Revenue returns have been considerably less favourable than we had anticipated. Last March we estimated that the gross receipts of State Railways would amount to 40,12 lakhs, the working expenses to 19,75 lakhs, and the net earnings to 20,37 lakhs. The revised estimate is as follows :—

Gross receipts	41,14 lakhs.
Working expenses	21,54 „
Net earnings	19,60 „

This is 77 lakhs less than the estimate, though 21 lakhs in advance of the results of 1906-1907. The true result, however, is even less favourable; for the figures of the current year have been swollen by the inclusion of 18 lakhs of net receipts earned on the Madras Railway which became a State line from the 1st January last, and by the transfer of about 30 lakhs carried forward from the previous year on account of the Easter holidays of 1907. There was thus a real set-back of net earnings as compared with the previous year, notwithstanding the inclusion of the Madras Railway, and the addition of nearly 1,000 miles of new line. In part this is due to the famine in Northern India, which has destroyed or diverted the important wheat trade, though the gross receipts are still somewhat in excess of the estimate. The strike on the East Indian Railway last November is estimated to have reduced the earnings by about 15 lakhs. For the most part, however, the cause is to be found in the large increase in working expenses and renewals, which have exceeded the estimate by 179 lakhs of rupees and amount to 52'37 per cent of the takings, as compared with 40'87 per cent in 1906-1907, and 47'81 per cent in the previous year. The return on the capital at charge amounts to 5'17 per cent, as compared with 5'38 per cent in 1906-1907 and 5'56 per cent in 1905-1906. The steady growth of the relative burden of working expenses in the last few years is a somewhat disquieting feature. A time comes in the history of most railways when the receipts from new traffic hardly cover the cost of carrying it; and it is a matter of common remark that this stage has been reached in not a few railways in the United Kingdom. Hitherto, however, it has not been supposed that we were within measureable distance of it in India. Various reasons have been suggested to account for it, such as the increased cost of coal, and the higher salaries which are now generally commanded by Railway establishments. The matter deserves, and is receiving, the close attention of Government and the Railway Board.

Irrigation.

78. The following table exhibits the principal figures of Revenue and Expenditure connected with irrigation :—

79. On the 31st March 1907, 55,928 miles of main and branch canals and distributaries had been constructed commanding 50 million acres of culturable land, the area actually irrigated in 1906-1907 being 21,992,683 acres. The productive works during that year yielded a net return of 9·25 per cent on the capital outlay of 3,862 lakhs after paying all charges exclusive of interest. The net profit to the State was 227 lakhs.

80. The Revised Estimate for 1907-1908 shows a net profit of 194 lakhs on productive works, and a net return on capital outlay of 8·17 per cent. Good progress was made during the year with the works in hand, of which the principal are the Triple Canal Scheme of the Punjab and the Upper Swat River Canal in the North-West Frontier Province. On the 31st March 1908 we expect to have 56,882 miles of main and branch canals and distributaries constructed to command 50,195,000 acres of culturable land, and we shall have actually irrigated close on 22 million acres during the year.

81. Surveys of irrigation possibilities in the different provinces have been actively pushed on, and the programmes are approaching completion. In Sind the surveys include a barrage across the Indus at Sukkur to supply water for the Right and Left Bank Canals, and to improve the supply and extend the irrigation on the Eastern Nara effluent of the Indus. It is expected that the preparation of these projects will be completed during 1908-1909. The effect of them when completed will be to increase the area commanded by about 2½ million acres.

In the Deccan extensive surveys for protective works have been in hand to determine the possibilities of irrigation from all the great rivers fed from the Western Ghats. Estimates for two schemes have been sanctioned and the surveys for most of the others are well advanced. The aggregate area irrigable from these works is estimated at 1,886,000 acres and the probable cost at ₹16,52,00,000.

82. In addition to the canals actually in operation, there are altogether 425 projects which are either under construction, or awaiting sanction, or being examined by the professional advisers of Government. Of these, 15 are productive, and 24 are of the protective class. They are designed to irrigate 3·16 million acres and 3·12 million acres respectively, at a total capital cost of 14½ crores and 27½ crores, respectively; and the former are estimated to yield a net return of 8½ per cent. on the outlay. As has been explained on former occasions, our chief difficulty lies in procuring a trained staff strong enough to cope with the work, as well as the great labour force required to execute it.

Ways and Means.

83. As stated in paragraph 53, our revenue account closes with a surplus of £571,500 which is carried forward to the second part of the statement dealing with Capital and Debt transactions, including Deposits, Remittances and Advances. Our total estimate of Capital Expenditure not chargeable to Revenue on Railways and Irrigation Major Works is £11,000,000, of which £1,000,000 is for Irrigation, £8,555,100 for State Railways, and £1,444,900 for expenditure by Railway Companies. In addition to the above, we have to find £950,400 for the discharge of permanent debt. We have also to make a net payment of £207,200 on account of loans to local bodies, advances to cultivators, etc. Our aggregate capital requirements thus amount to £12,157,600.

84. To meet this outlay we have (1) the revenue surplus of £571,500, (2) a portion, namely, £746,000 of the 3½ per cent. sterling loan of £5,000,000 raised in England in January 1908 which will be received in the ensuing year, (3) the net receipts of the Post Office and other Savings Banks which are estimated at £453,500, (4) a net receipt of £523,800 under Deposits and Remittances, (5) a sum of £666,700 to be taken from the profits on rupee coinage and (6) a sum of £4,900,000 to be raised by Railway Companies. These various resources amount to £7,861,500 leaving £4,296,100 still to be provided. In order to meet this, we propose to borrow 3 crores of rupees or £2,000,000 in India and to raise £500,000 by temporary India Bills in England, the remaining £1,796,100 being met by a reduction in the cash balances. Our cash balances are expected to stand on the 31st March 1909 at £12,200,000 in India, and at £3,759,000 in England.

The announcement regarding the amounts to be borrowed in England and India is made subject to the usual reservation, and the Government of India retain full discretion to vary the programme, as now declared, to any extent that may be considered desirable.

85. The present intention of the Secretary of State is to draw bills on India to the amount of £18,500,000 but this also is subject to a similar reservation. This estimate of Council drawings is for the amount necessary to provide for the Secretary of State's requirements: but additional bills will, as usual, be sold, if needed to meet the demands of trade.

Note Circulation.

86. I append the usual statements illustrating the note circulation and the Government balances with the Presidency Banks. The first of the two statements shows separately (1) the gross circulation, and (2) the circulation, excluding the notes held by the Reserve Treasuries, and by the Presidency Banks at their head offices.

Coinage and the Mints.

87. The gross outturn of rupees at the mints during each of the last five years has been as follows:—

	Lakhs.
1903-1904	16,17
1904-1905	10,88
1905-1906	19,60
1906-1907	25,37
1907-1908 (Estimate)	17,30

During the earlier months of the year the trade demand was active and the mints were kept busily employed in providing rupees to meet it. From September, however, it slackened off very rapidly and the requirements of the year as a whole have proved substantially below those of the two preceding twelve months.

88. In the last Financial Statement it was explained that the mechanical difficulties in turning out nickel coins with a scalloped edge had been overcome, and that the issue of the coin to the public would begin before long. This has been done. The first batch of the new coins was ready about the middle of July, and from the 1st August supplies were made available to the public at the larger treasuries.

These at once achieved a large measure of popularity. During August nearly 2½ millions of them were issued to the public, and for some time the demand was greater than the Mint could supply. This has since been provided for, and to the end of February, we had issued nearly 20 millions of pieces, to the face value of 12½ lakhs of rupees. It is estimated that our existing plant can turn out about 6 millions of pieces a month, and though it is too soon to form an opinion as to the eventual demand, we do not think it necessary at present to provide further machinery. The earlier issues were found to be somewhat brittle, but this difficulty has been overcome by the addition of a small quantity of manganese to the cupro-nickel alloy.

89. In Madras a rumour was at one time circulated that the coin had been a failure, and that it was to be withdrawn by Government. This however was promptly refuted by the Local Government, and since then we have heard of no further influences prejudicial to its popularity. On the contrary, the reports we have received indicate that its circulation is increasing in nearly every province, and there is a considerable prospect of its displacing the bronze currency in some measure, though the extent to which this is likely to happen cannot of course be predicted at present.

Exchange.

90. The average rate obtained for Council drafts during the first 11 months of the year was 1s. 4'03d. which may be compared with the rates prevailing during the past ten years, as shown below :—

	s.	d.
1897-1898	1	3'402
1898-1899	1	3'970
1899-1900	1	4'067
1900-1901	1	3'973
1901-1902	1	3'987
1902-1903	1	4'002
1903-1904	1	4'049
1904-1905	1	4'045
1905-1906	1	4'042
1906-1907	1	4'083

For some years past, there has been no occasion to say much in the Financial Statement regarding the course of exchange. During the current year, however, the steady level which had been maintained for a considerable period was temporarily affected, and though the depression was of moderate extent and brief duration, it attracted a good deal of public attention, while the action taken by Government in regard to it formed the subject of criticism in various quarters. It may be of interest therefore to note briefly what actually occurred, and to endeavour to trace its causes.

91. Up to August 1907, exchange followed what has for some years been its normal course, and was steady at a point or two over 1s. 4d., although the drawings of the Secretary of State had been exceptionally heavy during the first four months of the year. In August, however, the demand for money showed decided signs of slackening. The sales of Council bills in July had exceeded two crores of rupees, and in the ordinary course this would have been followed by a heavy run on our rupee reserves. No such run took place, and the issues from the currency reserve during August amounted to only 68½ lakhs, as compared with 2½ crores in August of 1906, and more than 1½ crores in that month in each of the two preceding years. The explanation lay in the prospects of the jute trade. The crop was expected to be a good one, but prices had fallen greatly, buyers were holding off, and there was no outflow of money into the jute districts as in the previous year. The uncertainty as to the future reacted on the Secretary of State's drawings and in the first week of the month he sold only 40 lakhs of bills; there were practically no telegraphic transfers sold during the month, and exchange fell to a steady 1s. 4d.

92. In September, a fresh and more serious cause for anxiety arose. It then became apparent that the autumn rains were in marked defect over a large part of India, and particularly in the wheat-growing provinces. Exchange weakened a point, and sales of Councils amounted to only 131 lakhs during the month, as compared with 340 and 397 lakhs in the corresponding month of the two previous years. In October there was a slight improvement in jute prospects, but exchange failed to rally, and by the end of the month it was clear that the export trade in wheat would be insignificant, and that business generally would suffer the usual consequences of a severe scarcity in Northern India.

93. Before the beginning of November therefore the conditions for a weak and stagnant exchange were fully established. The jute trade was inactive: the wheat trade was doomed; cotton was somewhat uncertain; and much of the Burma rice might have to be diverted to India instead of going abroad. To these conditions there was suddenly superadded an external complication as serious as it was unforeseen. On the 20th of October the Mercantile National Bank of the United States of America was announced to be in difficulties; several big Trust companies fell in its wake; and by the beginning of November a great financial crisis had developed in the United States. The origin and course of that crisis are not material to the present purpose. The point which concerns us is that America fell upon the world's store of gold with all the insistence of panic. Credit was temporarily paralyzed, and the gold currency rose for a time to a premium of 4 per cent. Before the panic abated, over 23 millions sterling in gold had been poured into the country; and the result was to denude the available gold reserves of Europe in the most serious manner. The drain was most directly felt in London, and the Bank of England in self-defence raised its rate on the 4th November to 6 per cent, which was again raised to 7 per cent three days later. The gravity of the crisis is shown by the fact that London had not experienced a 7 per cent bank rate since 1873.

94. The effect on India was instantaneous, for the tightness of money combined with the slackening of our export trade destroyed for the time the market for the Secretary of State's bills. On the 6th November tenders dropped to $1-3\frac{2}{3}$ and he was able to sell only 30 lakhs. Thereafter for five weeks he practically withdrew from the market altogether; but the scarcity of gold and the absence of exports continued, and exchange ceased to be stagnant and moved steadily downwards. On the 13th November it fell to $1-3\frac{1}{8}$, on the 18th to $1-3\frac{3}{4}$, and on the 25th to $1-3\frac{1}{16}$. This was the lowest point reached during the crisis.

95. The significance of these quotations lies of course in the fact that they are below the point—in present conditions $1-3\frac{3}{4}$ for Telegraphic transfers—at which it becomes profitable to export sovereigns from India, provided always that the latter can be obtained at par. This fact, coupled with the continued demand for gold for America, directed attention to India as a possible source of supply, and in the first half of November Government was approached from more than one quarter, to ascertain whether we should be willing to issue gold freely, i.e., without limit of amount, in exchange for rupees at Rs 15 to the £. It was of course understood that the sovereigns were wanted for export.

96. The matter was carefully considered. The theoretical arguments in favour of a liberal issue of gold as an antidote to a fall in exchange were freely admitted. But it was felt very strongly that the depression was not due exclusively to the contraction of exports. The demand for gold was made in part in the interest of our own trade; but it was also due in great measure to the American crisis and the latter factor was clearly one that had to be seriously reckoned with. Our own interests could most effectively be protected by the stoppage of Council drawings, and this course the Secretary of State had already adopted. Moreover, our whole supply of gold was only about $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions, of which only some 2 millions was at Bombay and Calcutta, and this was already being drawn off at the rate of about £400,000 a month for internal consumption. Had we complied with the demand for issues without limit, the whole available supply might have been drawn off in a few weeks, and we should then have been forced to discontinue them, with the possible result of precipitating a panic.

For these reasons, we decided to stand by our legal rights. We are not bound to give sovereigns in exchange for rupees, except at our own convenience, and we do so primarily only to foster the internal use of gold. The Currency Offices were accordingly instructed not to issue gold in larger quantities than £10,000 to any individual on any one day.

97. Meanwhile, as stated above, the Secretary of State had virtually stopped the sale of Bills. To enable him to persevere in this course until favourable tenders should be received, he on the 25th November released one million sterling of the gold in the currency chest in London (which represents exports ready made), and further sums of one million and half a million were released on the 6th and 18th December, respectively. Lastly, a few days later, it was arranged with the approval of the Secretary of State that, if exchange (which in the meantime had recovered) should again fall below gold export point, Telegraphic Transfers on London should be offered for sale in India at a fixed rate. No public announcement to that effect was thought necessary, but the decision was communicated to the Banks at the Presidency towns. To avoid any possible misapprehension it should be clearly explained that this contingent offer was not unlimited. On the contrary, the amount of transfers was to be limited to a defined though reasonably substantial figure, and Government reserved to itself the fullest discretion to withdraw the offer at any moment without notice. The arrangement remained in force till the last days of February, but no occasion arose for putting it into operation. At the end of that month it was modified by the Secretary of State in communication with the Exchange Banks at home, to the extent that bills on London would be offered for sale, instead of transfers, the rate being suitably modified. This arrangement still holds good, but here also no occasion has arisen for putting it into force.

98. The effect of these measures was immediate. On the 25th November when exchange was at $1-3\frac{1}{4}$ —the lowest point reached—the Secretary of State set free $\text{₹}4,000,000$ of his currency gold. On the 27th, exchange rose to $1-3\frac{3}{4}$, on the 29th to $1-3\frac{1}{2}$, and on the 30th to $1-3\frac{3}{4}$. Gold export point was passed, and during December the rate remained fairly steady at an average of $1-3\frac{3}{4}$. About the middle of the month the Secretary of State began to sell Bills again, and sales gradually advanced to a weekly allotment of 80 lakhs. During February the amounts again fell off, but the rate obtained never fell below $1-3\frac{3}{4}$.

99. Government has been criticized for its refusal to promise to issue gold for export without limit, and it has been alleged that such an undertaking would at once have restored public confidence, while in all probability only a small quantity of gold would actually have been taken. I cannot admit that this criticism is well founded. It has been shown above how very small the available stock of gold in India was. Had we given the promise required, and had it been put to the proof, it could not possibly have been fulfilled. That fact alone is a conclusive reason for not giving it. We could, no doubt, have undertaken to issue up to a certain limited amount. That, however, was not what was demanded of us; no assurance was forthcoming, and probably none was possible, that the actual withdrawals would in fact be limited; and it is essential to remember that the gold was wanted not merely to redress a temporary defect in the balance of Indian trade, but also directly or indirectly to supply the demand from America, which had already absorbed 23 millions sterling, and was only restrained from further inroads on the London market by reason of an abnormally high bank rate.

100. One further comment has been made to which I may very briefly allude. It has been suggested that the incidents of November last have cast doubts on the sufficiency of the Gold Standard Reserve, and on the action of Government in authorizing the employment of a portion of the future profits on coinage for capital expenditure on Railways. I do not propose to discuss this policy, the views of Government in regard to which were made public last August. What I desire to point out is that the course of events last winter is not really relevant to the adequacy or otherwise of the Gold Standard Reserve. Between us and the Gold Standard Reserve there stands the gold in the Currency reserve, and this constitutes our first line of defence. The utilization of that gold in India and England simultaneously, and in a moderate degree, proved sufficient to arrest the fall in exchange, and it never became necessary to bring the Gold Standard Reserve into play at all. We are of course aware that some sections of the commercial public unfortunately hold views differing from our own as to the adequacy of the Gold Standard Reserve; but whether we are in the right or they, I do not think that any inference of value can be drawn on the question from the course of exchange last November. If hereafter at any time circumstances should arise which make the employment of the Gold Standard Reserve justifiable and expedient the public may rest assured that there will be no hesitation about using it. But the time and the method of doing so must be determined at the discretion of the Secretary of State, by whom the Reserve is controlled.

PART II

BEING A MEMORANDUM BY THE FINANCIAL SECRETARY EXAMINING THE DETAILS OF THE ACCOUNTS AND ESTIMATES.

101. Introductory.—The decision to exclude Local transactions from the general accounts and estimates has involved, not only the disappearance of the Local column of account, but also the absorption into the general revenues and expenditure of certain funds which were not truly of a local character. These changes will not in reality take effect until the 1st April, 1908: the funds to be absorbed will retain their separate existence until that date, when their balances will pass into the general balances; and the funds to be excluded will form part of the general accounts until the end of the current year. But, for purposes of the detailed explanations of the Financial Statement, it is necessary to compare like with like. With certain exceptions therefore which will be mentioned immediately, all figures of general revenue and expenditure which are entered in the Financial Statement and its appendices have been revised so as to eliminate the variations due to the exclusion of Local figures from next year. The effect is that, from 1904-1905 onwards, the figures now presented are prepared as if the excluded funds had been excluded, and the absorbed funds had been absorbed, from the 1st April 1904 instead of from the 1st April 1908. The true figures which have already been brought to account or have still to be brought to final account for the years 1904—1908 are not affected: their re-arrangement in the Financial Statement is purely statistical and for purposes of comparison; and this should be borne in mind in collating, for example, the 1905-1906 figures in Section IV of this Part with those given in the corresponding paragraphs last year. In two places, vis., in Section I (which covers the same ground as paragraphs 28—32 of Part I) and in columns 1 to 5 of the table at page 63, it has not been practicable to readjust the figures; and in statement D of Appendix I, the balances of absorbed funds have not been passed into the Provincial balances until the beginning of 1908-1909. Everywhere else, the re-arrangement described above has been carried out.

Section I.—The Accounts of 1906-1907.

102. The Accounts of the year show a surplus of £1,589,340, which is better by £263,240 than the surplus of £1,326,100 anticipated in the Revised Estimates framed in March last.

1906-1907.
General Result
of Accounts.

The variations between the figures finally entering into the Accounts and those taken in the Budget and Revised Estimates of the year are fully explained in the Appropriation Report published in the Gazette of India of the 14th instant.

103. The following is a general comparison of the Revised Estimates with the Accounts of the year:—

1906-1907.
Statement of the
gross figures.

	Revised.	Accounts.	Accounts, better.	Accounts, worse.
	£	£	£	£
Total Revenue, Imperial, Provincial and Local	75,626,900	75,577,812	...	49,088

Adjustment of Provincial and Local Surplus or Deficit	613,500	514,796	98,704	...
NET	74,300,800	73,988,472	312,328	...
SURPLUS	1,326,100	1,589,340	263,240	...

1906-1907.
General.

104. Both the total revenue and the total expenditure were less than the estimate, the net improvement being £164,536. In the Imperial Section of the accounts, the improvement was £263,240, but the Provincial and Local Section showed a deterioration of £98,704.

1906-1907.
Differences in Army Receipts and Expenditure.

105. A prominent feature in the improvement in the Imperial Section was an increase (£102,269) of Army receipts coupled with a reduction (£174,255) of Army expenditure. The former was largely due to receipts from the Imperial Government, mainly on account of the extra cost of sea transport occasioned by the despatch of short service men to India during the years 1903-04 to 1906-07, but also on account of the payments due in respect of Indian regiments lent for service in the Colonies, and the value of articles in possession of regiments transferred from the Indian to the Home establishment. The decrease of Army expenditure was chiefly in the Home payments for Ordnance stores; the expenditure in India, however, was also over-estimated to the extent of £62,995.

Other important variations in
Revenue.

106. Imperial and Provincial taken together, the actual receipts turned out better than the latest estimate under Salt (£72,706), Miscellaneous (£55,205), Opium (£52,828), Customs (£44,592) and Interest (£31,050). These improvements, however, were more than counterbalanced by a decrease of £303,563 in the net receipts from State Railways, chiefly from the Eastern Bengal, East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways. The estimate of the East Indian Railway had anticipated an improvement in coal traffic which was not realised. Working expenses in general towards the close of the year, and expenditure on renewals in particular, exceeded expectation, while sufficient allowance had apparently not been made for the effect of the Easter holidays at the end of March in postponing the adjustment of traffic receipts. As already explained in paragraph 29, the increase of Salt revenue was due to exceptionally heavy clearances following the reduction of the rate of duty with effect from the 20th March 1907; this was most marked in Northern India. The exports of Malwa opium in the last month of the year were also exceptionally high. The improvement under Customs (£44,592) was chiefly in the export duty on rice; the receipts on account of the excise duty on cotton manufactures and the imports of manufactured articles and petroleum were also better than was anticipated in March last. Under Miscellaneous, the enhancement was caused by a credit on account of the sale-proceeds of land made over to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the Bombay Port Trust in March 1907. The unexpected realisation in that month of arrears of interest on the Kidderpore Dock and Port Trust loans mainly accounts for the increase (£31,050) over the Revised Estimate of Interest receipts. Land Revenue as a whole fell considerably short of the Revised Estimate, chiefly in Burma and Bombay; but a large sum had to be transferred from the Provincial to the Imperial share as adjustments necessitated by the change in the method of calculating the interest on the irrigation portion of the public debt, as explained in paragraphs 17 to 23.

1906-1907.
expenditure.

107. Apart from the decrease of Army expenditure referred to in paragraph 105, the only large differences in expenditure occur in the charges for interest on the ordinary and the railway and irrigation debt. These are the result of the change, to which reference has already been made, in the system of distributing the total charge for interest on the public debt of the country. The increase over the Revised Estimate under the head 13.—Interest amounted to £573,858. On the other hand, there were decreases of £460,115 and £142,669 in the charges for "interest on debt" under the heads 38.—State Railways and 42.—Major Irrigation Works. The estimate of Interest charges had thus as a whole been slightly excessive. There was also a small over-estimate of Forest expenditure: in Burma, the provision for the purchase of elephants was not fully utilised and difficulty was experienced in obtaining labour; while in Bombay, a contractor failed to supply timber and the provision for payments of royalty on the sale-proceeds of teak on private lands was not fully worked up to. Political expenditure on the contrary exceeded the estimate by £46,834, the drawings of His Majesty the Amir against the balance of his subsidy having been larger in March than was anticipated.

108. The reduction of £98,704 in the Provincial and Local surplus is the result of decreases of £143,089 and £44,385 in revenue and expenditure, respectively. The circumstances mentioned in paragraph 106, in connection with Land Revenue, contributed largely towards the difference of £143,089 on the Revenue side, while the altered method of calculating interest resulted in a decrease of £74,827, in the charge for "interest on debt" under the head 42.—Major Irrigation Works. This and other smaller decreases of expenditure, combined with an excess of £29,505 over the estimate for Stationery and Printing, made up the net decrease of £44,385 on the expenditure side.

Decrease in the Provincial and Local surplus.

Section II.—The Revised Estimate of 1907-1908.

109. As indicated in paragraphs 14 and 101, the absorption in the general revenues of certain minor funds which have hitherto been shown as incorporated Local Funds in the estimates and accounts, and the exclusion from the Government accounts of all other local funds, have necessitated a certain rearrangement of the Budget Estimate of 1907-1908; there is consequently a slight alteration (£100) in the surplus of £774,700 announced in March last. The Revised Estimate of 1907-1908 has been prepared on the same basis. A general comparison of the two estimates is made in the following table:—

1907-1908.
Statement of the
gross figures.

	Budget.	Revised.	Revised better.	Revised worse.
	£	£	£	£
Total Revenue . . .	72,500,000	70,989,200	...	1,510,800
Total Expenditure . . .	72,243,300	71,780,800	462,500	...
Adjustment of Provincial Surplus or Deficit . . .	—517,900	—1,027,000	509,100	...
NET . . .	71,725,400	70,753,800	971,600	...
SURPLUS . . .	774,600	235,400	...	539,200

110. It is now anticipated that the total revenue will be less than the total expenditure by £791,600, but as the excess of expenditure over revenue in the Provincial section alone is £1,027,000, there is an Imperial surplus of £235,400. The falling-off of £539,200 as compared with the surplus of the Budget is the net result of decreases of £1,270,300 and £731,100 in Imperial revenue and expenditure, respectively. Under Provincial, there is a decrease of £240,500 in revenue and an increase of £268,600 in expenditure. The Local Governments will thus draw from their Provincial balances £509,100 more than was anticipated in the Budget. As a whole, therefore, the Revised Estimate shows a deterioration of £1,048,300.

1907-1908.
General.

1907-1908.
Variations in
Revenue.

111. The more important of the variations resulting in the large decrease of revenue are the following:—

TOTAL	1,08,75'00	1,06,48'38	— 2,26'62	— 1,510,800

Land Revenue.

112. The main feature of the Revised Estimate is the very great decrease of Land Revenue, which reflects the unsatisfactory character of the autumn monsoon of 1907. In the United Provinces alone, the collections of Land Revenue are less than the Budget by 141'14 lakhs; and in Bombay and the Punjab there are decreases of 49'13 and 20'96 lakhs, respectively, although in the former province there were unexpectedly large collections of outstandings in the first half of the year. The decline in the Central Provinces and Bengal is less (12'87 and 4'83 lakhs, respectively), but in Burma it is 30'08 lakhs; the bulk of this is due to the failure of the crops in several of the Upper Burma districts, but 8'8 lakhs represent a transfer to Irrigation revenue of the irrigation share of the consolidated land revenue rate in Upper Burma which has hitherto been credited to Land Revenue and taken as an indirect receipt in the administrative accounts of irrigation works. Only in Eastern Bengal and Assam and the North-West Frontier Province do the estimates show small improvements (3'65 and 2'32 lakhs); these, however, are partly counterbalanced by a falling-off of 2'11 lakhs in Madras and the minor Provinces. It will be understood that these figures include the share of land revenue due to irrigation.

Of the total decrease of Land Revenue, 215'46 lakhs are in the Imperial share, and 39'69 lakhs in the share accruing to Provincial. Both these figures include certain special assignments to Local Governments which are adjusted by deduction from the Imperial and addition to the Provincial shares. The more important of these are assignments of 32'72 lakhs to the United Provinces to raise the closing Provincial balance in the Revised Estimate to the prescribed minimum, and 9'25 lakhs to Bombay to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlement. There are also assignments of 5'75 lakhs to the Punjab and 1'12 lakhs to the Central Provinces, in respect of similar guarantees for Irrigation and Land Revenue, respectively; 5 lakhs for tank restoration works in Madras; and 10 lakhs to Burma, on account of the first instalment of the Imperial contribution towards the cost of the Rangoon river training scheme. On the other hand, there are new recurring assignments from Provincial to Imperial aggregating 12'09 lakhs in connection with the new system of calculating interest on the Irrigation debt (vide paragraphs 17 to 23).

and Mint receipts.

113. The variations in the receipts from Railways, Customs, Opium and Mint affect only the Imperial surplus. Railways will be dealt with in the next paragraph. Of the increase in Opium receipts, 45'3 lakhs are in the sales of Bengal opium, an average price of ₹1,350 per chest having been realised as against Rs. 1,250 per chest taken in the Budget. The exports of Malwa opium are also expected to result in an increase (10.25 lakhs) over the Budget Estimate of pass-fees. The improvement under Customs is remarkable, the increase over the receipts of 1906-1907 being no less than 91.85 lakhs, of which only 36.58 lakhs were anticipated in the Budget. The betterness of 55.27 lakhs is distributed over most of the tariff heads, chiefly cotton manufactures (15.5 lakhs), manufactured articles (14 lakhs), silver (13.5 lakhs), metals other than silver (9.5 lakhs), petroleum (8.5 lakhs), articles of food and drink (4.1 lakhs), and excise duty on cotton goods (3.5 lakhs). Only under export duty and sugar, and to a small extent under spirits, were the receipts over-estimated. In the first case, the decrease of 15 lakhs is one of the consequences of famine, as large quantities of rice which ordinarily would have been consigned abroad have been diverted to Indian ports, where no duty is paid. The comparatively high Mint receipts are due to the unexpectedly heavy demand for bronze coin and for the new nickel one-anna coin. The profit on the mintage of these is now estimated at 34 lakhs as against 10 lakhs budgeted for. The renewal of dollar coinage and the heavy output of rupees in the earlier part of the year have also contributed towards the large improvement.

114. Next to Land Revenue, the net receipts from Railways show the largest decline (1,08.81 lakhs). This is due not to an over-estimate of the gross receipts, but to a growth of working expenses which has largely exceeded the corresponding growth of earnings. Under State Railways, the latter amounts to 1,01.7 lakhs, of which 35.9 lakhs represent the receipts of the Madras Railway since its purchase from the Company on the 1st January 1908. The gross increase of working expenses is, however, 1.79 lakhs, of which 18 lakhs is due to the acquisition of the Madras Railway. The decrease in the net traffic receipts of other State Railways is therefore 95.2 lakhs, and this is largely due to heavy expenditure on renewals and repairs, chiefly on the East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula, Rajputana-Malwa, Oudh and Rohilkhand and Eastern Bengal Railways.

The purchase of the Madras Railway with effect from the 1st January 1908 causes a decrease of 27.71 lakhs in the net traffic receipts of Guaranteed Companies. The corresponding increase under State Railways is 17.9 lakhs. The difference of 9.81 lakhs is due to the settlement of outstanding liabilities on the closing of the accounts of the guaranteed line.

115. The Salt revenue shows satisfactory results, the reduction in the rate of duty announced in March last having largely increased consumption. The increase over the Budget would have been greater than 7.03 lakhs but for the fact that the clearances of salt between the 20th and the 31st March 1907 were exceptionally heavy; dealers had been deferring issues for some time in anticipation of a possible reduction in duty. The receipts under Stamps have increased in most of the Provinces. Only in Bengal (4.5 lakhs), the United Provinces, and Eastern Bengal and Assam (3.5 lakhs each) have the increases been at all considerable. In Bombay and Burma, there are decreases of 1 and 4 lakhs; but the Stamp revenue, as a whole, shows steady progress. The increase under Minor Irrigation Works is chiefly due to a change in the method of accounting for the irrigation share (8.8 lakhs) of the consolidated land revenue rate in Upper Burma; vide paragraph 112. The improvement under Assessed Taxes is chiefly in Bombay (4.52 lakhs), where it is largely due to the continued development of the cotton trade.

116. Under Forest, there is a decrease of revenue in all the large provinces, except Madras and Bombay, where improvements of 4.5 and 4 lakhs, respectively, are expected. The decrease is largest in Burma (18 lakhs), where departmental timber operations have been curtailed. The Budget Estimate as usual provided for a moderate receipt under Exchange (20 lakhs), but the actual gain is not likely to exceed 9 lakhs this year. Of this, 6.01 lakhs represents the difference of exchange in connection with the transactions of the late Madras Railway Company. The gain on the Secretary of State's drawings is small, as the rate obtained for Bills on India has fallen considerably during the year, and averages now only a very small fraction over 16d. per rupee. Under Army, the decrease is chiefly in the receipts for malt liquor, consequent on the troops making their own arrangements for the supply of beer from the 1st of January 1908; it is balanced by a corresponding decrease in expenditure, as explained in Appendix II.

117. The important variations in expenditure are the following :—

Increases of
expenditure.
Interest charge

118. The charges for Interest on the public debt as a whole are in excess of the Budget by 22.36 lakhs. The payments in India show a small decrease; but the sterling loans were issued at a discount and at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, instead of 3 per cent which has been customary in recent years; a temporary loan of £1,000,000 was also raised in England. The differences appearing against interest on ordinary, railway and irrigation debt, respectively, in the foregoing table, are mainly adjustments, due to the change in the method of calculating the charges which is fully described in paragraphs 17 to 23 of Part I. The effect of this important reform is a large reduction in the disproportionate burden of interest which has hitherto fallen on Railways and Productive Irrigation Works.

119. The estimate of Famine Relief expenditure is 77·39 lakhs. The distribution by Provinces and the comparison with the Budget is as follows :—

In accordance with the new arrangements for the distribution of Famine Relief expenditure between Imperial and Provincial Revenues, described in paragraphs 48 to 56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-08, 54·88 lakhs of the total charge of 77·39 lakhs has fallen upon Imperial. The Budget however contained a provision of 33·11 lakhs under the head "Reduction or Avoidance of Debt" (Imperial) and this has been diverted to meet a portion of the Imperial charge under the head Famine Relief, thus causing a corresponding reduction under the former head. Owing to the Imperial Government undertaking the cost of famine relief up to a fixed limit, it is only in the United Provinces that any material portion of the direct expenditure on relief measures has fallen upon Provincial Revenues: the provision on this account in the Revised Estimate is 22·51 lakhs. It has not been found possible to spend the full Budget grant for the construction of Protective Irrigation Works; and there will be a lapse of 8·88 lakhs.

120. The whole increase in Civil Works expenditure is in the Provincial section and 9·92 lakhs occurs in the Central Provinces and Berar; this is chiefly due to the programme of useful public works having been developed during the course of the year to provide employment for labour in famine tracts, in preference to special measures of relief. There have also been increases in Burma, Bombay and Eastern Bengal and Assam, but these are largely counterbalanced by reductions in the United Provinces, Punjab and Madras. The increase under Stationery and Printing is distributed over most of the Provinces, but the fluctuations individually are of no great importance. The increase in the working expenses of Major Irrigation Works is chiefly in the Punjab, where important works and repairs for which the Budget did not provide had to be undertaken on the Western Jumna, Upper Bari Doab, Sirhind, and Lower Chenab canals; there was also unforeseen expenditure on special repairs to canals in Bengal, and a transfer of certain canals from the Minor Works category to Major Works.

121. Under Courts of Law, scarcity has led to specially high payments as allowances for dearness of grain; in the Punjab, Bengal and Eastern Bengal, the payments to law officers for the conduct of criminal suits have also been above the average, while in Burma an increase has resulted from the re-organisation of the provincial and judicial service, and the transfer to this head of charges for the service of processes which have hitherto been taken under "3.—Land Revenue." The Jail charges have been raised by the enhanced cost of dietary, due to the high price of food grains in most provinces.

122. Of the large decrease in Army expenditure, 51·05 lakhs is in "special" expenditure and 38·4 lakhs is in ordinary expenditure. These variations, as also that under Military Works, are explained in Appendix II. The Revised Estimate of Army expenditure includes 7·5 lakhs for the Bazar Valley Field Force.

123. The decrease in Opium expenditure results from the contraction of the poppy-growing area in Bengal, while the saving in Political expenditure is due to the drawings of His Majesty the Amir, against the balance of his subsidy, having been much smaller than was expected. The transfer of certain canals to the Major Works category accounts for part of the decrease under Minor Irrigation Works; the bulk of it, however, is due to inability to utilise fully the Budget grant. The decline in Forest expenditure is less than the corresponding decrease of revenue and, like the latter, occurs chiefly in Burma; it is due to the curtailment of departmental timber operations and to the provision for the purchase of elephants and a launch not having been fully utilised. The reduction in the charges for Interest on Capital deposited by Railway Companies is a consequence of the stringency in the English money market, which has led to the raising of less capital by Railway Companies than the Budget anticipated.

Variations in

Provincial

Revenue.

125. All the important variations which have contributed to the net deterioration of 80'88 lakhs under Imperial have been explained in the preceding paragraphs. Under Provincial, the decrease of 36'07 lakhs in revenue occurs chiefly under the following heads :—

	Lakhs.
Increases—
Land Revenue due to Irrigation	20'97
Minor Irrigation Works	10'00
Stamps	4'67
Receipts in aid of Superannuation	3'85
Assessed Taxes	3'05
	42'54
Decreases—
Land Revenue	60'66
Forest	10'49
Miscellaneous	5'29
Other heads (net)	2'17
	78'61

The net decrease in the Provincial share of Land Revenue (39'69 lakhs) has been explained in paragraph 112. The distribution of the net figure into a decrease of 60'66 lakhs and an increase of 20'97 lakhs, as shown in the foregoing table, is purely an account matter. In Bombay and the Punjab, it was formerly the practice to divide the gross land revenue collections between Imperial and Provincial, before deducting from them the portion of Land Revenue due to Irrigation. The deduction on the latter account was then made from the Imperial share of Land Revenue and credited as an Irrigation receipt (Imperial). It has now been decided to deduct the revenue due to irrigation and transfer it to the shared head "Major Works" before allocating the rest of the Land Revenue receipts between Imperial and Provincial. The net effect on Imperial and Provincial balances is nil; and the distribution of the receipts from Land Revenue due to Irrigation now follows that of the parent Irrigation head.

126. The differences under Stamps, Assessed Taxes, Forest and Minor Irrigation Works have been explained in paragraphs 115 and 116. The increase in Superannuation Receipts is caused by a special credit of 3.53 lakhs in Bengal, representing the sale proceeds of debentures belonging to the Calcutta Police Superannuation Fund which has been abolished. Under Miscellaneous, the main cause of the decrease of 5.29 lakhs is the remission, with effect from 1907-1908, of fees which have hitherto been recovered from Municipalities and certain other local bodies for the audit of their accounts; there is also a decrease in the sums accruing to Government on account of deposits which have remained unclaimed for years.

127. The increase of 40.3 lakhs in Provincial expenditure is the result of the following variations :—

	Lakhs.	1907-1908. Variations i. Provincial Expenditure.
Increases—
Famine Relief	22.51
Civil Works	17.38
Courts	7.46

Other heads (net)	3.21

128. The increase in the Provincial charge for Interest is chiefly in the United Provinces (3.35 lakhs), agricultural conditions having necessitated the issue of exceptionally heavy takavi advances, upon which the Local Government has to pay interest to Imperial revenues. Under General Administration, the increase is distributed over all the provinces and is nowhere considerable; it is partly due to the remission, with effect from 1907-1908, of fees which have hitherto been recovered for the audit of District Boards' accounts and taken in reduction of Provincial expenditure under this head. The decrease of expenditure under the head Land Revenue is partly in Madras, where the provision of a lakh for the constitution of additional districts has not been utilised and savings have occurred on similar provisions for revision of establishments; there are also general savings in Bombay and Burma, which are partly counterbalanced by increased grain compensation and other charges in the United Provinces and elsewhere. Most of the remaining variations have already been explained in paragraphs 118 to 121 and 123.

Section III.—The Budget Estimate of 1908-1909.

129. The following is a general comparison of the Budget Estimate of 1908-1909 with the Revised Estimate of 1907-1908.

	Revised 1907-1908.	Budget 1908-1909.	1908-1909 better than 1907-1908.	1908-1909 worse than 1907-1908.

Total Revenue	70,989,200	73,438,900	2,449,700	...
Total Expenditure	71,780,800	73,392,500	...	1,611,700

Surplus	235,400	571,500	336,100	...

The figures this year present no outstanding features of special importance. Until the next harvest is assured, scarcity must unfortunately continue in the greater part of the United Provinces, in large tracts of Bombay, the Central Provinces and the Punjab, and in certain districts in other provinces. Expenditure on famine relief, both direct and indirect, must consequently be high; and there will be heavy remissions and suspensions of land revenue, as well as losses under the other heads of receipts which are affected by scarcity. No provision has thus been made for any reduction of taxation; and the grants to Local Governments in aid of administrative developments which have been a prominent feature of recent budgets have had to be kept within the most moderate dimensions. The estimates have been framed generally on the assumption that normal agricultural conditions will be restored with the next monsoon; and they anticipate a small surplus of only 85·72 lakhs (£571,500).

1908-1909.
Assignments for Police expenditure
and Sanitation.

130. The Budget Estimate provides for special assignments to Local Governments for further Police reform and for Sanitation of 12 and 30 lakhs (£80,000 and £200,000), respectively. The distribution by Provinces is as follows:—

	For Police reform. Lakhs.	For Sanitation. Lakhs.
Madras	3·50
Bombay	4·25	4·50
Bengal	4·00	4·50
United Provinces	5·00
Punjab	4·00
Burma	3·00
Eastern Bengal and Assam	1·25	3·00
Central Provinces and Berar	1·50	2·00
North-West Frontier Province	0·50
Minor Administrations	1·00	...
TOTAL	12·00	30·00

No portion of the additional grant for Police reform is allotted to Madras, the United Provinces, or Burma, as full provision on this account was made on the occasion of the last revision of the settlements of these Provinces: and no grant is being made to the Punjab as it has already received subsidies which cover the cost of all reforms that are likely to be carried into effect before the end of the year.

1908-1909.
General.

131. In the Budget of 1908-1909, the total revenue and the total expenditure give a surplus of £46,400, and as the excess of expenditure over revenue in the Provincial section alone is £525,100, there is an Imperial surplus of £371,500. The improvement of £336,100 as compared with the surplus of the Revised Estimate is the net result of increases of £612,000 and £275,900 in Imperial revenue and expenditure, respectively. Under Provincial, there are increases of £1,837,700 in revenue and £1,335,800 in expenditure. The Local Governments will thus draw from their Provincial balances £501,900 less than in 1907-1908. On the whole, therefore, Imperial and Provincial figures being amalgamated, the Budget shows an improvement of £838,000 as compared with the Revised Estimate.

This is very largely the result of the decided improvement of 221·49 lakhs (£1,476,700) which is expected in the collections of Land Revenue. The net, Railway receipts show an increase of 120·01 lakhs (£800,100); and there are enhancements of 29·19 lakhs (£194,600) and 22·62 lakhs (£150,800) in the receipts from Excise and Irrigation, respectively. The expenditure on Civil Works is anticipated to be less by 33·70 lakhs (£224,700) than is provided for in the current year's Revised Estimate; and there is a reduction of 26·34 lakhs (£175,600) in Opium expenditure.

132. Against these improvements, provision has had to be made for a decline of 57 lakhs (£380,000) in the Opium revenue. The Army receipts have fallen off by 19·04 lakhs (£127,000); and the Army expenditure has risen by 32·69 lakhs (£217,900). Famine Relief is responsible for an increased charge of 54·68 lakhs (£364,500). There is a drop in the Mint revenue of 20.88 lakhs (£165,900), and the Interest on the public debt has risen by 35.08 lakhs (£233,900). Among other anticipated increases of expenditure, the chief are under the heads Police (£301,100), Medical (£280,000) and Education (£183,200). It should also be noted that, under the terms of the new financial settlement with the United Provinces, a transfer of Imperial revenue, which is estimated at about 16½ lakhs net, has been made to the provincial account; this of course does not affect the gross figures.

133. The following table shows the more important heads of Revenue and compares for each of them the Budget figures of next year with the latest estimate of receipts during the current year :—

134. Based, as they are, on the expectation of the return of normal conditions, the estimates of Land Revenue show an increase in most of the Provinces. In the United Provinces, Bombay and Burma where the failure of crops has necessitated specially large remissions and suspensions this year, the increases are taken at ₹15.17, 64.96 and 29 lakhs, respectively; in Bengal it is 5 lakhs, and less elsewhere. Only in the North-West Frontier Province is there a small decline (1.25 lakhs), due to the necessity for granting remissions and suspensions of revenue in four districts.

135. One of the main features of the Railway estimates of 1908-1909 is the absence of any entries, either on the receipt or expenditure side, against "Guaranteed Companies." This is a consequence of the purchase, with effect from the 1st January 1908, of the Madras Railway, the last of the old "Guaranteed lines,"—a category which once included the Bombay, Baroda and Central India, the Great Indian Peninsula, the South Indian and other important railway systems that have now been acquired by the State. The acquisition of the Madras Railway in the last quarter of the current year has occasioned increases of 1,26.8 and 91 lakhs in the Budget Estimate of gross receipts and working expenses, respectively, of State Railways for 1908-1909.

Apart from these exceptional transactions and the large differences which they occasion in the estimates of the Railways which will work the newly purchased line, the only important variations in the gross receipts and working expenses of State Railways, between the Revised Estimate of 1907-1908 and the Budget of next year, are the following:—

	INCREASE + DECREASE —
	Gross Receipts.	Working Expenses.	Net Receipts.

South Indian Railway . .	+ 7'18	+ 11'62	—4'44

136. With effect from the 1st April 1908, the transactions of the Kalka-Simla Railway will be incorporated in the accounts of the North Western Railway, while those of the Nilgiri and Azikhal-Mangalore Railways have been included in the accounts of the South Indian Railway since the 1st January 1908. Apart from these disturbing factors, and the differences in the estimates occasioned by the transfer of the Katpadi-Dharmavaram-Pakala-Gudur section of the South Indian Railway to the Southern Mahratta Railway in January 1908, the several increases shown above represent the general development of traffic and its attendant expenses which may reasonably be expected next year. In the case of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, the recent opening of the Purulia-Ranchi branch and the fact that portions of the Gondia-Chanda and Vizianagram-Raipur Railways will also be opened to traffic account for part of the increase. The decrease of working expenses on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway follows on specially large expenditure for renewals in the current year. The scarcity in Gujarat is expected to augment the receipts of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, but working expenses are likely to be no higher than in 1907-1908. The decreases shown against the Mayavaram-Mutupet Railway are formal, being due to the exclusion from the Government accounts of the transactions of Local Funds, to which reference has already been made in paragraphs 9 to 15.

Excise and Stamps
Revenue.

137. The growth of the Excise receipts has been taken with moderation, allowance having been made for the effects of the prevailing scarcity on this important source of revenue. The total increase of 29'19 lakhs is distributed over all the Provinces, but nowhere except in the Central Provinces does it exceed 5 lakhs. Increases of that amount are expected in Bengal and Madras, of 4'5 lakhs in Bombay, 3'58 lakhs in the Punjab, and 3 lakhs in Eastern Bengal and Assam. The expansion of Stamp receipts is largest in Bengal (6 lakhs) and Madras (5'4 lakhs). In Eastern Bengal and Assam and in Burma it is taken at 4 and 3 lakhs, respectively, and less elsewhere. A decline of a lakh is expected in the Central Provinces, while in the Punjab it is assumed that the receipts will be stationary.

1908-1909.
Opium Revenue.

138. The decrease of Opium revenue is a direct consequence of the policy of restricting exports to China. The Budget has been framed on the assumption that the total exports in 1908-1909 will not exceed 61,000 chests and that of these 45,900 will be of Bengal opium and 15,100 of the Malwa drug. The duty on the latter is fixed at R600 per chest, but the prices of Bengal opium vary at the monthly sales, and an average rate of R1,300 per chest has been adopted for the purposes of the Budget. This is R73 less than the price realised at the last sale; but in view of the fact that the average sale price has declined from R1,587 and R1,434 in 1904-1905 and 1905-1906, respectively, to R1,391 and R1,350 in the last two years, it has not been thought advisable to budget for a higher average than R1,300 next year.

139. Under both Salt and Customs the increases of revenue are specially low, but this is not so much the result of the prevailing distress, as of the special conditions which have contributed to the receipts obtained under both these heads in the current year. In Madras, the Salt revenue was swelled by 19·7 lakhs owing to the recovery of duty at the rate of R1·8 per maund on credit sales of the year 1906-1907 which were made prior to the 20th March 1907. But for this disturbing factor, the increase of Salt revenue in the Budget would have been 29·5 lakhs, corresponding to an anticipated increase in consumption of approximately 2·9 million maunds. The rise under this head of revenue, under the stimulus of the recent reduction in duty, would have been much higher had it not been for the presence of famine in the land. Under Customs, the comparative smallness of the total increase is due to the unprecedented growth of the import duties this year which has already been noticed in paragraph 113. This growth has been so large, that it has been considered expedient to budget for a small decrease (0·55 lakh) next year, in view of the heavy accumulation of stocks and the probable slackening of imports. Nor has any material increase of the export dues on rice been feasible: in all recent famines of any intensity, the diversion of rice from the export trade to the markets in the distressed tracts has been considerable, and this will no doubt be again the case in 1908-1909. On the other hand, a moderate increase (3·5 lakhs) in the excise duty on cotton goods and the miscellaneous receipts of the Customs Department is anticipated.

140. Practically the whole increase of Irrigation revenue is in the Punjab. The failure of the wheat crop necessitated large special remissions on the Lower Chenab and Lower Jhelum canals this year; the Budget provides for no such loss in 1908-1909, while it takes account of a development of irrigation which is expected on the Lower Jhelum canal.

141. The Post Office Budget provides for normal growth of the receipts—chiefly from the sale of postage stamps and money order commission. The revision of postal rates to which reference was made in paragraphs 38 and 157 of the last Financial Statement was given effect to from the 1st October 1907, but the loss of revenue has been less than was anticipated owing to an increase in the volume of business. The estimate of Forest revenue presents no special features; the growth of the receipts taken is not specially large and 9 lakhs of it is in Burma; the balance (6·55 lakhs) is distributed over all the Provinces, save the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province which anticipate a slight decline. In the Punjab, this is due to the restoration to the Chamba State of the management of its forests. Under Assessed Taxes also the increase is general, the greatest rise in any one province being 1·5 lakhs in Bengal. The enhancement of Interest receipts is exceptional, being the result of the heavy issues of takavi loans in famine stricken areas. The total increase in India is 13·63 lakhs, of which 11·42 lakhs is in the United Provinces. This, however, is partly counterbalanced by a decrease of 8·57 lakhs in Interest receipts in England: it is not expected that so large a portion of the Secretary of State's cash balance will be available for temporary investment as has been the case in the current year. The variation under Tributes is the result of irregularity in payments of the fixed demands: the collections this year were about 6 lakhs short of the Budget.

142. Apart from Opium, the largest decrease of revenue is in Mint receipts; it is due to the expectation that the coinage of new rupees will be much smaller than in the current year, and that the profit on the circulation of nickel and bronze coin will also be somewhat less. The large decline under Army is chiefly in the receipts for malt liquor, consequent on the troops making their own arrangements for such supplies; there is a corresponding decrease in expenditure.

Miscellaneous.

143. Two heads of receipt which do not appear in the foregoing table are Exchange and Miscellaneous. No revenue is expected from the former in the coming year, thus causing a loss of 9 lakhs compared with 1907-1908. Under Miscellaneous, there is a drop caused mainly by the fact that the last instalment (8.33 lakhs) of the Tibet indemnity was brought to account in the current year.

1908-1909.
Variations in
Expenditure.

144. The following table shows the more important heads of Expenditure and compares for each of them the budget figure for next year with the latest estimate of expenditure in the current year :—

145. The variations under Army and Military Works are explained in Appendix II. The increase of Interest charges is greater than usual, and is chiefly in the Home section of the estimates. It is partly due to the sterling loans of 1907-1908 carrying interest at the enhanced rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent (vide paragraph 118), but mainly to the fact that a full year's interest on the loan of £5,000,000 raised in January 1908 has to be paid for the first time. Necessary provision has also been made in the Budget for the service of the rupee loan announced in paragraph 84. The share of interest chargeable to the Railway and Irrigation accounts, respectively, in accordance with the arrangements described in paragraphs 17 to 23, exceeds by 39·84 and 6·75 lakhs the corresponding charges of the current year. The whole increase being, however, only 35·08 lakhs, the portion chargeable to ordinary debt shews a decrease of 11·51 lakhs.

Army and Military Works
Expenditure, and
Interest charges.

146. The net variation under Railways is comparatively small, but there is a decrease of 90·01 lakhs under Guaranteed Companies and an increase of 59·82 lakhs in the charge for Annuities in purchase of Railways, both of which arise out of the recent acquisition of the Madras Railway. The total annuity payment incurred on the purchase of the undertaking is approximately 83 lakhs, but the Budget provides for the exchange of 9·75 lakhs for new stock of the Southern Mahratta Railway Company and for the payment next year of three-quarters of the reduced annuity, plus a half year's annuity to holders who exchange. There is also an increase of 34·34 lakhs in the charge for Interest on Capital deposited by Railway Companies.

1908-1909.
Railway Expenditure other than Working Expenses
and Interest charges.

147. The large decrease under Civil Works is in Provincial expenditure and is a somewhat unusual feature of a Budget. The requirements under this head are generally over-estimated, with the result that the Revised Estimate, which takes account of heavy lapses, is ordinarily much lower than the following year's Budget. The reversal in this case is due to the restriction of public works expenditure in Burma and Bengal in view of the comparatively low Provincial balances, to the adoption of a smaller programme in the Punjab where Provincial revenues have suffered by reason of the prevailing distress, and to the absence of special expenditure which was undertaken this year in Bombay. In the United Provinces, there is an increase of 4·88 lakhs in Provincial expenditure; but of this, 4·30 lakhs is for a payment to District Boards which ordinarily would have been recorded under the recently abolished adjusting head Contributions from Provincial to Local.

1908-1909.
Expenditure.

148. Apart from a growth of 6·75 lakhs in the annual charge for interest on irrigation debt, the Irrigation expenditure has risen by 5·90 lakhs. This falls under Minor Works, where a lump Imperial grant of 5 lakhs has been provided for distribution during next year. The bulk of the decrease in Opium is due to the poor outturn of last winter's crop. The strong dry winds in February forced it to ripen prematurely and the produce is likely to be abnormally short. The advances for next year's crop will also be made on an area substantially reduced in accordance with the accepted policy of helping the Chinese reforms.

1908-1909.
Irrigation and Opium
Expenditure.

149. Of the increases under Police and Medical, 12 and 30 lakhs, respectively, represent the additions made to the Budget by the Government of India to allow of expenditure being incurred next year against the special grants for additional police reforms and sanitation referred to in paragraph 130. The balance of the increase under Medical is chiefly for plague expenditure in the Punjab and Bombay, for improvements in the lighting and equipment of hospitals, and for grants-in-aid of the expenditure of local bodies which have hitherto been taken under the abolished adjusting head Contributions from Provincial to Local. The balance of the increase under Police is indicative of the progress which has been made in the development of schemes for the re-organisation of the police force. The enlarged provision under Education is also partly due to the school grants to District Boards being now taken under this head instead of as contributions, and partly to a general advance in the expenditure.

1908-1909.
Education
Expenditure.

150. The increase under Administration is chiefly in the requirements for imported stores, while that under Land Revenue is in Provincial expenditure in Bombay, Burma and Madras, and Imperial settlement expenditure in Eastern Bengal and Assam where operations are in progress in the Bakerganj, Faridpore, Jalpaiguri and Mymensingh districts.

1908-1909.
Administration
and Land Revenue
Expenditure.

1908-1909.
Superannuation,
Post Office
and Telegraph
Expenditure.

151. The increase under Superannuation represents the usual growth of the retired list. Under Post Office, provision has been made, in addition to normal growth, for the appointment of a Postmaster General for the Central Circle, for the reorganisation of the establishments of the three presidency post offices, for two additional Deputy Comptrollers, and for establishment required for the Madras audit office. The growth of Telegraph expenditure is small and normal.

1908-1909.
Famine Relief
and Insurance.

152. The direct expenditure on Famine Relief is estimated at 1,32'07 lakhs, the distribution of which is as follows :—

	Imperial. Lakhs.	Provincial. Lakhs.	Total. Lakhs.
India (chiefly Ajmer)	1'57	...	1'57
Central Provinces and Berar	10'00	...	10'00
Bengal	8'44	1'56	10'00
United Provinces	50'00	50'00	1,00'00
Punjab	3'00	...	3'00
Madras	2'50	...	2'50
Bombay	5'00	...	5'00
TOTAL	80'51	51'56	1,32'07

The division of the total expenditure between Imperial and Provincial has been made in accordance with the arrangements described in paragraphs 48 to 56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-1908. The increase of Famine Relief expenditure over the Revised Estimate is 54'68 lakhs, but there is a small per contra reduction of 2'3 lakhs under Protective Railways and Irrigation Works.

1908-1909.
Forest, Political
and Scientific.

153. Forest expenditure in the Punjab shows a decrease (1'83 lakhs), consequent on the restoration to the Chamba State of the management of its forests. Elsewhere, the Budget differs but slightly from the Revised or provides for a small growth of expenditure. Only in Burma and Madras is the increase at all considerable (4'86 and 2'95 lakhs). The difference under Political is chiefly in the provision for the drawings of His Majesty the Amir against the balance of his annual subsidy. Under Scientific Departments, there is a fairly general increase of Provincial expenditure on veterinary and agricultural services, and a growth of Imperial survey expenditure. In Madras, provision has also been made for the expansion of the chrome tanning department, and for the development of expenditure in connection with fisheries; and both in Bengal and Madras there is increased provision for the purchase of cinchona bark.

Courts of Law,
Jails, Excise and
Miscellaneous
expenditure.

154. After the full provision made under Courts of Law and Jails in the current year, no further growth of expenditure is anticipated. Under Excise, however, which does not appear in the table at page 38, there is a large increase of 13'69 lakhs, which represents a general development of excise establishments in accordance with the recommendations of the Excise Committee, and includes a sum of 0'55 lakhs for the newly created appointment of Inspector General of Excise and his establishment. Of the total decrease under "Miscellaneous," 16'56 lakhs in the United Provinces is caused by the abolition of the adjusting head Contributions from Provincial to Local. This is due to contributions aggregating 24'18 lakhs which were made to District Boards during 1907-1908 having had to be transferred to this head in the Revised Estimate, as the payments were made for general, and not for specific, purposes. In the Budget, similar contributions have been distributed over the heads of account to which they relate, and the sum taken under this head is 7'62 lakhs only. There is a similar decrease of 5'33 lakhs in Bengal, and smaller provision is made in the Imperial estimates for special commissions and committees, and for the refund of fines and penalties incurred by contractors in England.

155. The Imperial and Provincial results are compared separately in the table below :—

	IMPERIAL.		PROVINCIAL.		TOTAL.

	£ +235,400	£ +571,500	£ —1,027,000	£ —525,100

156. The large increase of Provincial Revenue next year over the Revised Estimate of 1907-1908 is chiefly under the following heads :—

Increases—	Lakhs.
Land Revenue (including Land Revenue due to Irrigation)	+99'03
Excise	+93'79
Forest	+23'46
Assessed Taxes	+15'60
Major Irrigation Works	+13'93
Interest	+13'43
Stamps	+9'30
Registration	+6'98
Other Heads (net)	+0'13

The gross increases under the first seven of the above heads have been dealt with in paragraphs 134, 137, 140 and 141, but under Excise, Forest, Assessed Taxes, and Registration the increase of the Provincial share of the revenue is greater than the total growth. This is the result of the altered distribution of these revenues effected at the revision of the Settlements with Madras and the United Provinces to which reference has already been made in paragraph 66. Of the net increase in the Provincial share of Land Revenue, 40'5 lakhs represent the aggregate of the assignments from Imperial to Provincial Revenues for additional police reforms and sanitation (vide paragraph 130). In the Budget, there are also special assignments of 6'47 and 14'82 lakhs to the United Provinces to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlement, and to avoid a minus Provincial balance in the Budget, respectively. There is also a substantial true betterness in collections.

157. The chief variations resulting in the increase of 2,00'36 lakhs in Provincial expenditure next year are the following :—

Increases—	Lakhs.
Land Revenue	+45'98
Medical	+40'05
Police	+39'78
Famine Relief	+29'05
Education	+25'96
Major Irrigation Works—Interest on Debt	+15'71
Forest	+14'36
Excise	+9'46
Major Irrigation Works—Working Expenses	+8'89
Scientific and other Minor Departments	+7'45
Other Heads (net)	+21'63

Decreases—

Civil Works	—34'49
Miscellaneous	—23'47

The gross increase or decrease of expenditure under most of the above heads has been explained in paragraphs 148 to 154. Under Land Revenue, Forest, and Interest on Irrigation Debt, the increases in the Provincial section of the Budget are larger, however, than the total increase. This, and similar differences under Excise and Major Irrigation Works, are the result of the recent revision of the Provincial Settlements of Madras and the United Provinces. Of the increase in the Provincial charge for Famine Relief, 27.5 lakhs are in the United Provinces and 1.56 lakhs in Bengal. As stated in paragraph 152, these fluctuations are due to the division of the total expenditure on Famine Relief between Imperial and Provincial in accordance with the arrangements described in paragraphs 48 to 56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-1908.

158. Freed of all technicalities as to adjustments between Imperial and Provincial, the large deterioration in the current year's collections is almost entirely the result of the failure of the monsoon and consequently of the autumn harvest in several provinces. The heaviest drop is in the United Provinces, where it is estimated that nearly $1\frac{1}{4}$ crores of the current demand will be suspended or remitted during the year. In the second order of magnitude comes Bombay, where heavy collections of the arrears from the previous famine were realized during the earlier part of the year, and partially obscure the losses on account of the autumn harvest; the suspensions and remissions of the current demand being reckoned at about $\frac{1}{2}$ crore. The Punjab and the Central Provinces also suffer, though in a minor degree; and there has also been a reduction in the revenue demand due to the failure of crops in certain districts in Upper Burma. In Burma, however, a part of the loss is nominal, being the result of transferring 8·8 lakhs from the Land Revenue to the Irrigation head of account; this sum represents the share of revenue which is calculated as due to irrigation on lands served by the minor irrigation works in the province. For next year, the revenue from the crops which are now being harvested will be in serious defect in the scarcity provinces: but the estimates assume that a normal autumn monsoon will subsequently allow of the collection of a substantial share of the arrears. In the United Provinces and Bombay particularly, in spite of large suspensions and remissions in the revenue which falls due between April and July, substantial arrear payments are expected in the later months. The increase in Burma follows, under the fluctuating assessment system, the larger area which ought to be cultivated in normal seasons.

The more noticeable increases in expenditure are the result of survey and settlement charges in Eastern Bengal, and of extra allowances to the subordinate establishments in several provinces as compensation for the dearness of grain.

159. These figures have been discussed in paragraphs 113 and 138 above. The price of Bengal opium opened well at R1,457 in April : but it subsequently sagged in consequence of rumours as to the establishment of opium monopolies in China. In December and January it dropped to close on the budget figure of R1,250 : but there was an improvement towards the end of the year, and the average price obtained has been R1,350. The revenue has thus exceeded the Budget estimate by 45·3 lakhs. A fine opium harvest in Malwa in the spring of 1907 has stimulated the exports from Bombay. Up to the end of February, 14,647 chests had passed the scales against 13,488 chests in the first 11 months of the previous year ; and it is estimated that, for the whole year, 15,000 chests may be declared for export.

160. Now that the outcome of the negotiations with China is public knowledge, and that further curtailment of exports has been decided upon, a more stable price may be expected for Bengal opium. It would hardly be prudent however, in view of the constant unforeseen fluctuations in value, to assume a higher average than R1,300. The exports of Malwa opium will probably reach the permissible maximum during the calendar year 1908, as stocks are believed to be high ; and under the new system, there will presumably be a tendency to a disproportionate activity of export during the earlier part of the year. Budget provision has therefore been made for 15,100 chests paying pass duty. The drop in expenditure is due to the steady contraction which is now being effected in the area under poppy in Bengal, and to the very poor outturn of the crop which has just been harvested.

(b) Chiefly duty on imported salt.

161. The movements of the salt revenue during the current year were erratic. After the enormous run upon stocks which followed the reduction of duty in the last eleven days of March 1907, there was a comparative lull in the issues of salt: but the consumption rose steadily, as compared with previous years, until September, when there was a sharp set-back, probably owing to the untimely closing of the monsoon. There has been a noticeable recovery however since November, and it is estimated that the total issues for the year will be nearly 443 lakhs of maunds. The figures indicate how the consumption has been stimulated, even in a famine year, by the lower rate of taxation. For next year a further large increase is confidently expected, and the budget is based on issues of nearly 472 lakhs of maunds. There is a corresponding rise in revenue everywhere except in Madras, where the current year's receipts include 59.09 lakhs received on account of salt sold in the previous year at the higher rate of duty (R1-8-0 per maund) under the credit system and are thus abnormal to the extent of 19.7 lakhs.

162. The reduction in charges is nominal, being due mainly to a readjustment of the proportions in which the cost of the joint establishment for salt, excise and customs in Madras is debited to these different heads.

163. Except in Burma, where the budget estimate was high, and in Bombay where the resort to conciliation procedure is said to be affecting court-fees, the growth of stamp revenue has been general. For next year, a normal increase is counted upon except in the provinces affected by famine: in them, it is expected that the revenue will virtually be stationary.

164. There has been a large increase in the current year's receipts in Madras, due mainly to a higher revenue from country spirits. On the other hand, there is a drop of 14½ lakhs in the Central Provinces, the result partly of ceasing to make advance collections from contractors, and partly of agricultural distress. The latter reason accounts for the big fall in the United Provinces; while the decrease in Burma is attributed chiefly to increased vigilance in restricting the sale of opium to the needs of the consumers. For next year a more moderate increase is taken than usual: famine will keep down the revenue in the United Provinces, and there are indications that the rapid improvement in Excise efficiency of recent years has brought the revenue up to a point from which the advance in future must necessarily be slower. The lapses in expenditure have occurred chiefly in Burma, where a provision of nearly 2 lakhs for revision of establishments could not be utilized during the year. Of the increased expenditure for next year, about 7 lakhs is nominal, representing a redistribution of the cost of the joint Salt, Excise and Customs Establishment in Madras: the balance is largely due to the strengthening of the preventive agencies which most provinces are now undertaking.

166. The import trade during the earlier part of the year was one of unprecedented activity: and the influence of famine has not yet made itself felt on the volume of business. There has been a large increase over the budget estimate in respect of petroleum, cotton manufactures and manufactured articles generally; the small set-back in consequence of the swadeshi movement last year not having been maintained. The great fall in the price of silver has stimulated the import of that metal, which has developed abnormal activity during the last few months of the year. On the other hand, the demand for rice in India on account of local scarcity has again deflected the export from Burma and reduced our revenue from that source. For 1908-1909, in view of the prevalence of famine, it would be imprudent to budget for any substantial increase upon the large receipts of the current year. There should be some improvement in consequence of the doubling of the duty on beer, and the steady development of the cotton-mill industry; but in most other respects the budget follows closely the revised estimate of 1907-1908. The rise in expenditure is due to improvements in the preventive arrangements at Rangoon and Calcutta, and to increased allowances, overtime and otherwise, at Bombay.

167. In Bombay the estimate for the current year had not made sufficient allowance for the high profits in the mill industry, and has been exceeded by about 4½ lakhs: a further improvement has been anticipated in the figure for next year. In the famine provinces, the revenue is stationary for the time; but elsewhere the general activity of trade has led to an increase in the current year's actuals over the estimate, and justifies a further moderate development of the revenue in 1908-1909.

168. The revenue has fluctuated considerably in different provinces. It has dropped heavily in the Andamans where it is always very unsteady. In Burma it has fallen short of the estimate by 18 lakhs, mainly owing to the curtailment of departmental operations and the working out of refuse teak in certain forests. In Madras, on the contrary, increased exploitation by departmental agency and a rise in the price of produce have raised the receipts by 4½ lakhs over the original estimate. For next year a moderate improvement is expected, chiefly in Burma, where a revival in prices is looked for. The cost of working the forests follows in a general way the movements of the revenue.

169. The falling off under this head of revenue in the current year is only nominal. When the last budget was framed, an instalment of interest amounting to 5'96 lakhs was due from the Calcutta Port Commissioners; and provision was made for their paying the money in April 1907. Contrary to expectation, they paid it at the end of March, so that it appears in the figures for 1906-1907. In other respects the figures approximate closely to the original estimate: in the scarcity provinces the collections of interest on agricultural loans are weak, but on the other hand there have been higher recoveries of interest on overdrawals of capital by Railway Companies. This last mentioned reason will give a still further increase next year: but the main cause for the large rise in 1908-1909 is the expected recovery of an additional 10 lakhs or so on the heavy advances of takavi for famine purposes in the United Provinces. The variations in England depend on the extent to which the Secretary of State is in a position to make temporary investments of his cash balances, and on the interest which he obtains on them.

They have been examined from this point of view in paragraphs 118 and 145; and the first half of the above table is merely indicative of the change of system under which a more adequate share of the interest charges is thrown upon the non-productive debt with effect from 1906-1907.

171. The reduction in postal rates from last October has made very little impression on the steady progress of postal revenue; the increase over the current year's budget estimate being almost wholly on account of the sale of postage stamps. A further improvement under the same head and also in the receipts for Money Order commission is provided for next year. The excess of expenditure in the current year results mainly from the grant of compensation for the dearness of grain. The further increase next year is accounted for by certain new appointments (vide paragraph 151); by necessary improvements in the pay of the executive staff; by larger payments to railways and by subsidies for new postal routes.

173. The decline in exports and the marked slackening of the demand for rupees led to the curtailment and ultimate cessation of the coinage of rupees in the latter part of the year: but the heavy output in the earlier months served to bring the receipts from seignorage nearly 3 lakhs above the original estimate. Famine brought an extraordinary demand for bronze coinage, which is now being worked almost entirely to the exclusion of silver; and the profits on the outturn have risen by 10 lakhs as compared with the Budget Estimate. The profits on the nickel one-anna piece, of which the issue began in August 1907, are expected to amount to 16 lakhs against the tentative provision of only 2 lakhs made under this head in the Budget. For 1908-1909 the figures are based on the assumption that the rupee coinage will be very much less than it was in the current year; that the rush on bronze will cease when the monsoon is established; and that the new nickel coin will be in moderate request. There is a corresponding reduction in the charges for labour and overtime allowances at both Mints.

174. The chief reasons for the difference between the budget provision for 1907-1908 and the revised estimate are:—Increases: the appointment of an Inspector General of Excise and Salt; minor re-organizations in judicial and magisterial establishments; larger fees to pleaders in Government cases; grain compensation allowances to petty employes; increased cost of dietary in jails; and special grants for plague expenditure to municipalities in the United Provinces: Decreases: the failure of most provinces except Bengal and Bombay to use their full allotments for police reform; the lapse of about 2 lakhs of special grants for agricultural and similar purposes in Bombay; and the probability that His Majesty the Amir will draw only about 15 lakhs from his subsidy account against the 35½ lakhs provided in the budget. In 1908-1909 a considerably enhanced provision is made for pushing on the police re-organization in every province. The increased educational expenditure occurs chiefly in the United Provinces where it is proposed to take over all English schools from District Boards and simultaneously to give large grants to those bodies for primary education; but in other provinces also, the similar grants which formerly appeared as contributions from Provincial to Local have now been brought under this head owing to the abolition of the local column in the accounts. The provision for agricultural development is raised in most provinces: the Amir's subsidy drawings are taken at 25 lakhs against 15 lakhs this year; and the expenditure on sanitation is increased by the amount of the special Imperial grant for that purpose. Minor differences are due to strengthening the petty court establishments in the Central Provinces and to the purchase of a new Hooghly pilot steamer in Bengal.

175. There has been a general excess over the estimate for stationery and printing requirements in all provinces, particularly Bengal; this has also affected the purchase of stores in England. A reversion to more normal conditions is anticipated for next year. Under the head Miscellaneous, the drop in the Budget figure for 1908-1909 is mainly formal. In the recasting of the figures for previous years which has been necessitated by the exclusion of the Local column, it was found impossible in two provinces to classify with precision the purposes for which certain large contributions to District Boards have hitherto been given: they have accordingly been entered as miscellaneous debits in the provincial accounts.

176. The grant of $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores which is provided in normal years under this head has hitherto been earmarked, in the first place, for famine relief if necessary; and in the second place, for protective railway and canal works up to a maximum of 75 lakhs; any balance that remained being made available for capital expenditure which would otherwise have had to be met from borrowed funds. In the present year, a special charge upon the grant has been created by the arrangements for building up provincial credits for famine expenditure which are described in paragraphs 48-56 of the Financial Statement for 1907-08. The $37\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs which are assigned to Local Governments under that scheme, are debited to this grant, whether the other claims upon it leave any balance or not. During the current year, the cost of famine relief is expected to be $2\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs in the Central Provinces, 6 in Bengal, $67\frac{1}{2}$ in the United Provinces and less than a lakh in Bombay and the Punjab. No financial restrictions have been placed on the programme of protective works for which budget provision was made before there was any indication of famine, the shortage of expenditure being the result purely of administrative difficulties in pushing on the works. The aggregate result is a large excess over the normal total of 150 lakhs. For the next year, this excess will be still larger, as the direct famine expenditure is taken at 10 lakhs in the Central Provinces, 10 in Bengal, 100 in the United Provinces, 3 in the Punjab, $2\frac{1}{2}$ in Madras and 5 in Bombay; while a liberal provision of 60 lakhs has been made for protective irrigation works which either could not be postponed without waste or are likely to be useful as providing labour in distressed areas.

178. The figure of receipts estimated for 1907-1908 was well worked up to in every province except the Punjab, where revenue was lost on the Lower Chenab and the Lower Jhelum Canals in consequence of a bad wheat crop in 1906-1907: special remissions too had to be given owing to labour not being available to reap the crops in certain districts depopulated by famine. The other variations as between Revised and Budget 1907-1908 are nearly all of a formal character. In the first place, the share of Interest charges that is thrown on the Irrigation accounts has been reduced with effect from 1906-1907, as explained elsewhere in this statement, and distributed between England and India; secondly, [the direct receipts from Minor Works have received a credit of 8.8 lakhs in Burma by transfer from the Land Revenue head (vide paragraph 112); and thirdly, certain small irrigation works in Madras and the United Provinces have been moved from the Minor to the Major category with effect from the 1st April 1907. For next year the absence of the influences which adversely affected the Punjab Canals in 1907-1908, should allow for an improvement of over 22 lakhs in that province; and the demand for water in a dry rabi season in the United Provinces has suggested the bulk of the rest of the improvement in receipts.

179. The provinces which have most notably exceeded their Civil Works grants are the Central Provinces, Burma and Bombay; there have been savings, on the other hand, in the United Provinces, Punjab and Madras. In the Central Provinces the cost of taking over tools and stores from the Warora Colliery, and the expansion of the ordinary programme in distressed districts, were the chief reasons for over-spending: in Burma and Bombay, lapses under other heads of expenditure were freely utilized for pushing on public works. The saving in Madras was mainly due to the postponement of a number of water supply and drainage schemes: in the United Provinces and Punjab it was an intentional contribution to the cost of famine.

Section V.—Capital Expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works not charged to Revenue.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

181. The expenditure on Railway Construction for which the Government of India undertakes financial responsibility or gives any direct guarantee is now estimated at Rs 15,00,00,000 in 1907-1908, the Budget grant of 13½ crores having been increased by 1½ crores as explained in paragraph 74. There was a lapse of about 114 lakhs of rupees from the amount placed at the disposal of the Secretary of State, but this lapse has been counterbalanced by increased grants for expenditure in India.

182. For 1908-1909 the programme of capital outlay on Railway Construction has been placed at Rs 15,00,00,000.

183. The distribution of the total expenditure on Railway Construction between State and Companies' agency in each of the three years from 1906-1907 to 1908-1909 is as follows:—

Including this expenditure, and also some small expenditure from Provincial Revenues, the total outlay on Railway Construction in the three years is as follows:—

CONSTRUCTION OF PRODUCTIVE IRRIGATION WORKS.

186. The figures are —

Productive
Irrigation Works.

The heavy outlay which is being incurred on a number of large irrigation schemes, especially in the Punjab, is likely to lead to a small excess of 5 lakhs over the Budget grants for 1907-1908 under this head. The Budget grant for 1908-1909 has been fixed at R 1,50,00,000, as it appears probable from the progress of expenditure in recent years that the increased allotment will be usefully employed.

Section VI.—Provincial Finance.

188. When the scheme of quasi-permanent provincial settlements was introduced, as explained in section VI of the Financial Statement for 1904-1905, Madras and the United Provinces were two of the first provinces to come under the new arrangements. This priority has had its disadvantages, as the provinces whose settlements have been revised more recently have obtained, in some respects, more favourable terms. In the earlier quasi-permanent settlements, the prevailing practice was to treat as Imperial three-fourths of the divided heads of revenue and of the corresponding heads of expenditure: certain exceptions were made which are detailed in paragraph 215 of the Financial Statement for 1904-1905, but which are not of sufficient importance to call for repetition. In Madras and the United Provinces, this method of division was a feature of the settlements which have remained in force up to the current year. In the settlements, however, which were more recently concluded, such as those of Bombay and the Central Provinces, the Government of India were able to raise the Provincial shares of revenue to one-half under all the divided heads and to make one of them, Registration, wholly Provincial. Again, when the Bengal and Assam settlements were revised in consequence of the formation of the new Province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, the new settlements were modelled on the latest principles. Madras and the United Provinces were therefore the only provinces which remained under the old and less liberal terms. Another defect in their existing arrangements is that their fixed assignments are now disproportionate to the rest of their revenues. The growth in the last four years of the grants from Imperial revenues in compensation for remitted taxes, in aid of District Boards, for the furtherance of education, and the like, has left the two provinces with an unduly high proportion of their resources as a fixed allotment, so that they do not progress pari passu with the needs of the provincial administration. For these reasons it was found desirable to modify the Madras and the United Provinces Settlements of 1904 on the following lines.

*Revision of the
Provinces Sett

Madras.—The province has now been given a one-half share of all the principal heads of revenue which are ordinarily divided between Imperial and Provincial; Registration, however, continuing wholly Provincial. It has also been given a half share in the direct receipts from Major Irrigation, which formerly were wholly Imperial. The corresponding expenditure heads have been treated in the same way, with the exception of Land Revenue, which is now a purely Provincial head in all settlements. Applied to the Budget figures of the province for 1907-1908, these re-adjustments would have given Madras an increase of ₹77,86,000 in revenue, against an increased expenditure of ₹36,03,000. After allowing for an increase of ₹19,26,000, the bulk of which is on account of Police reorganisation and projects of tank restoration (for which an Imperial subvention of 5 lakhs was promised), a surplus of ₹22,57,000 would have been left; and this figure will accordingly be taken as a fixed assignment from Provincial to Imperial through the Land Revenue head. Madras is therefore in the fortunate position of having all its revenue in the shape of growing revenues. A minimum receipt of ₹308 lakhs from Land Revenue is guaranteed to the provincial account.

United Provinces.—The Provincial shares of the divided heads of revenue have been fixed on the same basis as in the case of Madras, except that the Provincial share of Land Revenue will be $\frac{3}{4}$ ths (save as regards some minor receipts which will be wholly Provincial) instead of one-half, and that direct receipts from Major Irrigation Works will be wholly Provincial, as heretofore. It is proposed to guarantee a minimum receipt of 240 lakhs from the divided portion of Land Revenue, and a minimum receipt of 60 lakhs from Major Irrigation Works net (direct receipts minus working expenses); and to give Provincial revenues a fixed assignment of ₹13,89,000. The Budget for 1908-1909 has been prepared on these terms: but they are only provisional at present, as they have still to receive the sanction of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

In neither case does the settlement take into account the allotments made last year in connection with the scheme for distributing the incidence of famine relief expenditure, as it is desirable to emphasise the special character of that arrangement and not to allow it to merge in the ordinary settlement terms. Moreover, in the absence of famine, the annual allotment will cease when the reserve at the credit of the province has reached its maximum limit.

grantees.*

189. The shortage of the autumn rainfall in 1907, and the consequent loss of revenue, have brought into operation the guarantee clauses in some of the Provincial settlements. To bring up to the guaranteed minimum the Provincial share of Land Revenue in the current year, assignments of Rs. 25,000 and Rs. 12,000 have been made to Bombay and the Central Provinces, respectively, while in the Punjab an assignment of Rs. 5,75,000 has been found necessary to make good the minimum Provincial share of Irrigation receipts. In the United Provinces an assignment of Rs. 6,47,000 has been made in the Budget to cover the difference between the Provincial share of the actual Land Revenue collections and the 240 lakhs which it is proposed to guarantee under the new settlement.

Provincial grants to United Provinces.

190. The demands of famine upon the resources of the United Provinces have necessitated special measures to prevent the accounts from closing, both this year and next, with a minus balance. It has been decided to close the Provincial section of the accounts with a credit balance of 20 lakhs (the prescribed minimum) in 1907-1908, and at equilibrium in 1908-1909. Assignments of Rs. 32,72,000 and Rs. 14,82,000 have consequently been made in the two years respectively.

*Grants for Police
Sanitation.*

191. The progress of police reforms in the different provinces involves further drafts on the assistance which the Government of India promised to give towards carrying out the reorganization recommended by the Police Commission. As stated last year, the full grant admissible to Burma has been allotted to it under the terms of its new settlement. A similar arrangement has now been effected with Madras and the United Provinces. The grants already made to the Punjab virtually cover the cost of the reform schemes for that province. In the other provinces, the extra grants for 1908-1909 have been strictly confined to the difference between the anticipated cost of the reorganization measures during the year and the subsidies already given. The aggregate grants included in the Budget are 12 lakhs, distributed as shown in paragraph 130. It has been explained in that paragraph that Imperial grants aggregating 30 lakhs will be made to Local Governments to assist them in special measures for the improvement of sanitation.

192. The exclusion of Local figures from the accounts, as explained in paragraphs 9 to 14, involves the abolition of the class of funds hitherto known as Incorporated Local Funds. The following funds, which formerly belonged to this class, have been absorbed in general revenues:—

Central Provinces	The Inland Labour Transport Fund.
Eastern Bengal and Assam	The Chittagong District Road Account and the Inland Labour Transport Fund.
Bengal	The Inland Labour Transport Fund.
United Provinces	The Inland Labour Transport Fund.
Punjab	The Copying Agency Fund.
North-West Frontier Province	The Copying Agency Fund.
Bombay	The Government Central Book Depot Fund.
Central India Agency	The Indore Agency Road Fund, the Manpur Road Fund, the Manpur School Fund, the Bundelkhand Agency Fund, and the Malwa Dharmasala Fund.

All other funds which have heretofore been treated as Incorporated Local will now be excluded from the general accounts, and their relations with the Government treasuries in future will virtually be the relations of client and banker.

193. The following table gives the usual information regarding the revenue, expenditure and balances of each province, compared with the standards assumed in the settlements in force in each :—

1907-1908,
Budget.

195. The Budget of 1907-1908 provided for a net disbursement of £22,476,700 including £500,000 for the discharge of railway debentures which matured in June last. To meet these charges it was estimated that Council Bills would be sold for £18,100,000, and that a sterling loan of £3,500,000 would be floated; the balance of the liabilities being met by a reduction in the Secretary of State's balances. Following the usual practice, no Budget provision was made for the purchase of silver, which would be met in ordinary course by additional drawings on India or from the Currency gold in the Bank of England.

1907-1908,
Revised Estimate.

196. The net disbursements thus budgeted for were exceeded by £2,583,100. In the first place, the activity of trade in the earlier part of the year necessitated heavy purchases of silver; and £1,191,300 were paid on that account, in addition to payments made by the withdrawal of £3,325,000 from the Currency chest in London. In the second place, the Secretary of State remitted through the Currency reserve a sum of £925,000 to the credit of the Indian Treasury balances, which had been seriously reduced by the heavy sale of Telegraphic Transfers towards the end of 1906-07. And in the third place, the net outlay on account of Railways was considerably in excess of the estimate. More detailed particulars of the Railway transactions are given in paragraphs 198 and 199; but the position may be summarized as follows. The Railway Companies which had been expected to raise capital were unable to obtain all that they had undertaken to provide; and the assistance which had been counted upon from this source fell short by £1,503,800. The debentures of the Madras Railway Company for £213,900 had to be paid off instead of being replaced by fresh capital, as had been hoped. And the payments made to Railway Companies on account of stores, and the advances to Companies working purchased lines, exceeded the Budget provision by £861,200.

Against these increased liabilities, there have been certain substantial improvements on the original estimates. The capital outlay on State Railways and Irrigation works is estimated to be £1,306,800 short of the budget provision, chiefly in consequence of delays in payments against indents from India. The Secretary of State will be left on the 31st March with £335,600 in his treasury belonging to the Gold Standard Reserve and for the time being uninvested; and his receipts in connection with Postal and Money Order business between India and the United Kingdom are expected to be £539,000 better than had been budgeted for.

197. To aggravate the net deterioration of £2,583,100 in his Treasury transactions, the Secretary of State was obliged to curtail his provision for Council Bills. The fall in Exchange owing to the weakness in the export trade, coupled for a time with the effects of the American crisis, has led to a reduction of the sale of Council Bills by approximately £2,286,000. This, however, has been partly made good by a temporary loan of £1,000,000; and the other deficiencies in the Secretary of State's net transactions have been more than covered by the £5-million loan which was floated towards the close of the year and of which approximately £4½ millions will be brought to account before the 31st of March (vide paragraph 200). It will thus be found possible to close the year by drawing on the cash balances (which opened at a much higher figure than had been estimated in the Budget) to the extent of only £491,800 against £876,700 originally estimated for.

198. The details of the transactions under capital raised and deposited by Railway Companies are as follows:—

Owing to the long stringency in the London money market, no capital for fresh outlay was raised by any of the companies except the small sums shown above against the Assam Bengal and the Indian Midland Railway Companies. Debentures for £1,216,200 were renewed at a discount of £4,300 instead of being replaced by fresh capital; and of the debentures of the Madras Railway Company £134,700, which matured on 1st January 1908, were discharged as direct liabilities of the Secretary of State in consequence of the purchase of the undertaking. Of the £1,034,200 shown in the above table as discharged during the year, £79,200 of the Madras Railway Company were discharged from funds supplied by the Secretary of State and the remainder was replaced by fresh capital.

199. The Railway Companies whose transactions are dealt with above have separate capital deposit accounts in England, and funds raised and withdrawn by them in England are brought directly to account in the Home Treasury. It is the practice for certain other Companies which work State Railways to receive advances from the Secretary of State for the purchase of stores; and funds are sometimes raised by them and deposited with the Secretary of State. These deposits and advances, instead of being brought directly to account in England, are treated as remittances from and to India respectively, and are brought to account in this country. The details of the transactions during the current year are as follows:

Fresh capital to the extent of £2,000,000, producing £1,897,100, was raised by the East Indian Railway. The debentures of the South Indian Railway were renewed at a discount of £1,200 instead of being discharged.

200. The Budget Estimate provided for a 3 per cent sterling loan of ^{1907-1908.} £3,500,000 for the discharge of Bombay, Baroda and Central India debentures to the extent of £500,000, and for advances to Railway Companies under 51 Vict., c. 5. The sterling loan was announced in May 1907, but in view of the tightness of money tenders were invited for £3,500,000 of ^{Loans.} 3½ per cent India stock. The loan was issued at the fixed price of 98½—the average rate obtained for the 3 per cent sterling loan of the previous year having been £94 16s. 5d.; and the applications amounted to £11,708,400. Later in the year, in January 1908, a further 3½ per cent sterling loan of £5,000,000 was raised in anticipation of the requirements for railway capital expenditure in the ensuing year. The issue was made at a fixed price of 99—the total tenders amounting to £31,343,300. Of this second loan £4,254,000 only are likely to be received during 1907-1908 and the remainder appears in the estimates for 1908-1909.

India Bills for £1,000,000 with a currency of six months were issued in October 1907 at an average discount of £4 3s. 3d. per cent; they were required to replace the debentures which were to have been raised by the Bengal-Nagpur and the Burma Railway Companies.

201. In addition to the loans raised during the year the Secretary of State ^{1907-1908.} incurred liability in respect of £2,144,800 debentures of the Madras Railway ^{Redemption of} Company on the purchase of the undertaking on the 31st December 1907. ^{Railway liabilities} The amount appears in the table in paragraph 195 both on the receipt side as Permanent Debt incurred and on the expenditure side as capital outlay on redemption of Railway liabilities, and does not affect the ways and means.

202. The Budget Estimates provide for a net disbursement of £21,102,000, ^{1908-1909.} including a payment of £865,800 for the discharge of railway debentures which ^{The Budget} mature during the year. The net disbursements are estimated at £1,374,700 ^{Estimate.} less than the current year's budget. This is the net result of the following variations:—

Of the net disbursement of £21,102,000, it is proposed to meet £18,500,000 by Council Bills, £746,000 from the amount to be received in 1908-1909 on account of the 3½ per cent sterling loan issued in January 1908, and £500,000 by raising India bills. The difference between the total of these items and the net disbursements will be met by drawing on the cash balances of the Secretary of State, which are estimated to stand at £3,759,012, on 31st March 1909.

203. The six months' India Bills for £1,000,000 issued in October 1907 will be renewed twice during 1908-1909 and a fresh issue of £500,000 will be made.

207. The programme herein announced of the probable drawings on India, and of the transactions in connection with the Government Sterling Debt and the borrowings of Railway Companies, represents the present intentions of the Secretary of State. But in view of the varying conditions of Indian finance and of the London money market, no assurance can be given that this programme will be adhered to either in amount or in form. The Secretary of State reserves to himself the right to vary the programme to any extent that may be considered necessary during the course of the year. The estimate of Council drawings is for the amount necessary to provide for the Secretary of State's requirements, but additional Bills will as usual be sold if needed to meet the demands of trade.

* The figures under heads 2 and 14 (a) balance each other.

† Head 12 represents expenditure defrayed by reduction of Provincial balances.

‡ The figures shown under head 15 differ from those given in the Home Treasury Ways and Means statement, as Bills drawn by the Secretary of State towards the end of one year are paid in India in the next. The figures of the present statement represent payments in India.

209. In the Budget Estimate of 1907-1908, the cash balance in Indian Treasuries on 1st April 1907 was taken at 16,68 lakhs. It was estimated (1) that the net Imperial revenue in India would amount to 27,84 lakhs, (2) that the net deposits in Saving Banks and Provident Institutions would increase during the year by 1,03 lakhs, (3) that 71 lakhs would be available from the Famine Insurance Grant for the avoidance of debt, (4) that the remittance transactions of Railway Companies would result in a net credit in India of 3,89 lakhs, and (5) that 25 lakhs of silver bullion purchased in England in 1906-1907 would be added to the Treasury balances in India. On the other hand, provision was made (1) for a net expenditure of 78 lakhs from Provincial balances, (2) for Capital expenditure in India on Railways and Canals to the extent of 6,59 lakhs, (3) for a net payment of 5 lakhs to Railway Companies, (4) for payments of 13, 12 and 2 lakhs in connection with the discharge of permanent debt, local loans and miscellaneous deposit transactions respectively, and (5) for payments of Council Bills to the extent of 27,15 lakhs. The payments mentioned aggregated 34,84 lakhs, and as the receipts amounted to 33,72 there was a deficiency of 1,12 lakhs. To meet this deficiency and to strengthen the cash balances which had been seriously reduced towards the end of 1906-1907 by the heavy drawings of the Secretary of State, it was proposed to raise a rupee loan of 3 crores.

210. The results according to the Revised Estimate show considerable variations from this forecast. The actual opening balance on 1st April 1907 fell short of the estimate by 1,19 lakhs in consequence of exceptionally large telegraphic transfers drawn by the Secretary of State at the end of the year. The famine has been primarily responsible for decreased receipts and increased expenditure under a number of heads: the net Imperial revenue in India being now estimated at 71 lakhs less than the Budget Estimate, while the expenditure from Provincial balances will be 76 lakhs more. As effects of the same cause, the net deposits in Savings Banks and the amount available for appropriation for the avoidance of debt will be less by 26 and 33 lakhs, respectively, while the payments on account of loans to cultivators, etc., will be more by 1,99 lakhs. Capital expenditure in India on Railways and Irrigation Works is expected to exceed the estimate by 3,57 lakhs, partly owing to short expenditure in England and partly in consequence of the additional grant of 1,50 lakhs sanctioned by the Secretary of State during the year. In part payment for silver purchases, a net remittance of 3,60 lakhs has been made from India to England through the Currency Department in consequence of the slackness in the demand for Council Bills; and the payments in connection with deposit and miscellaneous remittance transactions will be more than the Budget forecast by 60 lakhs. A reduction of 50 lakhs was also made in the amount of the rupee loan which it was contemplated in the Budget Estimate to raise during the year. The total deterioration from all these sources will amount to 13,51 lakhs. On the other hand, the slackness in the demand for Council Bills will lead to a diminution of 4,33 lakhs in the payments budgeted under this head; the receipts of silver purchased in England by the Secretary of State will be more by 6,61 lakhs; the net credits from remittances of Railway Companies will exceed the Budget Estimate by 94 lakhs; a sum of 1,69 lakhs will be received as the moiety of profits on the new rupee coinage during the year, which it has been decided to appropriate to railway construction; and the net payments to Railway Companies on account of Capital outlay are 35 lakhs less than the estimate. The total improvements mentioned above amount to 13,92 lakhs against a total deterioration of 13,51 lakhs. The cash balance on 31st March 1908 is therefore now expected to be 41 lakhs better than the figure entered in the Budget Estimate.

211. In paragraph 266 of the last Financial Statement it was announced, subject to the usual reservations, that a new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent rupee loan of 3 crores would be raised in 1907-1908. The loan was announced in July last, but in view of the large improvement that was then expected in the revenue receipts and also of the stringency prevailing in the money market, tenders were invited for a reduced amount of two-and-a-half crores of rupees only. Tenders were opened on the 17th July, and the result of the loan was as follows:—

Total amount tendered.	Amount accepted.	Average rate of accepted tenders.			Minimum rate accepted.

Main features of Budget Estimate.

212. In 1908-1909, the net Imperial revenue in India is estimated at 27,84 lakhs. It is hoped that a sum of 1,00 lakhs will be available for Railway construction out of the coinage profits likely to be realised during the year. Savings Bank deposits are expected to yield a net receipt of 68 lakhs; a sum of 37½ lakhs, representing the total of the amounts deposited by Local Governments with the Imperial Government as a reserve for meeting future expenditure on famine relief (vide paragraphs 48 to 57 of the last Financial Statement), will be available for the avoidance of debt; and the remittance and capital transactions of Railway Companies are likely to result in a net credit in India of 6,74 lakhs. On the other hand, provision has been made: (1) for an expenditure of 79 lakhs from Provincial balances; (2) for capital expenditure of 9,69 lakhs in India on Railways and Canals; (3) for payments of 13,31, and 14 lakhs in connection with the ~~the~~ charge of permanent debt, local loans and miscellaneous deposit and remittance transactions, respectively; (4) for a remittance of 2,25 lakhs to the Secretary of State through the Currency Department; and (5) for payment of Council Bills to the extent of about 26,98½ lakhs. The payments mentioned aggregate 40,29½ lakhs and as the receipts come to 36,63½ lakhs the net disbursements amount to 3,66 lakhs.

1908-1909.

New Rupee Loan.

213. It is proposed to meet 3 crores out of the net disbursement of 3,66 lakhs by raising a new rupee loan for that amount in 1908-1909, the remaining 66 lakhs being met by drawing upon the cash balances. It is thus expected to close the year with a balance of 18,30 lakhs. The announcement now made regarding the rupee loan is in accordance with present intentions; but full liberty is reserved, as usual, to vary the programme now announced to any extent that may be considered desirable.

A net deposit in the Post Office Savings Banks of 30 lakhs apart from interest was assumed in the Budget Estimate of the current year. The transactions of the first ten months of the year have, however, resulted in a net increase in the deposits of about 17 lakhs only, large withdrawals having taken place since October last in consequence of the famine. Heavy withdrawals are also expected in the closing months of the year for a similar reason, and it is now estimated that during the year 1907-1908, apart from interest, there will be a net increase of 3 lakhs only in the Post Office Savings Banks deposits and of 12 lakhs in those of the other institutions classed under this head.

In the Budget Estimate for 1908-1909, a total net deposit of 4 lakhs, apart from interest, has been assumed; the figure being intentionally low in consequence of the prevalence of famine.

Section VIII.—Summary.

215 The principal features in this statement are the following —

I—The Accounts of 1906-1907 closed with an Imperial surplus of £1,589,340, being £263,240 more than the surplus expected in the Revised Estimates of that year

II—1907-1908 —

(1) The Revised Estimates show a total Revenue of £70,989,200, a total Expenditure charged to Revenue of £70,753,800, and an Imperial surplus of £235,400. This surplus is less than that of the Budget Estimate by £539,200

(2) The transactions of local funds (except a few funds which are being absorbed in Imperial or Provincial revenues) will be excluded from the general accounts from the 1st April 1908. The Budget and the Revised Estimates for the current year have been re-arranged so as to give retrospective effect to this change. The absorption of certain minor funds has resulted in a small reduction (£100) in the surplus of £774,700 shown in the original Budget Estimate

(3) The failure of the monsoon has necessitated Famine Relief expenditure (£516,000) and a heavy reduction (£1,701,100) in the estimates of Land Revenue. In the United Provinces alone, the decrease is £945,300

Railway net Receipts also show a heavy decline (£725,400). The increase of Working Expenses has exceeded the growth of Earnings by reason of heavy expenditure on renewals and repairs. The Madras Railway—the last of the old guaranteed lines—was purchased by the Government with effect from the 1st January 1908

Forests and Exchange have contributed £148,100 and £73,300, respectively towards the total diminution of Revenue; and there have been smaller decreases under Tributes and Military receipts

The Customs Revenue (£4,964,000) has been unprecedentedly high being better than the Budget anticipation by £368,500. The increase over the receipts of 1906-1907 has been greatest under cotton manufactures (£142,400), spirits and liqueurs (£94,800) and manufactured articles (£91,000)

The improvement in Opium Revenue is £371,800 of which £302,000 is due to Bengal opium having been sold at an average of Rs 1350 per chest as against Rs 1250 taken in the Budget. The exports of Malwa opium have exceeded expectation

The great demand for bronze coin and the issue of the new one-anna nickel have yielded a profit of £226,700 as against £66,700 budgeted for. The renewal of dollar coinage and the heavy coinage of rupees in the earlier part of the year have also contributed towards the total increase of £192,700 in Mint receipts

The Salt Revenue shows marked progress. The increase of £46,900 over the Budget would have been larger but for exceptionally heavy clearances between the 20th and 31st March 1907 consequent on the reduction of duty. The other heads under which the Budget has been substantially exceeded are Stamps, Minor Irrigation Works and Assessed Taxes with increases of £67,700, £64,500 and £49,200 respectively

(4) A new principle has been adopted for distributing the gross Interest charges between the Railway, Irrigation and Ordinary Debt which reduces largely the disproportionate burden of interest hitherto borne by the accounts of railways and productive irrigation works. The increase in the gross interest charges (£149,100) is due mainly to the discount and higher rate ($3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent) of the sterling loans of the year.

Of the total charge of £516,000 for Famine Relief, £220,700 has been met from the Budget provision for Reduction or Avoidance of Debt.

There is a large excess (£115,600) over the Budget in Civil Works expenditure, which is partly due to the development of the public works programme to provide employment for labour in famine tracts. Military expenditure (including ~~marine~~ ^{army}) is £758,600 less than the Budget, owing mainly to smaller payments to the War Office, and to a slower rate of progress with re-organization and other special measures. The Revised Estimate under Army includes £50,000 for the Bazar Valley Field Force.

The Opium expenditure is short of the Budget provision by £141,600, as a result of the contraction in the poppy area. Political shows a saving of £119,700 attributable to smaller drawings of His Majesty the Amir's subsidy.

- (5) The balances of the United Provinces having been largely depleted as a consequence of famine, a special assignment of £218,100 has been entered in the Revised Estimate to raise the closing Provincial balance to its prescribed minimum. Other special assignments are £61,700 to Bombay and £7,500 to the Central Provinces to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlements, £38,300 to the Punjab in respect of a similar guarantee for Irrigation revenue, £33,300 to Madras for tank restoration works, and £66,700 to Burma, as the first instalment of the Imperial contribution towards the cost of the Rangoon river training scheme.

- (6) A $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent loan of two and a half crores of rupees was raised in India; and two issues of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent India stock were made in England. The first, in accordance with the Budget programme, was for £3,500,000; but in January last a further loan of £5,000,000 was effected, partly in anticipation of the requirements of next year. Of the latter, £746,000 will be received after the 31st March 1908. In addition, India Bills for £1,000,000 were issued in lieu of capital estimated to be raised by various Railway Companies. The sterling loans enabled £634,700 to be applied towards the discharge of debentures of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and the Madras Railway.

- (7) Owing to stringency in the London money market, only £2,248,000 of fresh capital was raised by Railway Companies, as against £3,840,400 entered in the Budget Estimate.

- (8) In consequence of the drop in exchange during the latter half of the year, the drawings of Council Bills in 1907-1908 are expected to amount to only £15,814,000, as compared with £18,100,000 entered in the Budget; the former figure is exclusive of £530,000 drawn for remittance to the Gold Standard Reserve. £3,325,000 have been drawn from the Currency Reserve Gold, in part payment of the silver bought by Government for coinage purposes.

- (9) The Gold Standard Reserve on the 31st March 1908 stands at £18,355,300.

III.—1908-1909:—

- (1) The Budget Estimate of 1908-1909 shows a total Revenue of £73,438,900, a total expenditure charged to Revenue of £72,867,400, and an Imperial surplus of £571,500.

- (2) Provision has been made for special grants to Local Governments of £200,000 and £80,000 in aid of Sanitation and additional Police reforms, respectively. The annual grant for special Military expenditure has been taken at £1,666,700 only, as against £1,983,300 in the Budget of 1907-1908.

- (3) Compared with the Revised Estimate of the current year, Land Revenue (excluding the portion due to Irrigation) shows an increase of £1,435,200, of which £767,800 is in the United Provinces, £417,900 in Bombay and £193,000 in Burma. The famine necessitated exceptionally heavy remissions and suspensions this year. The estimates of 1908-1909 are based on the assumption that the next monsoon will be normal.

The purchase this year of the Madras Railway increases the gross receipts and working expenses of State Railways next year by £845,300 and £606,700, respectively. A total increase of £1,031,800 in the net receipts of State Railways is expected.

In view of the prevailing scarcity, the growth of Excise receipts is taken at £194,600 only. An increase of £126,400 is expected under Stamps. The assumption of a year of normal crops in the Punjab chiefly has caused an increase of £192,300 under Irrigation.

The Salt Budget anticipates an increase in consumption of approximately 2,900,000 maunds. But the increase of revenue is taken at £65,300 only, owing to the operation of the credit system in Madras.

Under Customs the increase is small (£36,300 only), as the growth of the import duties has been extraordinarily large this year, and no appreciable increase of the export duty on rice can be expected while famine prevails.

Opium revenue shows a decrease of £380,000. In view of the restriction of the trade with China, the number of chests of Bengal and Malwa opium to be exported have been taken at 45,900 and 15,100, respectively. The average sale price of Bengal opium has been taken at R1,300 per chest, as against R1,350 obtained in the current year.

Other important decreases of Revenue are under Mint (£165,900), due to smaller coinage of new rupees and bronze; and under Military Services (£129,900), the result largely of the discontinuance of the supply by the State of malt liquor to the troops.

- 1) The direct expenditure on Famine Relief is estimated at £880,500, of which £666,700 is in the United Provinces.

Police and Medical expenditure show increases of £301,100 and £280,000, of which £80,000 and £200,000 represent provision for expenditure against the special Imperial grants for additional police reforms and sanitation, respectively [vide paragraph III (2)].

Under Military Services, there is an increase of £233,900 in spite of a decrease of £40,200 under Marine. These variations are explained in Appendix II.

The only important decreases of expenditure are under Civil Works (£224,700), Opium (£175,600), and Miscellaneous (£177,900). In the first case, retrenchment is largely due to the depletion of the Provincial balances in some of the provinces. Under Opium, the decrease is due partly to the poor outturn of last winter's crop, and partly to the further restriction of the poppy-growing area.

The purchase of the Madras Railway causes a decrease of £600,100 under Guaranteed Companies and an increase of £398,800 under Annuities in purchase of Railways. The total annuity in purchase of the undertaking is £553,397, but the Budget provides for the exchange of a part of this for new stock of the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, and for the payment next year of three-quarters of the reduced annuity plus a half-year's annuity to holders who exchange.

- (5) The Budget includes special Land Revenue assignments of £43,100 and £98,800 to the United Provinces to make up the minimum amount of Land Revenue guaranteed under the Provincial Settlement and to avoid a minus Provincial balance at the close of 1908-1909, respectively.
- (6) Subject to the approval of His Majesty's Secretary of State, the Provincial Settlements of Madras and the United Provinces have been revised so as to place at the disposal of the Local Governments a larger share of the heads of revenue which are ordinarily divided between Imperial and Provincial. Particulars of the changes will be found in Section VI.
- (7) Subject to the usual reservation, a loan of 3 crores of rupees in India is announced. This is intended for Capital expenditure on Railways and Productive Irrigation Works. Of the sterling loan of £5,000,000 announced in January last, £746,000 will be realised after the 31st March 1908. Provision has also been made for renewing twice in 1908-1909 the India Bills of £1,000,000 which were issued with a six months' currency in October 1907 for a fresh temporary loan of £500,000 in England, and for the discharge of Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway debentures, of which £865,800 mature next year.
- (8) Subject to the usual reservations provision is also made for the raising of Capital through Railway Companies as follows namely for outlay on Companies' Railways £1,013,900, and for expenditure on purchased Railways £3,900,000.
- (9) Drawings of Council Bills are entered at £18,500,000, and provision has been made for the withdrawal of £1,500,000 from the Currency Chest in London, against an equivalent transfer from Treasury to Currency in India.
